REAL ESTATE

Professional home inspections: well worth the cost

Since buying a home is probably the single largest investment most people will ever make, the $200 to $500 expense of a professional home inspection is well worth the cost, advises Patricia Donahue, president of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors.

"It's important to know as much as you can about the home you are about to purchase, and the best way to ensure thorough, competent information is to hire the services of a professional home inspector before you sign a sales contract," says Donahue. The higher cost of homes and financing today has increased the consumers' need to know the expense of necessary major repairs prior to commitment. Thus professional home inspection services are growing in popularity.

So how do you find a qualified home inspector? Carefully, suggests Donahue. Begin by asking the real estate professional who is helping with the sales transaction to provide you with a list of recommended inspectors. Then, ask the following questions before making your final selection:

1. Does the inspector belong to the American Society of Home Inspectors (ASHI), a local inspection association, or any other professional organization. ASHI, the leading national professional organization of independent home inspectors, has a set of home inspection guidelines, which its members must follow, known as the ASHI Standards of Practice. Also, members of ASHI must subscribe to a set of principles contained in the Society's Code of Ethics which require a high degree of integrity and professionalism in order to assure the consumer of a completely objective inspection.

2. How long has the inspector been in business as a home inspector? ASHI members, for example, must perform 250 paid professional home inspections before qualifying for membership.

3. Is the inspector specifically experienced in residential construction? An inspector needs the knowledge and insight gained from actual home inspection experience to be able to spot and interpret signs of age, damage, faulty or unsafe mechanical operation.

4. Is the company free of any repair or real estate connections that might cause a conflict of interest? Avoid inspectors who use the inspection to solicit repair work for themselves or any particular contractor, as well as those who receive a portion of the real estate commission on the sale of the house.

5. How long will the inspection take? The average time is 1-1/2 to 2-1/2 hours. Anything less is not enough time to do a thorough inspection.

6. What will the inspection include? Get specifics. The inspection should include the electrical, heating and central air conditioning systems; interior plumbing; visible insulation; roof; walls; ceilings; floors; windows; doors; foundation; basement; and the visible structure of the house.

7. How much will it cost? The average cost is $250, but it can range from $200 to $500.

8. Does the inspector encourage the client to attend the inspection? The home inspection is an important opportunity for buyers to get an education about their new home and to have their questions answered immediately. The information will help you after you've moved in. Qualified inspectors often offer maintenance tips to extend the life of the house and its major systems.

10. Does the inspector participate in continuing education programs to keep his or her expertise up to date? A competent inspector is familiar with the latest materials, building techniques and equipment. He or she should always be learning about the ways in which a home's components and systems affect each other and how they stand the test of time.

HOME BUYER OF THE MONTH
Maureen & Bill Fahey

The Faheys just bought the "House of Their Dreams", in Hanover, after living in Milton for 13 years.

They began the process tentatively by submitting their names at the Home Show, but it wasn't until a South Shore Realtor subsequently contacted them that they actively began their search. Maureen and Bill worked exclusively with their agent, viewing 30-40 homes; both emphasized how helpful and informative her services proved to be.

They particularly relied on her expertise for such crucial issues as home inspection, lead paint, mortgage and commuting options. They say they would absolutely advise their friends to use the services of a Realtor and both agreed it was a very comfortable experience.

Barn celebrates summer art

The Barn at Bound Brook presents the original work of eight artists to celebrate the summer season.

An opening reception to "Meet the Artist" is at the Barn on Thursday evening, July 2, from 6 to 8 p.m.

Philip Flaherty, of Pembroke, an acrylic painter of still life, presents a collection of American relics of the past.

Carolyn Stewart Harvey of Marshfield displays her oils and acrylics featuring the lure of the ocean, old houses and the intrigue of one of America's favorite pastimes "The Flea Market."

Frederick Lawrence of Scituate shows his oils in still life and trompe d'oil. His subjects are American Antique objects.

Diane Panarelli Miller, a Quincy resident, shows her oils, which will include local seascapes, still life, and a scene of a Boston favorite "The Swan Boats."

Edward Minchin, born and educated in Essex, England, now lives in Rockland, Mass. His paintings lean toward the semi-abstract. He works in transparent watercolor as well as opaque and transparent acrylics.

Patricia Rusconi, a watercolorist from Weymouth and Maine, shows her landscapes from the South Shore to the coast of Maine.

Thomas Rebek of Boston portrays his love of Boston with watercolor scenes of Faneuil Hall, the Boston skyline and the Public Gardens.

Marcia Wilhelm, Duxbury, displays her acrylic paintings. Her landscapes and seascapes are inspired by the beauty of her Duxbury surroundings.

'The Steaming Kettle' a watercolor by Thomas Rebek is on display at the Barn at Bound Brook off Rte. 3A.

Band concert, June 27

The Cohasset Recreation Department holds summer concerts at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, July 14, and Aug. 11.

Performing will be the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Concerts are free of charge and open to the public. Please bring lawn chair or blanket and insect repellent.

Funding for the 1992 Band Concerts has been provided through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc., and a matching grant from the American Federation of Musicians, New York City.

Music Circus registrations

The Cohasset Recreation Department conducts registration for children's Music Circus performances from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. this evening (Thursday, July 2) at the recreation office.

Registration is for "Sleeping Beauty" (show date Monday, July 13), and tickets are $4 per child.

Please note that the Music Circus children's performances are on Mondays this year.

The next registration is Thursday, July 9, for "Pinocchio," (show date Monday July 20).

Drug survey: wake-up call to community

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Nearly 73 percent of all Cohasset students in grades 11 and 12 have been drunk in the last year, according to the results of the American Drug and Alcohol survey administered in the schools by health education coordinator Michael Gill in January.

Gill obtained the results of those surveys, and last week he sent them to the parents of all students who will be in grades seven through 12 next year — the same student group who responded to the survey in January.

He presented the results to the school committee Monday, and said they reflect a drug and alcohol problem at the schools.

"We have a lot of work to do, however. Cohasset is not atypical at all," he explained.

Ninety-two percent of the students participated in the survey, Gill noted.

According to the survey, 40 percent of all students in grades 11 and 12 who responded said they had passed out from alcohol consumption, while 50 percent said they "couldn't remember what happened due to alcohol."

Gill considered the high percentage of students citing loss of consciousness and memory as a consequence of drinking among the most alarming results of the survey.

An alcohol-related memory-loss problem was not specific to only the older students.

Residents, assessors reach settlement

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The town and 55 Cohasset property taxpayers have settled their differences out of court — a move that will save both sides money, officials say.

The affected homeowners will receive about $86,000 in property tax relief for FY'90 and FY'91, Assistant Assessor Appraiser Joseph DeVito said.

In exchange, the group — which is called Concerned Citizens — agreed not to contest their FY'92 valuations.

And under state statute, the town will not have to defend each case individually — a move that could cost the town more than $120,000 in legal fees, said James W. Lagrotteria, chairman of the board of

Cohasset police officer injured in line of duty

A Cohasset police officer is still out with facial wounds after being injured in the line of duty last week.

Officer Lisa Matos was struck in the face by a man who allegedly raped a Cohasset woman July 1.

Matos and fellow Officer John Small arrived at the woman's apartment after responding to a call for help, Chief Joseph M. Kealey said.

The alleged assailant met the officers at the door; he punched Matos in the face and shoved Small, who pursued him on foot, Kealey said. Small was not injured.

Police issued a warrant for the arrest of Robert A. Jason, 31, charging him with aggravated rape; burglary and assault in a dwelling; and assault and battery on a police officer (two counts).

Jason's last known address is Hull; although his driver's license gives a Marshfield address, where he hasn't been in 20 years, according to relative of the suspect, Kealey said.

Police found a citation issued by Cohasset police on the seat of the car that Jason — who is still at large — drove to the scene. Kealey said the car did not belong to Jason but to an acquaintance.

Police said the suspect gave the victim a ride home from a Hull bar. After dropping her off, the assailant returned, forced his way into to her apartment and raped her.

The victim, who was treated at South

Philanthropy knows no boundaries for 42-year-old Dr. Andrew Merliss, director of the Cardiac Care Unit at South Shore Hospital.

Merliss, who moved to Cohasset ten months ago, is preparing once again to travel abroad to loan his medical expertise to a third-world country.

The altruistic doctor said he enjoys sharing the medical knowledge he has with those less-fortunate.

"I have always been very thankful for the incredible medical education made available to me," he said.

"It's amazing what you see in other countries in terms of rank poverty and the lack of medical care and facilities."

Merliss has been a South Shore Hospital Cardiologist since 1981.

Project Pacer, a non-profit organization which transports American-trained physicians to under-developed countries, recruited Merliss for its first trip five years ago.

A friend and colleague called him in 1986 and asked him to be part of the first trip to South America.

Merliss agreed and he has been making annual trips ever since.

Rec. wants backstop

The recreation commission is concerned the baseball backstop won't be replaced at the Deer Hill School field.

Recreation Commission Chairman Richard Barrow said, "we want to keep it as a multi-purpose field."

Barrow said the backstop was taken down recently and hasn't been replaced.

The field has undergone repairs after the installation of a new septic system at the school site.

Deer Hill School Principal Ken Ekberg said there isn't room for a permanent backstop the way the field is now laid out.

If a permanent backstop were installed, there wouldn't be room for soccer and lacrosse games, he said.

However, Ekberg said he has been in touch with John Carr, president of Cohasset Little League and was told that Little League would provide portable backstops if needed.

"Portable ones can be put on the field as it exists now and two Little League cames can go on simultaneously," he said.

Barrow said the recreation commission asked town counsel for an opinion as to which town department has jurisdiction over the field. After perusing town reports, Barrow said he feels the recreation department may have use and control over the field because town reports state the recreation department has control over all recreational areas in town.

Barrow said the recreation commission has not heard from town counsel on the matter.

Selectmen said Monday, they planned to send a letter to the school department stating their concern that the field should be available for more than just soccer.

At their meeting, selectmen said the school department has jurisdiction over the field.

In a memo to selectmen, Ekberg praised town departments and citizens "who have given unselfishly of their time, energy and money" toward field repairs.

"It is noteworthy that the spirit of collaboration within and among town departments continues to be conciliatory and cooperative," he said.

Senior citizens Mary E. Grassie and Charlotte Leland enjoy a new resting spot in Elm Street Park between the police/fire station and Hub Shipping. Friends of the Cohasset Council on Aging provided funding for the redwood bench which was hand-crafted by Ray Sargent. The idea for the bench came from Charlotte who thought it would enhance the town to provide a place for seniors, mothers, and caretakers of young children, and others to rest going to and coming from the village. Friends' member Libby Pompeo assisted in the effort, and tree and park Supt. Peter Laugelle provided installation.

Legal bills approved

Selectmen approved payment of the following legal bills:

• $2,658.13 for general expenses from June 1 -30, 1992; $240 for zoning matters; and $630 for foreclosure matters to town counsel Richard A. Henderson.

• $9,525.28 to labor counsel (the firm of McGowan, Ingel, Tucker, Garret &Schultz) for six months. Selectmen will ask the firm to submit bills quarterly because they said every six months is not adequate.

Customer service input

The fire department seeks input from customers to gauge the quality of ambulance service in town.

In a memo to ambulance customers, Fire Chief John Nadeau says the fire department's "mission is to provide (customers) with fast, clean, friendly, professional ambulance services at an exceptional value.

"(The customer's) opinion is important to us in measuring our achievement of that mission."

The questionnaire asks for customer input on a range of services including the professionalism of the dispatcher; response time; whether the EMTs and firefighters were professional, caring and concerned; and whether the fire department was caring, concerned and supportive of family members and considerate of personal property.

In the questionnaire, Nadeau also notes that private ambulance services can cost as much as $700 a run. The questionnaire asks if the user if he feels the town fee is an exceptional value.

The average bill for a run to South Shore Hospital is $185.

P & G helps Vo-Tech

The Procter and Gamble company will again support the industrial technology program at the South Shore Vocational Technical High School.

This is the second year the company has provided $120,000 to cover the funding of three teachers, equipment and supplies. Unspent funds of $15,000 were turned back into the program for the upcoming year as well, according to acting Supt. Richard Burgess.

Two of the teachers work with Vo-Tech students and one with P & G employees.

"It worked out very well. It's a good partnership between education and business. It's a good thing for them and a good thing for us," Burgess said.

Announced at the Vo-Tech school board meeting was the outcome of the Chrysler-AAA Trouble-shoot held in Detroit. Two Vo-Tech students took first place in the state competition and become eligible to compete at the national level.

Acting Chief appointed

Selectmen unanimously appointed police Sgt. Brian Noonan as acting police chief, July 15-19, while Police Chief Joseph M. Kealey is on vacation.

Kealey recommended Noonan as acting chief per the existing police collective bargaining contract.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

HOMEOWNER TAX WINNER

QUESTION: How does the homeowner fare under the latest rules?

ANSWER: In the midst of drastic cutbacks in investment preferences everywhere else thanks to the Tax Reform Act, owners of first and second homes are doing well.

Deductibility of mortgage interest and property taxes for primary and second homes remains completely intact. This is often the largest tax deduction for most homeowners and will continue to be so. Also intact are the rules that allow you to defer tax on the profit when you sell if you roll it over into another home and the $125,000 tax exclusion from profit if you are over age 55.

Residents, assessors settle . . .

The process began when in the spring of 1990, when angry homeowners from the town's waterfront area squared off with assessors and complained that they were saddled with a disproportionate share of the property tax burden.

Property owners recognized a disproportion between the FY'90 assessed valuation of their properties and the increase in general value of properties through sales made in the previous three years, said Attorney David Weltman, a member of Concerned Citizens, whose law firm represented the homeowners.

After the property owners' appeals were denied at the local level, they filed petitions before the state appellate tax board for FY'90 through FY'92.

And although the cases were settled out of court so technically nothing is proved, Weltman said the settlement is "a victory" for the homeowners.

"Nothing proved, means nobody lost in the formal sense," he said.

But, Weltman explained, the fact that a class of taxpayers say the same factor is prevalent in all cases made the tax assessments unfair across the board.

Weltman said the group performed an analysis through a computer program and found in 1986 to 1989 the market value increased by a factor of 1.6 percent.

"But our valuations were up from 1.8 to 2.4 percent," he said.

The town will use the overlay account to pay the abatements, DeVito said.

The overlay account contains money the town sets aside for the purpose of paying property tax abatements and exemptions.

DeVito said the 55 homeowners brought a total of 75 cases. Each homeowner will receive an average of $1,000, he said.

The property owners did not file for FY'92 because the town reduced land valuations across the board by 20 percent to reflect what was currently happening to values, Weltman said.

DeVito said the payments will create a deficit in the overlay account for FY'90. He explained there is a projected surplus in the FY'92 overlay account. The board of assessors can release enough money out of the FY'92 account to cover the deficit, but a special town meeting is required to appropriate the money, DeVito said.

Cohasset is currently undergoing a town-wide revaluation, he said. The revaluation will be based on calendar year 1991 sales and should reflect the change in the market, he said.

Weltman said the group is "waiting breathlessly" for the new assessments.

Lagrotteria says doesn't anticipate any problems with the new valuations.

He said the department is now fully on computer.

"In the past three years we've come into the 21st Century," he said. "It's an entirely different ball game with the computer-assisted mass appraisal program."

Tall ships . . .

At the request of the Coast Guard, Hingham will also be assisting the U.S. Coast Guard Group Boston in search and rescue during the entire event, Buotte said.

Scituate's Coast Guard station sent its 41-foot utility boat and a 22-foot Boston whaler to the Point Allerton station in Hull July 8 in anticipation of heavy traffic in and around Boston Harbor.

The craft will remain on duty there until after the fleet of 200 tall ships departs Boston July 16 for the final leg of their six week journey from Cadiz, Spain.

The crew manning the Scituate station will rely on the 44-foot self-righting motor lifeboat and a new 21-foot rigid hull inflatable boat christened July 6.

"Normally we only have enough crew to run one or two boats so there will be no noticeable difference in our operational capacity," said Mains.

Pooler said he will have an extra man on for weekend nights to patrol the coast in one of the department's three boats, and Burgess said both the Marshfield harbormaster and North and South River Watershed Association boats will patrol the ocean and rivers.

The Coast Guard Auxiliary also will be on hand to lend additional services.

Scituate is responsible for covering from the town line on Humarock Beach to Minot Light in Cohasset. Marshfield covers Humarock south to Gurnet Point on the Duxbury-Plymouth town line.

Both departments carry de-watering pumps to assist foundering vessels. Scituate also regularly tows disabled craft.

Although Cohasset harbormaster Irving Gadow isn't expecting anything out of the ordinary during Sail Boston, he said Cohasset would pick up any extra search and rescue cases should the Coast Guard boats be tied up.

He said because of the shoaling in Cohasset harbor — which makes it difficult for boaters not familiar with the harbor — he is not expecting an influx of transient vessels during the festivities.

According to Pooler, the Coast Guard approached the Massachusetts Harbormasters Association in January, informing them of the need for an increased safety and law enforcement presence during the festival.

Several tall ships will stop in Plymouth July 16, launching a four-day Festival of Sail before continuing on to their home ports.

The Mayflower II will lead the nautical parade which will include the H.M.S. Rose, Sir Francis Drake, Windsong and Saltna II.

The event is expected to attract as many as a million tourists to Boston's waterfront and net thousands of sea faring spectators.

"We have been preparing and training for this weekend up to the 15 of July, and we have adequate personnel," Burgess said.

"There are budget considerations, but we will make sure we do what it takes to ensure the public's safety."

Rape . . .

Shore Hospital, managed to break free and call the operator, who alerted Cohasset police.

Police said police from Hull and Hingham helped in the search which went on for several hours. A track dog from the Plymouth Country Sheriff's Dept. was also called in, Kealey said.

The Norfolk County rape unit also responded to the scene, police said.

Kealey said Officer Matos "is doing very well" although he hasn't seen a full medical report on her injuries because of the facial swelling involved.

Jason is white, 5'8" to 5'11" tall and has a stocky build. Anyone with information about his whereabouts, can call the Cohasset police at 383-1055.

Engineering services paid

Selectmen approved payment of the following bills:

• $1440 to Civil Designs Inc. for engineering services regarding beach/highway repairs.

• $975 to Ernest W. Branch, Inc. for survey work on a strip of land at Bancroft and Norfolk Roads that town meeting voted to sell. Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said payment would come out of legal expenses and once the land is sold, the buyer would reimburse the town.

• $1225 to Iaria Bros. for Deerhill Field renovations. Money comes out of a gift account.

Cardiologist exports expertise . . .

second time Project Pacer has sent him to India.

His five other trips were to Bolivia, Ecuador and Argentina.

As on the other trips, he will be part of a medical team specializing in installing pace-makers, conducting valvuloplasty — heart valve repair surgery — and training physicians on various cardiology procedures.

Cohasset cardiologist Dr. Andrew Merliss frequently travels to third-world countries with Project Pacer, a non-profit group. Dr. Merliss is part of a medical team that specializes in installing pace-makers and performing heart-value repair surgery to improve the health of the needy overseas.

Manufacturers donate most of the pace-makers used by Project Pacer, Merliss said, while a small number are recycled from former users.

Merliss said he became involved in Project Pacer because he wanted to give something back.

He said most of the countries he visits have a two-tier medical system: one for people with money and one for people without.

His presence helps those who would otherwise be unable to receive life-sustaining treatment.

Although he donates his time to be part of the travelling Pacer medical team, Merliss said it is he who is richer for the experience.

"What I bring back to this country is the realization of the superb facilities we have, and how it is taken for granted."

He added that the trips help him stay grounded.

"If you are not careful, medical training can make an altruistic person very scientific.

"It helps you keep a balance," he said.

Patients' responses to his work is also an uplifting reward of the journey, Merliss said.

"They are more emotive than American patients. They will kiss my hand or give me a gift in thanks.

"People here have expectations of absolute perfection. These people have no expectations," Merliss explained.

He said one of the most endearing displays of gratitude occured the morning after an Argentinean patient received his new pace-maker. He threw off his covers, shouted "Viva USA!" and did a dance in homage to Merliss.

The Pacer team not only improves the health of foreign patients, but enhances their impression of Americans, Merliss said.

"It's good for diplomatic relations.

"Many patients in South America have no idea what we (Americans) are about."

He said he would not be able to make the trips without the cooperation of his wife, Lori.

Lori Merliss, who joined the Newcomers Club shortly after arriving in town, and shares her husband's enthusiam for Cohasset.

"I love Cohasset, and she is delighted with it," he said.

The Merliss' have an 11-month old son.

Just as Merliss' wife cares for their son when he is on a Pacer mission, he said his colleagues care for his patients.

"I couldn't make these trips without them covering for me."

Far from a vacation, Pacer trips typically involve working a 15-hour day, for one to three weeks. He said the team works from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Not only does Merliss, and the other members of the medical team, work for free, they are required to pay for their own air fare and lodgings.

"So all the money from donations goes toward new equipment," he explained.

Merliss' philanthropy was recently recognized by Needham-based Project Pacer: officials gave him the humanitarian award.

If you are not careful, medical training can make an altruistic person, very scientific. It helps keep you balanced,'

New clerk hired for fire department

Jane Henderson, 291 Fair Oaks Lane, is the new senior clerk at the fire department.

The 15-hour-per-week position pays a starting rate of $9.33 an hour, Fire Chief John Nadeau said.

In a letter to Henderson, Nadeau wrote, "I look forward to your help and assistance in administering the department, joining our team.

"Welcome aboard."

Drug facts . . .

Twenty-four percent of students in grades nine and 10 who responded said they had also passed out from alcohol while 26 percent said they couldn't remember what happened as a result of drinking.

Of the seventh- and eighth-grade respondents, five percent said they passed out from alcohol and ninepercent said they couldn't remember what happened due to drinking.

Gill said he is most concerned about the results of the eighth graders.

"The major problem is in the eighth grade," he said.

"This has been a trend for the past three or four years."

Of the students in grades seven and eight who responded to the survey, 48 percent said they had used alcohol in the past year, while 17 percent said they had been drunk during the same time period.

Because of the survey, Gill said student-to-student programs will be expanded.

"The goals for next year are to increase and improve the peer education program, and include the eighth grade," Gill said.

He noted the warped perception students in the junior high have of drug use among the upper classes.

"Seventh-graders perceive that the great majority of kids in 10th, 11th and 12th grade drink and do drugs.

"I'll ask a class, 'Who thinks there is someone in those grades who doesn't drink or do drugs?' Not one hand will go up," Gill said.

The younger students' belief that drug and alcohol use is rampant in the high school is responsible for increasing the likelihood that seventh- and eighth-graders will drink and use drugs, Gill said.

School committee member Ralph Kidder noted that traditional support groups, like family and church, are not as strong in society today as they once were.

"The point is, who is going to socialize those kids?" he asked.

Kidder said the survey results should be used to attract attention to the problem.

"This is a wake-up call to the community."

School Supt. Stephen Hart noted the mixed message the media sends on drugs and alcohol.

"If one is to look at just commercials, they make it look very attractive. They are the extremes.

"You don't see a man neglecting his family because of alcohol," Hart said.

Gill cautioned against equating the poor survey results with an ineffective drug and education program at the schools.

"Look at the figures not as a failure of these programs, but as a need to increase the programs," he said.

There was a positive revelation to the survey: there is little, if any, use of cocaine, crack, ice (methamphetamine) or hallucinogens by the students in the junior and senior high school.

Scouts at Harborfest

Cohasset Scouts visited Grandpa's Attic in the "Discovering Scouting Past and Present" float for the Cohasset Harborfest parade. "Grandpa" (Phil Lehr) sat rocking in his chair displaying scouting memorabilia, while his son Robbie sat attentively watching. The Pack 38 Cub Scouts participating were: Dan Littauer, Tim Baird, Andrew Dennic, Jay Rasmussen, Robbie Lehr, David Krueger, Christopher Carr and David DeVito.

Troop 28 Boy Scouts were represented by John Paul Laugelle, Justin Maitland, Greg Boyne and Kevin DeVito. Two Scouts stood beside a 4'x6' Fleur de Lis carved by Phil Lehr and decorated with his wife Joannie's help.

The creative, artistic ideas of the display theme of "Grandpa's Attic" is credited to Jean Salvadore. Mark Gratta, from the Shrub Place on 3A, lent the decorative blue and gold flowers and mulch to blanket the Fleur de Lis. The trunk, rocking chairs and other "attic treasures" were lent from the 3-A Antiques by Pat Saef and Jack Tullish. David Iaria of Hingham drove the 31' float. Many thanks to those cub parents and friends who assisted, especially the carpentry hours spent by Bob Dennis.

Band concert, July 14

The Cohasset Recreation Department holds summer concerts at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, July 14, and Aug. 11.

Performing will be the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Concerts are free of charge and open to the public. Please bring lawn chair or blanket and insect repellent.

Funding for the 1992 Band Concerts has been provided through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc., and a matching grant from the American Federation of Musicians, New York City.

Register for Pinocchio

Register this evening (Thursday, July 9) for "Pinocchio," (show date Monday July 20 at the Music Circus) from 5 to 7 p.m. at the recreation department office at town hall. Tickets are $4. Please call 383-6791 for more information.

Please note that the Music Circus children's performances are on Mondays this year.

❑ The residents of Bates Lane extend their thanks to Danny and Judy Cellucci for the beautiful rock garden and the rock, that was engraved with Bates Lane. It looks grand, and everyone is so appreciative and thankful!

❑ Boy do we hear wonderful things about Lou Littlehale and her hand-made quilt! Hope all of you have seen it, it is a work of art! Good news, it is made for a raffle, with the proceeds to go to the Second Congregational Church. Raffle tickets are available at the church, be sure to stop and see the art and love that went into making it, the work speaks for itself!

❑ Avon Old Farms School, a four-year preparatory school for boys, located in Avon, Connecticut, held its graduation recently and we salute Timothy Collins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Collins III, who received the Presidential Academic Fitness Award. He will be attending Hamilton College in September.

Jonathan Smith, son of Mrs. Debra A. Smith, will be attending the University of Vermont in September.

Derek Lacks

❑ We salute Derek Michael Lacks (Magna Cum Laude) of 37 Old Coach Rd., who was awarded the bachelors degree in Business Administration from Providence College. He was among 917 graduates!

Good luck in the business world!

❑ Let's hear it for Jon Paul Lacks and Jeffrey Watson, both of whom completed the Great Mass. Getaway North, June 27-28.

The event consists of a 150-mile bicycle tour from Haverhill to Durham, NH and back again for the benefit of the National Multiple Sclerosis society.

Jon and Jeff were very busy in June training for the ride and finding sponsors who were willing to make a pledge. Although the weather was quite warm throughout the weekend, these two ironmen managed to finish in good standing.

For those of you who would like to pledge, donations are accepted until July 20. Please call 383-1598 and join the battle against multiple sclerosis!

❑ Ralph Harrison, R.Ph., Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy, 7 South Main Street, recently attended a pharmacy seminar providing the pharmacist with: various patient counseling techniques, methods by which the patient may be more compliant with prescription medications and physician's orders, and ways by which the pharmacist will be in compliance with new regulations. The seminar was held at the Newton Marriott Hotel and was sponsored by the Boston Association of Retail Druggists.

❑ Benjamin Dean, son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Dean , graduated from Kent School in a Prize Day ceremony June 7.

Benjamin will matriculate at the University of Denver in the fall, and we certainly wish him well.

❑ This Friday, July 10, marks a special day for all of us, that is the date that Staff Sgt. and Mrs. Ralph A. Fisher of 40 Norfolk Road return home to Cohasset after 20 years of military service, including the Gulf War and Germany.

We certainly send you a hero's welcome, and thank you for serving your country (that's US) and we salute you. Welcome Home.

❑ Congratulations to Cohasset's own Nathan Fiore, who was selected and qualified for the 1992 Massachusetts USA Wrestling team. He is a part of an elite group who will represent Massachusetts at the U.S. Junior Olympic National championships, to be held later this month in St. Paul, MN. Last spring as a junior at Cohasset High, Nathan finished second in the state and sixth in New England.

If you or your company wish to be a sponsor, let him know.

Best of Luck Nate! Let us know all about it upon your return.

❑ Good news for anyone who has dreamt of a fish garden or water pond with all of the proper equipment, call Doug Drysdale, he can do it for you. Doug is a 1991 CHS grad, and just beginning his business. He does have his own fish pond for you to look at.

Call him at 383-6043 or 383-6661.

❑ Made a huge error last week, and now is the time to say so. Peter Ferenz is the student at Nick Bolletteri's Tennis Academy in Bradenton, Fl. Peter is learning a lot of tennis, and trying hard to ignore all of the snakes and lizards that are all over the place. When Peter comes home, he hopes to join the CHS Tennis Team, not Nick Bolletteri (shows you how much I know about tennis, right?) ... he will be a star, we're sure of that.

Once again, sorry that my typewriter goes a lot faster than my brain does.

❑ We congratulate John D. Jackson and Matthew J. Maloney on their recent graduation from Boston University. John received a degree in international relations, and Matthew a BA in Sociology.

❑ It's great how life continues after graduating from CHS! Take for example how the great hockey teams from the 70s and 80s are still playing every week: The Bowens, The Evans, The O'Neils, Kevin Guilty, Troy Chatterton, Dan Pompeo, Currans, Steve O'Connor, Durkins, Mark Brown, Frank Mahoney. ... Even Mike O'Connell, of Bruins fame, played last week. Great for them, and fun to watch. Oh yes, Rich Evans wants everyone to know he had two assists.

Hazel Schramn

Hazel M. (Thomson) Schramn, 85, of Cohasset, former vice president of Cohasset Ford, and a volunteer at South Shore Hospital, South Weymouth, for 15 years, died there June 14.

Mrs. Schramn was a director of Sunlight Camp for the Blind in Scituate.

She was born in Somerville, lived in Cambridge, in Scituate for 30 years and in Sandwich before moving to Cohasset 10 years ago.

Wife of the late Howard J. Schramn, she leaves a son, Peter T. Schramn of Scituate; two daughters, Pauline S. Sheppard of Cohasset and Susan J. Schramn of Braintree; six grandchildren and a great-grandson.

A service was conducted June 17 in the Ernest A. Richardson Funeral Home, 382 First Parish Road, Scituate Center, by the Rev. William Fleming, associate pastor of First Trinitarian Congregational Church. Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery in Braintree.

Donations may be made to charity.

Alice Sokolowski

Alice M. (Seaver) Sokolowski, 75, of Cohasset, a member of the Third Order of Discalced Carmelites, Brighton, for 39 years, died at home June 7 after a long illness.

Mrs. Sokolowski was a volunteer at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home 30 years.

An avid tennis player, she was a member of the South Shore tennis group, the Dirty Dozen.

She was a 1934 graduate of Thayer Academy, Braintree, and attended the Leland Powers Broadcasting School.

Mrs. Sokolowski was born on Long Island, N.Y., and lived in Cohasset 60 years.

She leaves her husband, Chester J. Sokolowski; a son, Jerry M. Niff of Duxbury; a daughter, Gail Niff of Arlington; a brother, John D. Seaver of Lincoln; and two grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated June 10 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to the Discalced Carmelite Friars, 166 Foster St., Brighton.

Lillian Capello

Lillian P. (Perron) Capello, 83, of Cohasset, a real estate broker for 39 years, died June 21 in Ocean Manor Nursing Home, Scituate, after a long illness.

A member of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors and the South Shore Board of Realtors, Mrs. Capello retired just two years ago.

She was born in Cambridge and lived 10 years in Boston before moving to Cohasset.

She was a graduate of New Bedford High School.

Mrs. Capello leaves a brother, Robert Perron of Florida; two sisters, Shirley Jengo and Olive DelGrosso, both of Connecticut; a niece, Nancy A. Tubbs of Cohasset; and a grandniece and grandnephew.

Arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to the Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham, or to the Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Baystate Drive, Braintree 02184.

Oscar Johnson

Dr. Oscar C. Johnson, 87, of Cohasset, a retired optometrist, died June 25 in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

Dr. Johnson was a graduate of Boston Technical High School and the Boston Optometrist School.

He was a member of First Parish Unitarian Church and the Cohasset Breakfast Club.

He was born in Dorchester and lived 50 years in Cohasset.

Dr. Johnson leaves his wife, Viola (Carlson) Johnson; a son, Philip O. Johnson of Plymouth, 11 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

A funeral service was conducted July 1 in McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. Burial was in Milton Cemetery.

Donations may be made to the Perkins School for the Blind, 175 N. Beacon St., Watertown 02172.

Mary L. Walsh

Mary L. Walsh, 71, of Cohasset, a former clerk at Cohasset Savings Bank, died June 26 in Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

She was born in Lowell and lived 31 years in Cohasset.

Miss Walsh leaves a brother, Dennis Walsh of Lowell; two sisters, Catherine Mulcahy of Cohasset and Betty Frappier of Lowell; and 16 nephews and nieces.

Arrangements for the June 29 service in St. Patrick's Cemetery, Lowell, were made by Sparrell McNamara Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to charity.

Are you old enough to remember learning that policemen were your friends?

If you do, you probably learned to read with a primer like "Dick and Jane", which showed policemen, usually directing traffic, as 'friend.'

Today primers have become more modern and probably don't include the old traffic cops in double-breasted jackets.

Times have changed but that doesn't mean police have changed. They should still be a kid's friend.

Yet today, many adolescents will run into police the hard way — most likely in a drug- or alcohol-related arrest. This is supported by the recent survey of Cohasset school kids in which 24 percent of ninth and tenth graders admitted to having passed out from alcohol in the past 12 months; and 20 percent said they'd used marijuana.

Selectmen Martha Gjesteby and Merle S. Brown think Cohasset police ought to reach out a little more. They think Police Chief Joseph M. Kealey should meet with the board and discuss a program or plan to outreach to the community.

It was apparent that Mrs. Gjesteby raised the subject in light of the melee between Cohasset and Hull youths last week. The incident resulted in several arrests and injuries.

Mrs. Gjesteby brought up the old Police Association softball league as an example of a way police used to get involved. She feels the chief should provide some input on positive activities for young people.

Selectman Brown echoed Mrs. Gjesteby's concerns. He said he'd like to have the chief become more involved.

"He has to be a leader," Mr. Brown said.

Later in a telephone interview, Mr. Brown questioned whether most Cohasset kids even know who the chief of police is.

Despite the fact that their suggestion was pooh-poohed by their fellow board members, we think it's a good idea.

Chairman Jane Goedecke asked for examples of police outreach programs in other communities.

DARE, a drug education program, which is offered in many area towns is the first to come to mind.

Ask any Scituate adolescent about Officer Dominic D'Arcangelo — affectionately called 'Officer Dom' — and you'll see the program does a lot more than educating kids about the dangers of drugs.

The Hanover Police Boys Club is another. (The name is a misnomer, the club includes girls). The club is essentially a weight room where teenagers come to work out, side-by-side with Hanover officers. It was started in the mid-70's so kids could see police as ordinary people — without the badge.

Reached by telephone Chief Joseph M. Kealey said the idea of an outreach program was "worth sitting down sometime with a cross section of patrolmen to see what they think." He added that he is not opposed to DARE, which is paid for through grants and private donations in many towns, if the manpower issues could be worked out.

School Supt. Stephen Hart said the school department is willing "to look again" at DARE.

"The problem (of alcohol and drugs) is big enough, there's plenty to go around," Mr. Hart said about the argument that it's just up to specific groups like the schools or parents to solve the problem.

Kidstent sends thanks to all

To the Editor:

All the children who passed through the South Shore Art Center Festivals KIDSTENT left smiling! And, in keeping with this year's theme "The Magic of Motion," the young artists never stopped and left with kites, wind socks, frisbees, sailboat murals and more!

Many thanks to our sponsors, Boston Yacht Sales and Garelick Farms; to all our volunteers who pre-cut, preparation work (especially Caitlin Stansell for dyeing pounds of macaroni); our tent volunteers and all who just "showed up and pitched in."

However, most of our volunteers this year were Cohasset youngsters aged 10-14.

They deserve a special thanks—they were responsible, on-time, trustworthy and so creative and patient with all the young artists. We received many compliments on them from visitors from all over!

Thanks to Elizabeth Myers for scheduling and calling all the following volunteers: Alissa Conley, Emily Libby, Bridgette Libby, Katie Hutt, Meghan Leahy, Emily Keefe, Kate Stone, Annie Palone, Jessie Zerendow, Mickey Palone, Joseph Nicynski, Ronnie Nicynski, Caitlin Connolly, Meghan Connolly, Kim Welby, Alison Berg, Caitlin Welby, Jenny Chastain and Sarah Nohe.

Again thanks to all!

Co-chairs Rhonda Myers and Moira Stansell.

Is Cohasset in the wrong county?

By Burt Pratt
Cohasset Historical Society

Reference to a map of Eastern Massachusetts reveals a very long, very straight, boundary line running along the southeasterly border of Cohasset and thence all the way to Rhode Island. For about half its distance this ancient survey line forms the northerly border of several Plymouth County towns and was, in the beginning, not only a County boundary but the boundary between the Massachusetts Bay and Plymouth Colonies.

Author Louis A. Cook in his book History of Norfolk County - 1622 - 1918, points out that in 1793 the County of Norfolk was created by transferring a number of Suffolk County towns, including Cohasset, Hingham and Hull to the new County. However, prior to the act taking effect, the people of Hingham and Hull petitioned the General Court not to be included in the new Norfolk County.

The petition was granted June 20, 1793, the same day that the law went into effect, and that portion relating to Hingham and Hull was repealed. Cook wrote that: "This left Cohasset detached from the main body of Norfolk County. On the north, south and west it is bounded by parts of Plymouth County, and on the east by the water of Massachusetts Bay."

Hingham and Hull remained in Suffolk County until 1803 when they were annexed to Plymouth.

The withdrawal of Hingham and Hull from the carefully worked out Norfolk County plan left Cohasset in a peculiarly isolated position and gives the appearance that it is in the wrong county when, in fact, a strong case can be made that Hingham and Hull, not Cohasset, are misplaced.

chamber chatter

by Paula Knowles

Well, another Harborfest is over, another beautiful weekend of hard work and dreams fulfilled. It may seem much easier to put on an event like Harborfest the second year — easier than creating it the first, at any rate. The basic structure was set ... what worked, what didn't. But how do you improve on an event that so many hundreds of people thought was "just perfect" to begin with. It seemed like an impossible task to me, but the Harborfest Committee somehow carried it off. They didn't change a thing, really, just added a little bit here, took a little off there. They watched and learned during Harborfest I, and incorporated all of their "next year we should's" into Harborfest II. And look at the groups and people who participated.

The Rotary ran the pancake breakfast; the Second Congregational Church had their Strawberry Festival and food booths; Teen Depot had a photo booth; the Chamber of Commerce put together and underwrote the parade; Social Service League sponsored the Chowderfest (won this year by our own Kimball's-By-The-Sea!!); Ernst and Young, in cooperation with the Art Center, sponsored the Sailboat Making Booth for the kids; the Cohasset Permanent Firefighters Association joined together with the Call Firefighters Association to design, build, staff and run that great dunking booth; and the Council on Aging took control of the parking and shuttle bus. And people from all these groups helped with the planning and actual grunt work before, during and after the event itself.

Look also at those who really "put their money where their mouths are," so to speak. When Harborfest was over last year, everyone in town was singing its praises and saying "Wait Til Next Year." Just about what you expect from boards and groups, etc., when the work is done and a success has been declared, right?

But what happened when those same people were asked to help out this year? ... They came through with all the help you could ask for! Merle Brown, Jane Geodecke, Michael Sullivan, Barbara Powers, Chief Nadeau, Jack DiLorenzo, Coach Silvia, and many more put their "dignity" aside for a day and took a bath in the dunking booth.

Irv Gadow, our fine harbormaster, spent hour upon hour, much of it his own time, making sure that the games and events in the harbor would be safe for everyone.

The Lightkeepers Corp. opened the Government Island House as a changing station for the Army and National Guard bands; and the American Legion Auxiliary, in the persons of Eileen Kurtz, Betty Maree and Jackie Kurtz (with the help of Bob Jones) manned the grills early Sunday afternoon during the cookout for hungry band members. Harold Litchfield and the Highway Dept. provided barriers, radios, trucks and help all weekend long; the Police Dept. provided barrier tape, manpower, and yearlong help and advice, as did the Fire Dept.; the Community Center offered space and those invaluable rest rooms for the entire event; and Teen Depot provided kid power to help set up the tables, etc. on the Common.

But for me, the parade really clinched the idea of true "community involvement" in Harborfest. Look who marched or participated. Kids involved in scouting, softball, drama, history, the Community Center. Parents involved as leaders, coaches, teachers, planners. Grandparents, senior citizens and just plain people who love parades and floats. Hundreds of hours of volunteer time was spent planning and building those beautiful floats, and each decorated bike had a proud and happy child who was helped by an equally happy parent or friend.

So three cheers and many congratulations to all who planned, worked and participated in this year's Harborfest II. I apologize to any groups I have missed — my memory can only handle so much info at one time. And a special thanks to our clergy, not only for the blessing of the fleet, but also for the "blessing of the weather." That help was the most important of all!

political notes

Brian J. McDonald has made it official - again. For the second time in two years, McDonald is making a run for the Norfolk/Plymouth state senate seat. McDonald lost the Democratic nomination for the same seat in 1990 to former state representative and Weymouth neighbor Bob Ambler.

Now, McDonald is challenging incumbent Republican Bob Hedlund.

In his announcement made June 18 to supporters gathered at the Hingham Sons of Italy Hall, McDonald emphasized his familiarity with the district through his long association with the South Shore Coalition.

Same issues, some of the same names two years later. McDonald said he is still concerned about the restoration of the Old Colony railroad, the economy, the issue of pro-choice, and the decline of public education.

But he's no loner. McDonald says his will be a campaign of inclusion. Does this mean whoever gets the most votes wins? "We are a campaign concerned about the plight of families and how we can support and nurture this most basic and important cornerstone," he said. "We want to bring people together, not split them apart. We want our senior citizens to live safely, comfortably, and with dignity. We want to push for health care for all before we are crushed by the bill."

Another Democrat trying to edge Hedlund out of office, Chartis Langmaid of Cohasset, must be in great condition considering the schedule she intends to keep.

Saturday, July 18, she'll be heading up a cast of campaign volunteers for the first annual Langmaid Litter Brigade Community Cleanup throughout the seven towns. If you would like to volunteer, call the headquarters are 383-1451.

Hull beachgoers and environmentalists have reached a compromise about opening more and bigger passages in the dunes.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS

	Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) 722-1646 Room 416B	Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) 722-2800 ext.7957 Room 134
THE HOUSE AND SENATE. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on three roll calls and local representatives' votes on six roll calls from the week of June 29-July 3.	VOTE
(House and Senate) REDISTRICTING (H 5889) — House 94-57, Senate 20-17, approved and sent to Governor Weld a Democratic drafted Congressional redistricting plan to comply with the mandated reduction from eleven to ten seats. The plan pits incumbent Congressmen Chet Atkins and Joe Early against each other in a new district. Supporters said quick action is necessary to okay this fair plan and warned that delays will result in having the courts decide the districts. Opponents objected to many provisions including the lack of a Merrimack Valley district or a minority district. (A "Yea" vote is for the plan. A "Nay" vote is against it).	NV	N
(House and Senate) REPUBLICAN PLAN (H 5889) — House 104-46, Senate 26-11, rejected a Republican sponsored redistricting plan. Supporters said this is a fairer plan which creates a Merrimack Valley district and also creates a district with a 45 percent minority population. Opponents objected to many provisions and claimed this version is unfair to Western Massachusetts. (A "Yea" vote is for the plan. A "Nay" vote is against it).	Y	Y
(House) RACING (S 1647) — House 142-0, approved a conference committee version of a 38 page bill legalizing simulcasting at the state's racetracks and allowing people to go to the track and place bets on televised horse and dog racing being held at other tracks. Supporters said the bill will help the racing industry and raise revenue for the state. The Senate passed the bill on a voice vote and sent it to the Governor. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).		Y
(House) TAX HIKE (H 5909) — House 113-37, approved a bill scaling back the recent hike in unemployment insurance taxes paid by employers. Bill supporters said this increases the average 1992 payment per employee by 30 percent from $280 to $362 instead of 63 percent from $280 to $457. They noted the measure also hikes the tax in future years and claimed it is necessary to bail out the state's unemployment trust fund which has a $500 million deficit. Opponents said this is simply a tax hike which will hurt businesses and cause layoffs. They urged cuts in benefits and additional tightening of eligibility and argued the fund will return to solvency when the economy and unemployment improve. (A "Yea" vote is for the scaled back hike. A "Nay" vote is against it).		N
(House) COLLECTION PERIOD (H 5909) — House 115-34, rejected an amendment reducing from 30 to 26 the number of weeks a person can collect unemployment benefits. Amendment supporters argued that only one other state allows 30 weeks and claimed this will save $69 million annually. Opponents said the additional month is important to people who depend on these benefits. (A "Yea" vote is for 26 weeks. A "Nay" vote is for 30 weeks).		Y
(Senate) MORE TAX HIKE (H 5909) — Senate 32-4, approved a bill eliminating the recent hike in the tax paid by employers in 1992 but imposing hikes beginning in 1993. Supporters said this version, along with eligibility and benefits tightening, will allow businesses to plan in advance and will make the fund solvent by 1996. Opponents said the bill simply postpones the hikes and will result in businesses paying more interest and surcharges to help bail out the state's unemployment fund. The House and Senate have passed different versions of the bill and unless the House approves the Senate version, the bills will go to a conference committee to work out a compromise. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it).	Y

Rain can't dampen the Taverna experience

By Lee Todd Lacks
Mariner correspondent

The following paragraph may not be suitable for vegetarians, animal rights activists, and anyone else who is on a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet. Reader discretion is advised.

Picture a leg of lamb slowly roasting on a spit over a charcoal fire, basting in butter for hours on end. The delectable aroma wafting out from under the food tent renders you powerless to resist your intense gastronomic desire. You can almost taste it as the chef places huge slices of well-done meat on your "chinette." Now taste it...ah, there is nothing in this world that compares to roast leg of lamb! Now let's talk about feta cheese! Mounds and mounds and mounds of it! Feta cheese! Ahahahahaha!

Uh, sorry folks, momentary lapse of reason. Food does that to me sometimes.

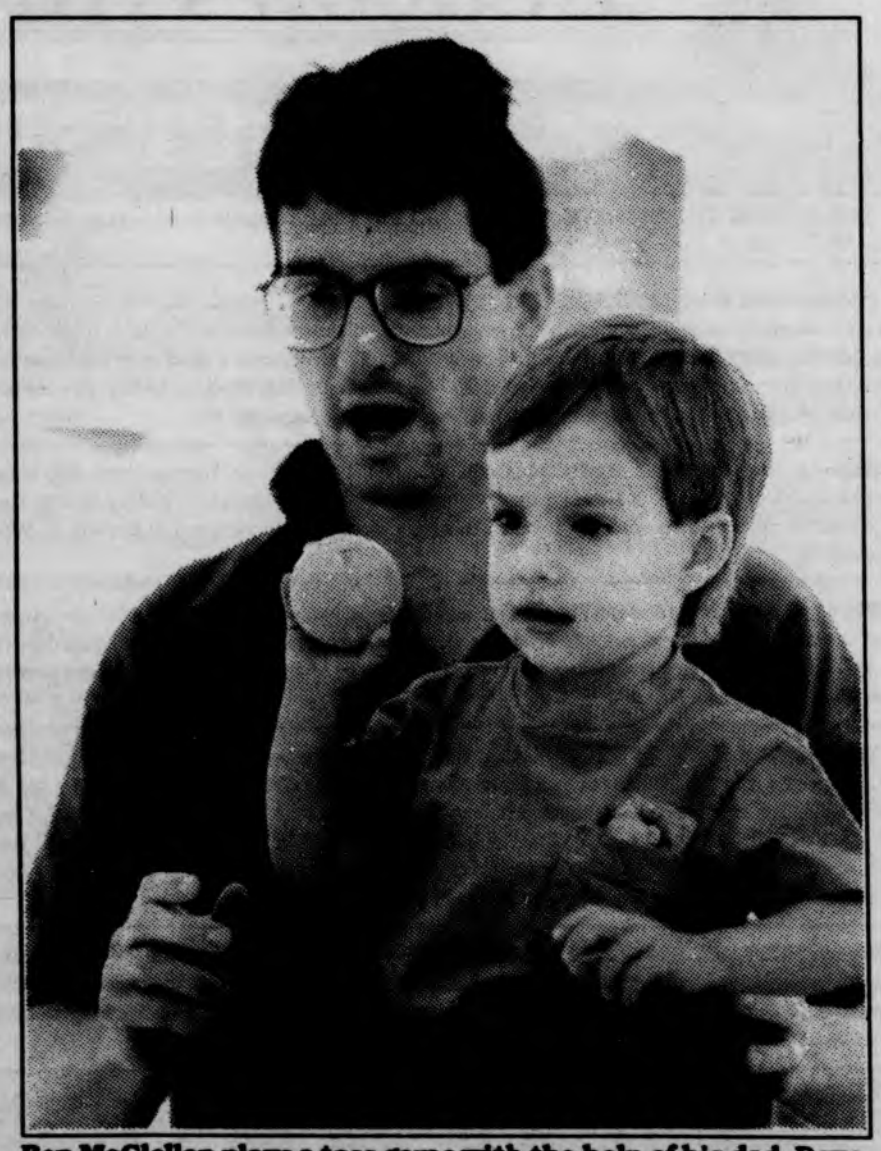
But hey, I'm not just talking about food, I'm talking about Taverna '92, the wildest, wackiest weekend party of them all. Where else but the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church can you hear a band play traditional Greek music at a volume that would put Metallica to shame. After three hours of non-stop turns and trills, you don't just hear this music — it becomes a part of your very being! Such is the experience of Taverna.

Once you have become familiar with the tunes, you can do the kick-in-a-circle dance. The kick-in-a-circle dance is one of those dances that you think you can learn as you go along until you realize that you have been expelled from the circle because you accidentally kicked someone who knew what she was doing.

Nina Fuda welcomes folks to Taverna, a three-day Grecian festival, that featured delicious Greek food.

Sophia Yeragotelis tempts visitors with Souvlaki.

As you regain your place at the table, your ears burn with the laughter of your comrades who take great pleasure in your misfortune. Ignoring these sick puppies, you sullenly wish that the band would start playing Chubby Checker so you could start doing the twist — and they do!



Taverna is one of the best draws on the South Shore during the Fourth of July weekend. In spite of the inclement weather, Taverna '92 was very well attended. In this reporter's opinion, the food was even better than last year. Dinner entrees included such traditional favorites as souvlaki, moussaka and spanakopita. For dessert, one could choose from an assortment of pastries including baklava and loukoumades.

The band, which was actually quite outstanding, featured a harmonica player who "soloed" with stunning proficiency. Once again, the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church has thrown a wonderful party.

Now if you'll excuse me, I'm going to heat up some lamb!

Eugenia Syrmopoulos, Stratton Nichols, and Andrea White are all smiles as they get ready to serve up a feast.

Cohasset's Elinor Kennedy celebrates 90th birthday

"And what is so rare as a day in June." It was the 90th birthday celebration for Elinor Kennedy, Sunday, June 7, held at the home of Mrs. Peg Smart, Wheelwright Farm. Friends, neighbors, former pupils, garden clubbers, grandchildren and family came to greet her. She was surrounded with flowers and plants of every hue.

Mrs. Kennedy came to Cohasset to teach at the 'Old Osgood School' in September 1924. A graduate of Wheelock College '23, she taught in Newport News, VA before accepting a position in Cohasset.

In February, 1926, she walked with her class, carrying their books up Ripley Road to enter the New Osgood School. Mrs. Kennedy taught 30 years in Cohasset; the last few years of teaching were with third graders at the New Wing of the Deer Hill School.

Mrs. Kennedy was active in community living and was an honorary member of Cohasset Amateur Gardners, having served as president and other offices. She was president of school PTA and during the war was with the Home Service of the Red Cross. She sang with the Civic Chorus in Hingham, the church choir and presented several musical shows at the town hall with Osgood School children.

Henry B. Kennedy, a Cohasset lad just returned from duty in World War I service came into her life. She then became a part of family living. Her son Donald B. Kennedy of Stevens Lane, Cohasset is a graduate of Boston University and served in the U.S. Navy. Grandchildren Jocelyn Kennedy Nolan (of Weymouth) and Benjamin Whitney Kennedy (Marion) were also present.

Don's wife, Mary Kennedy, is the Assistant Carillonneur at St. Stephen's Church and also teaches at the University level.

Mrs. Kennedy returned to teaching in 1944, retiring in 1965.

The lovely party was planned and executed by her dear friends, Beverly Stanley and Linda Kucera of Hingham, also, Mrs. Smart's daughter Elaine Smart of Hingham, all who have great expertise.

It was a happy day for all present.

The Rev. Gary Ritts and his wife, Judy, join Elinor Kennedy for her 90th birthday.

Rivals deadlocked on redistricting

By Tom Henshaw
Mariner staff

Remember when you received assurances from Beacon Hill that you would know what congressional district you lived in by the end of the week?

That was last week, right?

Well, as of high noon Tuesday, Republican Governor William Weld on one side and the Democratic House leadership on the other were still trying to map a district breakdown that is acceptable to both.

Weld went on the air at 12 noon Tuesday to assure us that some progress was being made. That morning he would meet with House leaders again at 3:15 p.m. for another session of negotiations.

Meanwhile, the state primary election is still scheduled for Sept. 15, now only 10 weeks away, and penalty costs for failure to have ballots printed on time are reaching for the $350,000 mark.

And the campaigns of scores of eager candidates for seats in the U. S. Congress have been placed on hold until they discover just where they should be looking for votes.

The delay is particularly touchy on the South Shore where the retirement of Cong. Brian Donnelly appears to have thrown most of the cities and towns up for grabs.

Donnelly represented District 11 but the Census of 1990, with the backing of the U. S. Supreme Court, left Massachusetts with only 10 districts.

One redistricting has been approved by the House and Senate but Weld balked at signing it apparently because it did not go far enough to create a Merrimack Valley district where a Republican could win.

That plan would have created a South Shore district from Quincy to Plymouth by way of Brockton with no incumbent congressman.

Cong. Gerry Studds' district would include Cape Cod and the south coast as far as North Attleboro and Braintree, Milton and Randolph would be detached and placed in the existing district of Cong. Joseph Moakley.

The latest plan to be kicked around appears to eliminate an open South Shore district and place Quincy and the coastal suburbs in Studds' district and Brockton and environs in the district of Cong. Barney Frank of Newton.

If Weld and the Democrats fail to reach an agreement the redistricting will be done by Federal Judge Edward Harrington, a former Democrat turned Republican, who has said he wants nothing to do it.

Each new district would contain about 600,000 people.

Pirates clinch Cohasset Little League title

By John Smoot
Special to the Mariner

Each team recorded 14 victories, and in six head-to-head matches each defeated the other three times. It was the Pirates though, who for one magical night "defeated time."

Baseball commentator Roger Angell wrote that "Baseball's time is seamless and invisible, a bubble within which players move at exactly the same pace and rhythms as all their predecessors. This is the way the game was played in our youth and in our fathers' youth, and even back then—back in the country days—there must have been the same feeling that time could be stopped. Since baseball time is measured only in outs, all you have to do is succeed utterly; keep hitting, keep the rally alive, and you have defeated time."

Ten days of play in June had narrowed the field of teams in Cohasset's Little League Championship Series to the final two, the Pirates and the Dodgers. The Dodgers had already defeated the Pirates June 20. The double-elimination series meant a second loss for the Pirates would end their bid for the title.

The June 22 game found the Pirates trailing five runs to zero against the Dodgers at the end of five innings. The Pirates came to bat in the last inning for what many thought was the end of the 1992 Little League season in Cohasset. The images of what followed are imprinted permanently in the minds of those wh o saw it happen. All the Pirates did was succeed utterly.

Ben Smoot began the rally with a base hit and kept it alive ten batters later when he doubled home the winning run. In between Mike Quintin tripled, Martin St. John singled, Scott Vanhartesvelt and Eric Wenmark drew walks, and Derek Bugley doubled.

It was Bugley who scored the tying run which propelled the Pirate fans three feet off the ground. Bugley simply never stopped running from second base on a dramatic base hit by Andrew Kinch, and, against all odds, suddenly he was safe at home and back to a raving dugout.

Matthew Lewis, who had pitched the Dodgers to victory after victory this season, suffered through the Pirate rally with a force of character that transcended the swirl around him. Lewis distinguished himself as a young man who, win or lose, plays with class and sportsmanship. It did not take a keen observer to know that the Dodgers were far from finished. In addition to Lewis, other Dodgers had regularly tormented the Pirate team. Greg Bilton and Denis Rooney had each deposited balls well behind the center field fence against Pirate pitching and it was rare indeed that the Pirates got O'Sullivan out. Mark Equi tracked down fly balls with a certain ease that frustrated opponents. Their teammates, Jake Motley, Bobby Morgan, Greg O'Keefe, Chris Olney, Garrick Towle, Adam Leahy, Brian Hurley, and Rob Moody rounded out an impressive group whose hard work had earned the Dodgers a first place finish during the regular season.

The Pirate's come-from-behind win established that the same two teams would meet in a final and deciding game for the Championship of Cohasset.

Thoughts of Moody would weigh heavy on Pirate minds over the next few days. Yogi Berra's famous line, "It ain't over "til it's over," characterized the prior game. The Pirates did not want this lesser known line, "You can't think and hit at the same time," to characterize the final game. In two prior outings against the Pirates, Moody struck out 24 batters, keeping the Pirate hitters guessing and throwing them off balance by constantly and effectively changing speeds.

The Pirates, on the other hand, could not pitch Scott Van Hartesvelt and Paul-Michael Quintin, whose superb outings in two previous playoff games meant they had already pitched their maximum weekly amount of six innings, nor could they pitch Colton Ralston whose efforts earlier in the series had helped the Pirates defeat the Red Sox, but who, along with infielder Luke Caldwell, was unavailable due to a family commitment. VanHartesvelt, Pirate ace pitcher for three years, would move to catcher and fate would place Smoot on the mound in the championship game.

1992 Cohasset Little League champions include (names are not necessarily in order): Colton Ralston, Robert Buckley, Andrew Curran, Ben Roine, Hunt Pile, Ben Smoot, Andrew Kinch, Eric Wenmark, Paul-Michael Quintin, Derek Bugley, Scott Vanhartesvelt, Martin St. John, and Luke Caldwell. The coaches are: John Smoot and Paul St. John.

Cohasset Jeweler's, at Tedeschi's Shopping Plaza, celebrates its tenth anniversary next week.

July 13 through 18, every item in the store will be at its lowest price ever, according to company president Jerry Cirone. In addition to the sale, Cohasset Jewelers will hold a drawing on July 18 for a diamond pendant and other prizes. Ellery Clark, local historian and world-class athlete, will pick the winning tickets. To register, just drop by the store.

Carillon recitals begin

The 68th annual series of summer Carillon Recitals are given on the 57-bell Cohasset Carillon in the tower of St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset on nine successful Sunday evenings, beginning July 5 and continuing through August 30, at 6 p.m.

July 12, the guest artist is Don Cook, Carillonneur of Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah. For further information, phone St. Stephen's Church at 627/383-1093, or Sally Slade Warner at 508/475-2599.

At Eldred Wheeler We Still Make Them Like They Used To.

At Eldred Wheeler, we make our furniture by hand, using the same methods developed by 18th century craftsmen. From the design of the piece and the choice of materials, to the carving, assembling and finishing, our work is truly authentic. And, since our furniture is available to you direct from our own shops, it is surprisingly affordable.

We are pleased to announce the grand opening of our new showrooms in New York and New Jersey. Join us this week as we celebrate with these special prices at all our locations.

No beach closings here so far this summer

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

How can Scituate beaches be closed with extremely high fecal coliform counts — and Cohasset's be squeaky clean?

It could be in the currents, officials say.

Not only have Cohasset's beaches not been closed at all this summer - but fecal coliform counts have been low enough to be called "good."

Cohasset follows the EPA's guidelines which set the standard fecal coliform counts of 200 parts per 100 milliliters as the point when swimming may be unhealthful.

Scituate's health board closed three beaches in that town June 25 when fecal coliform counts at Minot, Egypt, and Sand Hills were too high to measure. Sand Hills was again closed July 2.

But Cohasset hasn't closed a beach in at least two years, says health agent Joseph R. Godzik, V.M.D.

Godzik said five sites in Cohasset are tested weekly. They include the mouth of Bailey's Creek, the yacht club, Sandy Cove, Sandy Beach, and Black Rock Beach.

"That's essentially where people swim," Godzik says.

He explained the sailing club collects the water samples which are tested by the Cohasset water department, a certified laboratory.

The water the put through a filter which traps the bacteria. The filter is then put in a specialized culture medium, which enhances bacteria growth. Cohasset follows testing standards recommended by the American Public Health Association.

Tenth Congressional District changes

By Tom Henshaw
Mariner staff

With a stroke of the pen by Governor Weld last week, the 11th Congressional District vanished, and the 10th Congressional District was reshaped to include the coastal communities from Quincy to Provincetown.

Weymouth, which shared its congressman with Braintree, Milton Dorchester and points west, has now joined Provincetown, Plymouth, Nantucket and points south.

Weld's move erased Rep. Brian Donnelly's old district and parcelled it out among Reps. Joseph Moakley of Boston, Barney Frank of Newton and Gerry E. Studds of Cohasset, the only South Shore resident in the lot.

Studds inherits Quincy, Weymouth, Holbrook, Avon, Abington, Whitman and parts of Brockton and Rockland from the retiring Donnelly.

For Weymouth, it means a return to the district represented by Studds after 10 years in the 11th.

The town was in the 11th when its congressman was James A. Burke until 1968 when it was shifted into the

Regionalized fire service coming

Within three years, Cohasset could be part of a regionalized fire protection district.

Selectmen took the first step toward that eventuality last week by endorsing a grant proposal seeking $50,000 to get the ball rolling.

Essentially the money will pay for consultant services to determine the legal framework needed to set up regional fire service, said Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon.

Labor-related issues such as collective bargaining and civil service will also be investigated. Two task forces would be set up; one to look at communications and the other to perform an evaluation of equipment and where it should be located, Doyon said.

Fire Chiefs and town administrators from Cohasset, Scituate, Hull, Norwell, and Hingham have met to discuss regionalization.

The group is looking at regionalizing all areas of the fire service to serve the five towns.

Selectmen Chairman Jane Goedecke also attended a workshop last week and is enthusiastic about the prospect of regionalizing fire service.

"I find this thrilling," she said.

The towns must match 10 percent of the grant — or $5,000 — which would be split five ways.

Another component of the grant would provide for a workshop for selectmen from the five towns.

Doyon said there are no guarantees that the grant

Cohasset's week

Lead investigation goes on

It has been nearly three months and officials are still puzzled about the unusually high percentage of lead in the drinking water at Deer Hill School and the junior/ senior high school.

School Supt. Stephen Hart told the school committee Monday that the board of health continues to analyze the water.

"The initial results are odd because the concentration of lead is higher after the water has run for a few minutes," he said.

Normally, Hart explained, lead concentration is highest when water is first turned on because the first water out of a spicket has been sitting the longest, presumably absorbing lead and other metals from surrounding pipes for the longest period of time.

"It seems the water gets contaminated while it gets to its source here."

Hart said the lead problem is not severe.

"We are talking about an issue where it is only a concern if the child receives lead from numerous other sources," Hart explained.

He said the percentage of lead in the water at the schools is an issue primarily because the federal government set stricter standards this year for permissible levels of lead in water.

If the source of the lead contamination is not found and corrected by the beginning of the school year, Hart said, two bubblers at the high school will continue to sport 'Don't Drink the Water" signs.

Unemployment is down

The unemployment rate in Cohasset dropped from 6.8 percent in April to 5.7 percent in May.

According to figures from the state Department of Employment and Training, 214 residents were unemployed in May from a total labor force of 3,762.

Meanwhile, the state's unemployment rate rose to 8.8 percent in June, up from 8.3 percent in May. Unemployment figures for municipalities lag a month behind the state numbers.

"Despite the increase in the unemployment rate, we are seeing some positive indicators behind this monthly percentage," said state Commissioner Nils L. Nordberg. "More people are re-entering the labor force - up 35,000 over the year - and more people are working - a 46,000 increase over 1991 totals."

Encephalitis risk warned

Public health officials are warning residents of Plymouth, Norfolk and Bristol counties of the dangers of eastern equine encephalitis.

Horses, which can be protected with an annual vaccination, have historically been early victims in outbreaks of the disease.

There is no licensed vaccine for people, whose natural immunity to the disease is rare, probably because infections are uncommon and often fatal, health officials say.

Historical data indicates the disease typically emerges for a two- or three-year period. Because of the prevalence of the disease in 1990 and 1991, there is a likelihood it will occur again this summer, officials say.

Heavy precipitation levels from late summer into the fall of 1991 left groundwater levels higher than average, which provides favorable breeding conditions for mosquitoes. It may result in a year of unusually large mosquito populations unless there is a period of significant drought.

Name: George Roukounakis.

Occupation: Owner, Olympic Texaco for the past 20 years.

Best day of your life: Day I married my wife.

Most embarrassing moment: It was 6:30 a.m. and the first customer of the day pulled up by the pump and was waiting for gas. On the way to the car, I picked up a beer bottle someone threw on my property the night before. When I got to the car to ask how much gas she wanted, she stared at me funny and said, "I was going to get some gas, but I changed my mind," and drove off. As I was standing there afterwards I realized she saw the beer bottle in my hand and thought I was drinking at 6:30 in the morning!

Goal: Put my children through college and peace on earth.

Favorite season: Summer.

Best vacation: Greece, the summer of 1984.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet Peeve: Litterers.

Favorite book: "Eleni" by Nicholas Page.

Favorite movie: "Zorba the Greek."

Biggest worry: The future of my children and family, especially for their continued good health.

Pro-choicers supported at demonstration

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Six women bearing pro-choice signs at the Hingham rotary on Route 3A received overwhelming support from passersby late Monday afternoon in a peaceful demonstration.

The women, representing Hingham, Cohasset, Weymouth, Hull, and Milton, stood on the rotary from 5:30 p.m. until 7:15 p.m., waving to cars and holding signs with the slogans "Pro-choice or no choice" and "Freedom of choice NOW!"

Most were members of South Shore National Organization for Women (NOW).

Carolyn Sammon of Cohasset joined the demonstration, saying she couldn't stay on the sidelines.

"It's just too important an issue to stay at home," Sammon said.

Sammon, 46, said she was holding the sign at the rotary on Monday for her daughter.

"My reproductive days are over, but my daughter's are just beginning," she added.

Sammon and her daughter took part in the "March for Women's Lives" in Washington, D.C. April 5, which drew women from all over the country who support a woman's right to an abortion.

Suzanne Cutler of Hingham, one of the organizers of the event, said she was heartened by the response to the demonstration.

"We haven't seen one negative reaction. There is just a lot of support out there," Cutler said.

She said the purpose of the gathering was to raise awareness.

"I remember when there wasn't choice," the 40-ish Cutler explained.

The thumbs-up sign and toots of support ruled the reactions from the rush-hour drivers, although there were isolated incidents of disapproval.

The most dramatic negative response came from a female who drove dangerously close to where the women were standing and angrily yelled, "If I voted pro-choice, you wouldn't be here."

Judy Dunn of Milton, who held a pro-choice sign, was unruffled by the negative reaction.

"She must have gone to the Dan Quayle school of logic," she quipped.

"Her statement doesn't make sense."

Dunn, at 50, was the oldest demonstrator, and not a NOW member.

"I'm very pro-choice, and pro-family and pro-change," she explained.

"Fooling around with Roe v. Wade, we just can't have it."

Roe v. Wade is the U.S. Supreme Court 1973 landmark decision which legalized abortion for women up to six months pregnant.

Three weeks ago on June 29 — although upholding

Pro-choice demonstrators . . .

Roe v. Wade — the Supreme Court ruled to allow states to restrict abortion in Western Pennsylvania Planned Parenthood v. Casey.

On the day the Supreme Court handed down its decision, Cutler and others held the group's first demonstration on the Quincy side of the Fore River bridge.

Cindy Moran, 25, of Weymouth, was the youngest member of the group at the Hingham rotary Monday.

"This is all taken for granted at school," said Moran, who attends Smith College.

Moran, who is not a member of NOW, said she joined the demonstration to let people know women outside of Boston can be vocal also.

"It's so quiet around here — no one thinks South Shore people care about this issue," she said.

Support for the demonstrators came from those of all ages and genders.

Cathy Doherty of Hull said she didn't anticipate such a positive response from such a diverse crowd.

"I'm surprised. You wouldn't think you would get support like this from a place like Hingham.

"And there are so many older people supporting us," Doherty said.

Cutler said the demonstration reflected a national movement for recognition of women's issues.

"We have to push people to vote pro-choice and let them know we will vote pro-choice," she said.

Dunn, who works on the campaign of a pro-choice state candidate, said more women have to get elected to address issues about women's health.

"Women need a voice and they don't have it," she said.

Cutler said she hoped the demonstration would encourage people to call their representatives in Congress to support the "Freedom of Choice Act," which would guarantee a women's right to an abortion.

The act is currently in the Senate and although Congress is expected to pass it, President George Bush is expected to veto it.

Cutler said demonstrations might help Congress get enough votes to pass the "Freedom of Choice Act" through an override.

Project seeks resting place

South Shore NOW is looking for a one-week resting place for its "Tombstone Project."

The project hopes to raise awareness of abuse against women and children by placing makeshift tombstones which contain the names of actual people killed by domestic violence this year.

South Shore NOW member Jeanette Tibbetts of Weymouth said the Tombstone Project is a "travelling exhibit."

Tibbetts said First Parish in Quincy seemed receptive, but plans have not been finalized.

Tibbetts said South Shore NOW will approach the state to receive approval to put the exhibit at the rotary on Route 3A in Hingham.

Regionalization of fire department will be approved. Money for the competitive grant program is part of the proposed state budget — and the grant program is in doubt until the state budget has passed, he said.

Doyon said if the grant does not come through the first thing for the towns to look at is paying for the selectmen's workshop which is estimated to cost about $3,000 (split five ways).

He said the towns may be able to find the money for the workshop within their respective fire budgets; and then go to town meeting to ask for money to pay for the rest of the regionalization study.

There are no immediate estimates to how much money would be saved with regionalization.

"But we believe there would be long-term savings," Doyon said.

Staffing for the regional force has yet to be determined, he said.

"But clearly the set up would be much different than what exists now," Doyon said.

Hingham High graduate is in a league of her own

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Robert Parsons doesn't know what to think of his kid sister now.

Back when they were young — his little sister not only played baseball with the boys, but she put them to shame.

Zipay played for the Rockford, Ill. Peaches in the early 1950's. She has a cameo role in "A League of Their Own."

"She could scoop a grounder better than I ever could," recalls Parsons, a Hingham resident.

And now 50 years later not only is Susan Parsons' name in the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, New York — but she appears in this summer's hit movie "A League of Their Own" about the All-American Girls Professional Baseball League (AAGPBL).

And it wasn't until she went to Cooperstown to film the league reunion scenes, featured in the movie, that Susan Parsons Zipay realized what she'd accomplished.

"I forgot about it," says Zipay, who was reached by telephone at the tennis club she owns with one of her sons in Placida, Florida.

"But it was really emotional in Cooperstown. I saw a ball in a display case with 'Sue Parsons' on it, that will be there forever and ever."

Zipay, 58, is a former Marshfield resident and member of the recreation commission. Her three children, David, Judy and Robert Zipay graduated from Marshfield High in 1977, 1978 and 1980 respectively. In addition to Robert, she has two other brothers and a sister in the area. William Parsons lives in Marshfield, John in Scituate and Audrey Parsons Shaw lives in Hingham.

She recalls that growing up in the 1940's, there was no place for a tomboy.

"I used to sit and watch the boys play Little League with wishful eyes," she says.

Zipay graduated from Hingham High in 1952 where she played varsity softball for four years.

Her talent didn't go unnoticed. It was Zipay's physical education teacher at Hingham High that told her about professional girls' baseball.

"I threw like a boy and slid into base like a boy," she recalls.

So Zipay tried out for a spot in the league in a backyard in Natick.

"I went up to Dottie Green's house and threw a few balls," she says. At the time Green, a former player, was a chaperone for the league.

"Then they sent me a contract and I didn't even read it I was so ecstatic."

Zipay went to South Bend, Indiana for spring training with the Rockford, Illinois Peaches — the same team the actress Geena Davis' character plays on in the movie.

Zipay explains that the women in the league usually stayed two-to-a-room in private homes. The league chaperones handled the arrangements. The Peaches traveled across three states and played seven nights a week with a double-header on Sundays.

Room and board and one meal a day were provided along with a small weekly check. Zipay signed for $50 a week.

The players were required to wear skirts — which afforded them no protection when sliding into base. The "strawberries" (scabs) on the girls' thighs in the movie — were an every day occurrence for the players.

While Zipay was a star on the South Shore, women from all over the United States, Cuba and Canada played in the AAGPBL and they were all talented.

A league of her own . . .

"That's something the movie tries to get across. We all realized we weren't freaks. There were other women who played baseball like men," she says.

The league folded in 1954. Zipay blames the onset of television, which kept the fans at home.

Zipay, wearing a white sweatshirt and red hat, is the first batter in the film. She also appears in the group scene during the dedication at the Hall of Fame; and later in the film, there's a shot of her batting again.

The film tried to cast former players who resembled the young actresses who appear in the movie.

Zipay was chosen because she looks like actress Robin Knight, who ended up on the cutting room floor.

"As it turned out Robin Knight was hardly in the film at all — I was in it more than she was," Zipay says jokingly.

One of the side effects of filming is a knee injury that's kept Zipay off the tennis court for ten months.

Under the critical eye of director Penny Marshall — the batting scenes were filmed over and over. After hitting a double and running to second base again and again, Zipay's knee puffed up. She's had surgery on it and hopes that in time she'll be able to give lessons and play in tennis tournaments, which she loves.

Zipay, a grandmother of five, is glad that times have changed for women athletes.

"When I was young when you reached junior high school, you were told to put a dress on and behave yourself and that was the extent of it.

"I had a gift being an athlete and it was difficult to know what to do with it. The boys asked me to play but in junior high I was told girls can't play anymore. It wasn't easy to have some ability in those days.

"But with scholarships (for women) it's so different now," she says.

And Parsons is proud that his sister accomplished what the guys only dreamed about.

"I'm proud of her. I always was," he says. "It was a daring thing to do.

"She did what I couldn't, she played professional baseball."

Cohasset beaches remain open

After being incubated for 24 hours, the "colonies" are counted, Godzik says.

He explains that no one really knows why one beach closes because of pollution while another close by doesn't have the same high fecal coliform counts.

"It could be the currents.

"Something coming up from the South Shore may not go higher than Minot," he says. "Or the source might be at Minot beach."

Godzik says storm-water runoff is a non-point source of pollution.

Storm water runs over lawns and collects fecal matter from dogs and birds collects in storm drains which eventually finds it's way to the ocean. Failing septic systems can also be a source of pollution.

Godzik is careful to point out that high fecal coliform counts are indictors of pollution but don't necessary indicate there's a hazard out there.

"Beaches are closed as a safety precaution," he says.

Testing for "raw sewage" that could harbor the Hepatitis A virus has to be more precise than current testing — which looks at total fecal coliform.

Godzik says the colder the water is — the less likely fecal coliform bacteria will grow.

Water quality in Cohasset has been "very good" so far this summer, he says.

Most tests have shown levels of under 25 parts per 100 milliliters. In the first week in June, the harbor revealed counts of more than 100.

Godzik says there's an "unwritten policy" to retest if counts go over 180.

If Cohasset should close at beach, the health department tells the lifeguards and posts no-swimming signs. It also notifies adjacent towns, Godzik says.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

DON'T COUNT ON ORAL PROMISE

QUESTION: I am about purchase a new home. The builder promised that everything wrong will be taken care of and his handshake will save a lot of paperwork. Should I trust him?

ANSWER: Many a business agreement has been made with a handshake and enforced by the courts. Buy when it comes to the never-never world of real estate, you cannot and should not rely on oral promises. In fact, the law in all states specifically requires that all agreements and conditions relative to the sale of real estate specifically be in writing to be enforceable. The way to put teeth into oral promises is to insist that everything significant be put in writing.

❑ Gerard Keating sure makes the news this week ... in Springfield, MA, the first Massachusetts Senior Olympics was held June 26 and 27. Gerard made a new record in the 70-74 5,000 meters racewalk, leading all the way, then had to return to Cohasset to help in the Harborfest activities.

Ellery Clark stayed for the entire meet and was delighted to hear he had set a meet record of seven gold medals. His wins came in the age group of 80-84, in the 5,000 meters racewalk, 1,500 meters racewalk, 200 and 400 meter dashes, 1,500 meters run, discus and the running long jump (his dad was the first Olympic champ at Athens in this event). The mayor of Springfield announced Springfield would again sponsor the meet next year, and Coach MacFarlane of the New England Patriots was the guest speaker. Everyone had a super time, including Joanne Ramsden of Scituate, who accompanied Clark and is a prominent B.A.A. marathon runner of six Boston marathons. She is a pianist for So. Weymouth Eastern Nazarene Church.

❑ Boy, does the Cohasset Sailing Club have news ... as most know it is a super organization, with a beautiful location and great instructors, with friendly people all around. They kicked off their season with a hot-dog jamboree for the kids and their families, which was free, thanks to Carmin at the Strawberry Parfait.

Sunday, the 12th, was "Fun in the Sun" from 1 to 4:30 p.m. for kids, members, and any others interested in the club or sailing. Participants just bring life jackets and the instructors do the rest.

And, all you members or potential members, set aside Aug. 9, that's the date for the club's annual lobster bake. More information later on that "yummy" event.

Welcome to the world to Lars Arne Gjesteby who arrived May 12; he weighed in at 7 lbs. 5 oz., 20 ins. Lars' happy parents are Rolf and Pamela Gjesteby of Stowe, MA. His proud grandparents are Charles and Terry Gargaly of Wallingford, CN and Arne and Martha Gjestebry of Cohasset. Lars joins his two-year-old sister Erika. Come and visit us soon, Lars!

❑ Hats off to Ann L. O'Connell who received a master of business administration degree from the Darden School at the University of Virginia during Final Exercises May 17 in Charlottesville. Ann holds an undergraduate degree from Wellesley College, and will assume a position as Associate S&T with Morgan Stanley & Company, Inc., in London, England.

❑ We also salute Michelle M. Manning, who earned her BBA in Business Administration Management Conc. from the University of Massachusetts, Lowell.

❑ Hope Gaston has qualified for the spring semester honor roll at the Holderness School. In order to qualify for honors a student must have at least a B average and be recognized for outstanding effort in all courses. Hope is a freshman, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Gaston III of Jerusalem Road.

❑ Sara Bishop has been named to the Plymouth State College President's List for achieving a grade point average of 3.7 or better during the spring semester of the 1991-92 academic year.

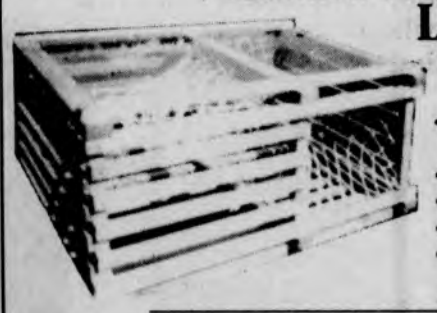
❑ Hats off to one of our favorite neighbors, Jason Marsac, of 32 Red Gate Lane, who received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Hamilton College in commencement exercises May 24. Jason majored in public policy and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy A. Marsac.

❑ Speaking of favorites, how about Dan Pompeo? We all know of his superior athletic prowess (awesome) and now we can tell you that he earned himself a spot on the Babson College Spring 1992 Dean's List.

We are proud of you Dan!

❑ Finally, the last bit of college news for this week. Denison University junior Mary "Erin" Monaghan, daughter of Mary Eleanor P. Monaghan of 80 Wheelwright Farm is returning from studying in Cork, Ireland, for the spring semester. Erin, a 1989 CHS grad is an English major at Denison. A member of the Student Activities Committee, she also has participated in the student/faculty dance concerts at Denison. She plays rugby and is a member of the Delta Delta Delta Sorority.

❑ Hey folks! Don't miss Cohasset's own Ellery Clark speaking from Athens, Geece at 9 p.m., July 23 on Channel 44 WGBX.



Mr. Clark talks about the first American Olympic track team of 1896 where his father won two 'silver' medals. Mr. Clark explains that silver represented first place in that Olympics.

❑ JoAnn M. Haynes graduated cum laude with a bachelor of arts degree from Emmanuel College in Boston recently, and we applaud her! JoAnn completed a double major in history and sociology, and is the wife of William E. Haynes and the mother of Hilary, Robin and Lauren. She was listed in Who's Who amoung Students in American Universities and Colleges, was named a Sr. Marie Barry Scholar, signifying a grade point average of 3.5 or better while at Emmanuel College, and is a member of Phi Alpha Theta, the national honor society in history. Seventh graders honored

Amanda Lang and Cara McKenney from Cohasset Junior High School were honored for their outstanding verbal and/or mathematical ability discovered in the 1992 annual Talent Search conducted by The Johns Hopkins University Center for Talented Youth in Baltimore.

The seventh grade honor students, who scored well above the mean for high school seniors, received certificates of merit at the state level in an awards ceremony June 14 at Boston University. Last fall public and private schools in Massachusetts identified more than 2,500 students who qualified for the Talent Search and took the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) in January.

'Gimme 5' winner

Connor Avery, a second grader at the Osgood School in Cohasset, has won a $50 grocery gift certificate from Stop & Shop Supermarket. Connor Avery is one of thousands of youngsters throughout Massachusetts who became eligible to win grocery certificates for their family by fulfilling pledges taken as part of the "Gimme 5!" program.

"Gimme 5!" is a creative new nutrition program developed by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health's (DPH) Chronic Disease Prevention Program to encourage healthy eating among young children and their families. Second graders in 140 participating schools pledged to eat five servings of fruit and vegetables every day for a week. (One serving is 1/2 cup of cooked vegetable, fresh or canned fruit, or fruit juice; 1 cup of raw vegetable; or 1/4 cup of dried fruit.)

Stop & Shop Supermarket donated fresh produce to help participating teachers introduce the children to a variety of new fruits and vegetables through classroom taste tests. Stop & Shop Supermarket also donated discount coupons for the children's families and $50 gift certificates for the lucky winners of the "Gimme 5 and Win!" drawing that ended the program.

"Gimme 5! started out as a small pilot project that grew rapidly, thanks to the enthusiasm of participating teachers and the generous contributions of supermarkets like Stop & Shop's. Their comments about this year's program will help Susan McAlpine, the MDPH "Gimme 5!" coordinator, improve the program for next year. "We're developing a stronger home component for next year," McAlpine said. "We want to get the whole family involved in eating a variety of fruits and vegetables each day as part of a healthy diet."

The "Gimme 5!" nutrition pledge program is funded by a grant from the National Cancer Institute and is intended to promote a high-fiber, low-fat diet among children to help reduce their risk of developing certain cancers and chronic diseases in their adult years.

New mural painted

Several afternoons recently Cohasset High School students, under the guidance of high school art teacher Coleen Lucas, created a mural on the side of Tedeschi's, Main Street, in Cohasset village.

The wall, on the side of the building owned by Pilgrim Co-operative bank, faces an empty lot. The new mural is alongside an earlier mural "Spring Garden," painted two years ago through a combination of efforts by the Village Renaissance, Lucas, and high school students.

Later this summer, Pilgrim Co-op Bank will paint the entire wall around the murals to help frame them and beautify the area.

Cohasset Savings and Loan Bank owns the empty lot and paid for the plantings in the garden in the center of the lot, recently planted by Phil Carney. Carney is maintaining the flowers with watering help from the town park crews. This is the second year that Carney has given his time and effort toward helping create an oasis of beauty in a once littered area.

This year's effort, sponsored again by the Village Renaissance and supported in part by contributions from village merchants, is entitled "Summer Garden." The mural was suggested and planned by 9th grader Julia Workman.

Young authors shine

By Luke Caldwell and Steven Sceery
Special to the Mariner

Mrs. Whitley's Fifth Grade English class has recently completed small books consisting of at least four pages. You could write about anything you wanted to. Some of the books were very long. The topics ranged from mystery to fantasy and satire to sci-fi. The books were intriguing, funny, bizzare, and adventurous.

Bob Morgan's story for example, was about people who traveled across Minnesota into Canada, The Trekkers. Sean Parkinson's was about aliens who landed on Earth and steal people's cookies, The Invasion of the Cookie Snatchers. And Nick Herzog's was about a kid who fell into a terrible batting slump in baseball, The Incredible Slump.

Mrs. Whitley's English class is very proud of their small books.

Cosby to perform

The fine art of gerrymandering

It won't take a hard core cynic to look at the new map of congressional districts in Massachusetts and exclaim:

"What hath the pols wrought now!"

Why is Braintree in one district and Quincy and Weymouth in another when the only connection between Quincy and Weymouth without going through Braintree is by sea?

Will it take longer for Gerry Studds to travel from one end of his district to the other, Provincetown to North Attleboro, than it will take an SST to cover the distance between Kennedy to Shannon?

What do Taunton and South Boston have in common that calls for putting them both in the custody of Joe Moakley?

If it's any comfort to you it's called "gerrymandering" and it got it's name right here in Massachusetts during a redistricting fight 180 years ago.

It is best described by an observer of that day as "reshaping of district lines so as to place large numbers of the opposition in one district which they could surely carry and thereby subtracting their minority strength from several other districts."

And you thought Jim Curley invented the political fix!

The governor of Massachusetts at the time (1812) was an old revolutionary named Elbridge Gerry, who was, incidentally, a distance relative of Gerry Studds, who is undergoing the process of "gerrymandering" right now.

Gerry (Elbridge, not Studds) once suggested a law making "contempt of governor" the equal of contempt of court and he welcomed the War of 1812 by declaring that the country had been at peace for so long it was "degenerating into a mere nation of traders."

He happened to be governor of the Democratic-Republican (as opposed to Federalist) persuasion when it came time to redistrict the Bay State's senatorial districts in the wake of the census of 1810.

The problem presented to Gerry and his Dem-Reps — the very problem confronting Governor Weld today — was to find the proper balance of big city Dem-Reps and small town Federalists to give the Dem-Reps the largest possible majority in the state senate.

This was accomplished in Essex County by using the heavy Dem-Rep vote in Marblehead in such a manner as to override Federalist majorities in 11 smaller towns.

The result was a geographical absurdity that skirted around the inland edge of the county with Chelsea and Marblehead at one end and Salisbury at the other.

When the Federalists were shown a map of the new district, one of them— some say the artist Gilbert Stuart and some say cartoonist Elkanah Tisdale — sketched in a head, wings and claws on the monstrosity.

"That will do for a salamander," he said.

"No," said someone else. "A gerrymander."

The sketch, attributed to Tisdale, appeared in the Boston Gazette, and the word "gerrymander" was born.

Gerry did his "gerrymandering" so well that, in the election of April, 1812, Dem-Reps elected 29 senators to 11 for the Federalists despite a statewide popular vote that went 51,766 for the Federalists and 50,164 for the Dem-Reps.

The "gerrymander" lasted only as long as it took for the Federalists to win back the legislature in 1813 and it was repealed that June.

Gerry himself went on to be elected vice president to James Madison in 1812. The Madison-Gerry ticket won but they lost Gerry's home state of Massachusetts.

Meeting A New Friend

When we meet
He wants to say
Good-bye.
That's why making a new friend
Is hard.
We both feel shy
But we know
There's white clouds to climb
So we go on.
That's why making a new friend
Is hard.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS

	Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) 722-1646 Room 416B	Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) 722-2800 ext.7957 Room 134
(House and Senate) REDISTRICTING (H 5959) — House 96-58, Senate 24-13 approved and Governor Weld signed the new congressional redistricting plan reducing the state's delegation from eleven to ten. The plan makes major changes and places one incumbent in each district while eliminating the Eleventh District represented by retiring Congressman Brian Donnelly. It also creates a Merrimack Valley district and establishes a new Eighth District comprised of 38 percent minority voters. Supporters acknowledged there were major problems with the plan but noted it is a compromise necessary to meet deadlines and prevent the federal courts from establishing the districts. Opponents objected to many provisions and argued the plan will have a devastating effect on many cities and towns and is simply unfair. (A "Yea" vote is for the plan. A "Nay" vote is against it).	N	Y
(House) NEW CANDIDATES (H 5959) — House 80-72, rejected an amendment giving additional candidates fourteen days to get the 2000 signatures necessary to run for one of the congressional seats. Amendment supporters said this will open up the process to new candidates and give voters more choices. Opponents said candidates have had ample opportunity to enter the race and argued the amendment will confuse and delay the process. (A "Yea" vote is for the 14-day amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it).		N
(House and Senate) TERM LIMITS/GRADUATED TAX (H 4001) — Constitutional Convention rejected 107-81 (House rejected 93-59, Senate favored 22-14) a motion to place a proposed constitutional amendment establishing a graduated state income tax at the end of the convention agenda. Supporters said moving this proposal and 22 others to the end of the agenda is the only way to move the proposed amendment limiting terms of elected officials back to the beginning of the agenda and ensure it is considered this year. They noted the Supreme Judicial Court has determined that term limits for state officeholders are constitutional. Some opponents acknowledged they oppose term limits and want to leave the "limits" proposal at the end of the agenda. Others said they support a graduated income tax and want to leave the tax amendment at the top of the agenda. (A "Yea" vote is for moving the graduated income tax proposal to the end of the agenda. A "Nay" vote is against moving it to the end).	Y	Y
(House and Senate) GRAD TAX AMENDMENT (H 4001) — Constitutional Convention rejected 147-39 (House rejected 125-26, Senate rejected 22-13) an amendment to the proposed constitutional amendment establishing a graduated income tax in Massachusetts and requiring rates for taxpayers in higher income brackets to be higher than those taxpayers in lower-income brackets. The amendment would require the graduated rate of taxation to be the same regardless of the source of the income and allows the legislature to base the graduated tax on a percentage of an individual's federal tax liability. Amendment supporters said this will prohibit higher taxes on older citizens' savings accounts. They argued it would also simplify the state tax and save money by reducing the work force in the Department of Revenue. Opponents said the amendment will delay or prevent passage of the proposal and said changes like this can be made through other legislation without jeopardizing the entire proposal. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment requiring the rate to be the same regardless of source of income and basing the state tax on the federal. A"Nay" vote is against the amendment).	N	N

High scoring soccer squad clinches title

The Cohasset Boys 16-and-under soccer team defeated Marshfield by a score of 3-1 June 21, to clinch the Coastal League Championship.

This victory capped an undefeated regular season in which Cohasset posted a record of 11-0-1, a significant accomplishment considering the team failed to win a single game during last year's campaign. Cohasset recorded six shutouts and every player tallied at least one goal as they out-scored their opponents by an 80 to 10 margin.

Cohasset was led by the consistent play of goalkeepers Chris Goodman and Chris McKenna who combined on a goals-against average of .66 which led the league.

Anchoring the defense were sweeper Maximilie Nivaud, stopper David Northnagle, and wingbacks Chris Adams, Brian Duffy, Tom Greco, and Patrick Reynolds.

The midfield was dominated by the play of Tim Brister, Doug Ellinger, Charlie Endris, Ryan Freeman, Ben Redfield, and Scott Theriault. The team's frontline attack consisted of strikers Jim Magner, Mike Reynolds, Jeremiah Stevens, and Geoff Tosi.

By clinching the Coastal League, Cohasset earned the right to participate in the state-wide Tournament of Champions held 6/27 - 6/28 at UMASS Amherst. The team plays an exciting, high scoring brand of soccer which boded well for their chances in the tournament.

Cohasset was one of 12 teams from their age group across the state to be invited to play in the Tournament of Champions.

Cohasset placed first in the Southeastern bracket, winning three straight games defeating Upton-Menden 2-0, and Walpole 2-1 on Saturday, June 27. And on Sunday, June 28, they blanked Weymouth, 2-0.

Cohasset faced West Springfield in the semi-final. In a tough match, West Springfield was able to capitalize on a couple of lucky breaks to seal a 3-1 victory.

Cohasset 16-and-Under boys soccer squad recently clinched the Coastal League Championship. Congratulations guys!

Soccer playoff is a great contest

Cohasset's undefeated powerhouse met an outstanding Plymouth team in a game that will be remembered as one of soccer's all-time great contests in recent youth soccer playoff action.

Plymouth dominated the opening minutes of play, but their offensive barrage was frustrated by the superb goaltending of Cohasset's Kelley O'Donnell. The prolific Cohasset offense then kicked into gear and proceeded to score three goals before the half; two by inside forward Kathleen Fitzsimmons and one by Cara McKenney. Cohasset led 3-1 at halftime.

Plymouth got the powerful wind at their backs in the second half and kept relentless pressure on Cohassset's talented defense. Center fullback Ashley Brister and outside backs Katie Anderson and Shelley Vanderweil played spectacular defense, thwarting numerous Plymouth attacks. After Plymouth scored to close the gap to 3-2, Cohasset's Andrea Freeman highlighted her recovery from a pre-season injury with a lightning-fast run down right wing to score and put Cohasset up 4-2.

Plymouth notched two more before regulation time, sending the match into overtime. Cohasset's midfielders, Megan McNamara, Liz Bestick, Allie Ritts and Jessie Sandell, fought a terrific battle for control in the first overtime. At the six-minutes mark, Andrea Freeman won a struggle for the ball on the right wing and sent a perfect pass to Cara McKenney who rifled a shot from 16 yards out into the lower left corner of the Plymouth goal. The overflow crowd from Cohasset erupted, expecting this goal to be the game-winner.

This was not a sudden death format, however, and Plymouth answered back in the second overtime period tying the score at 5-5 and necessitating a penalty kick shootout which Plymouth won.

"This is a terrific group of athletes," said coach Brian McKenney after the game. "Every girl on the team contributed this year. Emily Henderson put in an all-star performance all season. Liz Mahoney, Andrea Grew and Christine Burns came off the bench and outplayed Plymouth's first stringers. Erin Devine and Maureen Murphy did terrific jobs playing both midfield and fullback positions. Athena Dedes made brilliant passes and sixth-grader Elana Tosi played on a level with the leagues best forwards.

Sports physicals required

A physical exam is required for all students planning to play boys' soccer and football or girls' soccer and field hockey.

Dr. Robert T. Sceery, School Physician, will be in the Health Room at the Junior/Senior High School on the following dates:

- Boys soccer and football, Thursday, August 27, 1:30 p.m.
- Girls Field hockey and soccer, Friday, August 28, 9:15 a.m.

This will be the only time physicals will be offered by the school before practice begins Monday, August 31. If you are unable to take advantage of the physical at this time, you will need to be examined by your family physician and get a note stating that you are in good physical condition to participate in athletics.

No student will be allowed to begin practice until he/she has had a physical examination.

Beach party is a hit with Polish sea scouts

Thanks to a Polish/American connection, Cohasset hosted some 'Tall Ship' guests over the weekend.

Eight sea scouts from the three-masted schooner Zawisza Czarney — which took part in the Tall Ships parade — came to town and were treated to an American-style beach party/barbecue on Bassings Beach, Sunday afternoon.

Josh Preston serves Polish sea scout, Wojtek Kueicki, an American-style burger. Eight sea scouts from the schooner Zawisza Czarny were guests in Cohasset Sunday.

Cohasset resident Marek Laas, whose son Chris is member of Troop 28, notified troop leaders that sponsors for the Polish scouts were needed. Lass is president of the Polish American Congress.

"We jumped at the opportunity," recalls Taffy Nothnagle, a scout parent.

Although the troop had anticipated hosting 30 scouts, only eight were allowed to come — the others had to stayed on board ship to adhere to a strict schedule of watches. The eight scouts (two boys and six girls) stayed overnight with four Cohasset families.

The sea scouts spend about six months on the schooner and are trained in all aspects of sailing including maritime history, boat building and celestial navigation. The scouts even have to write about their experiences for their local newspapers.

Monday Troop 28 and the Polish scouts headed to Boston and the State House where they met Lt. Gov. Paul Celucci.

While posing for a group photograph on the grand staircase, the Polish sea scouts sang several sea chanties.

"It was wonderful," Nothnagle recalls. "People were lining the balcony to listen."

Then the Polish scouts took their American counterparts on board the Zawisza Czarny for a 2-1/2 harbor cruise.

Renata Ptak gets ready to toss the ball at the Polish/American scout beach party on Bassings Beach, Sunday afternoon.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS SUPERIOR COURT NORFOLK, ss.

No. 92-1752

To PHILIP H. SMITH TRUSTEE OF MAIN STREET TRUST and to all persons entitled to the benefit of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended.

GREETING:

Cohasset Savings Bank Claiming to be the holder of a mortgage covering real property situated in 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, County of Norfolk, Massachusetts, given by Philip H. Smith Trustee of Main Street Trust to Cohasset Savings Bank dated April 6, 1988 and recorded in the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in book 7926 page 537 has filed with said court a bill in equity for authority to foreclose said mortgage in the manner following: by entry to foreclose and by exercise of power of sale set forth in said mortgage.

If you are entitled to the benefits of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended, and you object to such foreclosure, you or your attorney should file a written appearance and answer in said court at Dedham on or before August 31, 1992 or you may be forever barred from claiming that such foreclosure is invalid under said act.

Witness, Robert L. Steadman, Esquire, Chief Justice of our Superior Court, the 9th day of July in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ninety two.

Nicholas Barbadoro
Clerk.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT NORFOLK DIVISION

DOCKET NO. 92P1581E1

Estate of DOROTHY E. LUCKETT late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that JOYCE L. STURDY of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on August 5, 1992.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefor, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the twenty-ninth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-two.

Swim for heart

The week of July 21 the Cohasset Swim Club participates in a Swim For Heart to benefit the American Heart Association. The money raised will go to continue research, education and community programs.

Anyone interested should contact Heather St. Ang 617-383-9463.

Book signing, July 23

Author, Anne Rivers Siddons, will sign her new book, Colony, Thursday, July 23, from 3 to 5 p.m. at Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset.

Anne Rivers Siddons is the author of seven previous novels, including Outer Banks, King's Oak, Peachtree Road and Homeplace. She and her husband Heyward, live in Atlanta, and spend their summers at a colony in Maine.

Please call Buttonwood Books and Toys 383-2665 for more information.

Register for hoop

The Cohasset Recreation Department accepts registrations for boys' and girls' Basketball Camp, scheduled for the week of Monday, July 20.

Basketball Camp will be held at Cohasset High School as follows: 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. ages 12-17; and 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. ages 9-12 Monday, July 20 thru Friday, July 24.

Directing Basketball Camp will be head varsity basketball coaches Paul Carroll and Arnie Rappucci. Tuition is $80 for the week and includes a camp t-shirt.

Discounts are available for 2nd and subsequent children registering from a family. To register, please stop in at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 1st floor, Town Hall, or call 383-6791. Non-residents will be accepted for this camp.

Carillon concerts continue

The 68th annual series of summer Carillon Recitals are given on the 57-bell Cohasset Carillon in the tower of St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset on Sunday evenings through through August 30, at 6 p.m.

The public is invited to attend free of charge, and may bring picnic suppers, lawn chairs, and blankets. Printed programs will be distributed on Cohasset Common, and will also be available in St. Stephen's Courtyard on Highland Avenue. The best listening places will be noted on the reverse of the program. The concerts occur rain or shine, and in case of bad weather, the bells may be heard from parked cars.

Milford Myhre, Carilloneur of the Bok Tower, Lake Wales, Florida, plays July 19, assisted in a carillon duet by Sally Slade Warner, Carillonneur of Cohasset. July 26, Tood Fair of the Oude Kerk in Amsterdam, The Netherlands, plays; Frank DellaPenna, Carillonneur of Washington Memorial Chapel at Valley Forge perform on August 2. August 9 the carillonneur is Judson Maynard of Texas Tech University, Lubbock, Texas; August 16, Janet Tebbel of the First United Methodist Church of Germantown, Pennsylvania; August 23, George Matthew Jr. of the First Presbyterian Church in Stamford, CT. The final recital August 30 will be given by Sally Slade Warner.

Following each recital, visitors may climb the 45 steps to the playing cabin to see the keyboard. For further information, phone St. Stephen's Church at 627/383-1093, or Sally Slade Warner at 508/475-2599.

Museums are open

The Cohasset Historical Society's two summer museums at Elm Street, Cohasset center, now are open for their summer season.

The Maritime Museum and Capt. John Wilson Historical House are open each afternoon except Mondays from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The adjacent Capt. Wilson House, furnished as an 1810 Cohasset home, is the site of this summer's series of exhibits by the society's Costumes Committee. Rotating exhibits, changed monthly, show some of the many 19th and early 20th century examples of fine clothing found in the society's extensive costumes collection. Admission to Cohasset Historical Society museums is free.

Tenth Congressional District changes shape . . .

12th District, represented by Hastings Keith. Studds beat Keith two years later, and Weymouth remained until 1982 when it went over to Donnelly.

The shift upset a lot of plans, particularly of those who were running for the open Donnelly seat and who now have to face an entrenched incumbent in Studds, a 20-year man in the National House.

But Studds, who stands to become chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries if he is reelected, also loses his most important stronghold, New Bedford, to Frank.

One candidate for Donnelly's seat who plans to challenge Studds is Sen. Paul D. Harold of Quincy, who loses his Braintree base to Moakley.

"Based on population and past voter turnout," he said, "the population base of the 10th District is closer to Quincy and Weymouth than it is to the Cape. I know I can do well north of Plymouth. From Plymouth down it will be a battle."

At last reports, Norfolk County District Attorney William D. Delahunt of Quincy had not decided whether he would continue his run against the incumbent Studds.

Delahunt lost a good deal of his Norfolk County base, except for Quincy, Weymouth, Holbrook and Avon, in the redistricting, and two strong candidates from Quincy could only benefit Studds by dividing the northern vote.

John M. Shields, the Brockton businessman who was also seeking Donnelly's old seat, was faced with a unique problem when the Weld redistricting plan split Brockton in two.

Shields' home is located in Moakley's district, but he appears to have chosen to run against Studds since candidates do not necessarily have to live in the districts they choose to represent as long as the voters stand for it.

Others who will probably seek the Democratic nomination along with Studds include Francis R. Powers of Scituate, registrar of deeds for Plymouth County, and William G. Zissulis of Barnstable.

Out of the running now are Boston city councillor Thomas Menino and Eleanor Mulloney LeCain of Dorchester, who landed in Moakley's district.

On the Republican ballot, primary voters will have a choice of Michael K. Crossen of Mashpee, Robert E. King of Plymouth and Daniel W. Daly of Hingham, who has the support of Governor Weld.

Penny Reid, a member of the Whitman finance committee and a Republican activist, took herself out of the race and threw her support to Crossen.

Michael Umina of Mashpee is the candidate of the Independent Voters Party, and Jon Bryan of Marstons Mills, who lost twice to Studds as a Republican, is returning as an unenrolled candidate.

Elsewhere south of Boston, the district was carved out in such a manner as to give gerrymandering a bad name.

Moakley, who hails from South Boston, now has a district that runs from Southie west to Medfield and south to Taunton, including Milton, Randolph, Braintree, Canton and Stoughton.

Frank's Fourth District runs from Brookline, south through Sharon and Reboboth to New Bedford and then turns north to include the Bridgewaters, Hanson and Pembroke.

The district now represented by Rep. Joseph D. Early of Worcester has been dubbed the Ivy League district since it runs from Princeton on the north to Dartmouth on the south. (Harvard is in Rep. Chester G. Atkins' district.)

Harold called the redistricting plan "an embarrassment."

"It decimated the South Shore," he said. "We now have three districts, some so contorted that they cut across existing communities of interest. They were just strung out to protect incumbents and possibly give the governor five Republican seats in the state."

Harold voted against the plan in the Senate as did Republican Sens. Robert Hedlund of Weymouth and Edward Kirby of Whitman and Democratic Sens. Michael Creedon of Brockton and William Keating of Sharon.

Democratic Sen. Paul White of Boston voted for it.

Those voting against it in the House included Democrats Suzanne Bump of Braintree, Paul Haley of Weymouth, Ronald Mariano of Quincy, Michael Morrissey of Quincy, Stephen Tobin of Quincy, Frank Hynes of Marshfield, Janet O'Brien of Hanover and John Cruz of West Bridgewater and Republicans Jacqueline Lewis of Bridgewater and Michael Sullivan of Abington.

Those voting for it in the House included Democrats William Galvin of Canton, Louis Kafka of Sharon and M. Joseph Manning of Milton; Republicans Peter Forman of Plymouth, Robert Kraus of Kingston, Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset and Charles Mann of Hanson.

Whistle stop in Cohasset Village?

If Cohasset wants a train station in the village, it should speak up now, officials say.

Town planners are unanimous that the town should reexamine where the railroad station will be situated if the Greenbush line of the Old Colony Railroad becomes a reality.

Chairman Al Moore said it's not a question of if but when the train comes.

"The train will go through the (town) center whether there's a station here or not," Moore said.

Planners will set up a public hearing at the town hall auditorium in the fall to examine the issue.

Current plans show the station and parking spaces for 300 cars at the old Wintergarden skating rink on Rte. 3A.

Moore said the board feels that Cohasset might miss "a tremendous opportunity to get a station in the downtown area."

Selectmen Chairman Jane Goedecke cautioned both boards that the discussion was theoretical.

"We are talking philosophy and concept here," she said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby recalled

Trapping raccoons can create problems

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

When Cohasset residents wake up to toppled trash cans and garbage strewn over the yard — it usually means just one thing: a hungry raccoon (or two or three or more) has found the pickings to its liking.

So frustrated people have taken matters into their own hands and are trapping the pesky creatures, animal control officer Bill Quigley said.

"With the over population of raccoons, seemingly more and more people are going out to buy traps to relocate the raccoons and that can cause problems," he said.

The traps most often used are "Have-a-Heart" or humane traps that don't harm the animal.

Although humane traps are readily available in hardware stores, trapping wild animals without a license is a misdemeanor in Massachusetts.

David Hooper, general counsel for the state Division of Fisheries and Wildlife and Environmental Law Enforcement, doesn't see a dichotomy.

"You can get a fishing pole or buy a car but you can't fish or drive without a license," he said.

Violators could be prosecuted and face fines of $50 to $100, he said.

Steel jaw leg-hold traps are illegal in Massachusetts when used on dry-land and padded jaw leg-hold traps are currently unregulated, Hooper said.

John Comeau, environmental police officer in Hingham, said transporting raccoons from one lo-

Tax exempt are not fee exempt

Selectmen took a hard line Monday night and refused to waive town fees for the Cohasset Community Center and Cohasset Housing Authority.

Representatives from both non-profit groups appeared before the board to ask that permit fees be waived for their upcoming construction projects.

The community center is planning a $175,000 addition; the fees for the project are about $1750. The housing authority is rehabilitating the Trettis House, near the fire station, for $37,535 with permits fees to the town of about $375.

Selectmen said they were sticking by a policy approved by the board in August 1990 when the board voted

The big dig may hit Cohasset

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Cohasset's clams and mussels may get a wake-up call sometime soon.

The division of marine fisheries, which regulates the shellfish industry, may take steps later this year that could result in reopening the town's shellfish beds for harvesting.

Former shellfish constable Dave Marks said it would be a welcomed change.

"I get calls all the time from people wanting to dig," he said.

The clams and mussels along the coast have been resting undisturbed since 1989, when the division shut down all digging operations because there was not enough manpower to perform a federally-mandated survey for shellfish areas.

Neil Churchill, a marine biologist with the division of marine fisheries, said the town did not seem willing to commit the necessary resources to aid the division in performing the "sanitary survey."

"We need a number of men to do a sanitary survey, and local knowledge is important.

"At that time, it didn't seem Cohasset was interested in doing anything with us, so we dropped them to the bottom of the list," Churchill said.

Scott 'The Cat' Anderson rocks to 50's beat

mariner visits

At 38, Scott "The Cat" Anderson is too young to be a true product of the 1950's.

When performers like Elvis and Buddy Holly topped the charts — Anderson was only five years old.

Then Anderson had a passion for Tonka trucks and a penchant for rock n' roll.

Today, not all that much has changed.

Tonka trucks — now classics and favorites of his one-year-old son — are lined up along the floor in his Brewster Road home.

And the love Anderson has for the rock 'n roll music of 40 years ago is as strong as ever.

A guitarist and vocalist — rock 'n roll is Anderson's life's work — and he wouldn't have it any other way.

After graduating from Cohasset High in 1972, Anderson — in a band called Scott "Elvis"Anderson and the Rebels —made the rounds in places like the

Cohasset's week

A&B in Hull

Hull police said they arrested a juvenile at about 10:20 p.m. July 16 for assault and battery on a Cohasset youth at a carnival in that town.

They said a fight broke out at the carnival and the detail officer at the carnival called for a cruiser which transported the juvenile.

Officer Matos still out

Police Officer Lisa Matos will be out until at least August 10 with facial injuries she sustained in the line of duty when a rape suspect struck her in the face, Sgt. Brian Noonan said.

Noonan said Matos had a cerebral concussion; a possible hairline orbital fracture; and a chipped tooth. Matos' injuries required stitches.

"She was messed up pretty good," Noonan said.

The suspect, Robert A. Jason, 31, is still at large. Noonan said warrants have been issued nationwide for his arrest. Jason, who last known address is Hull, is charged with aggravated rape; burglary and assault in a dwelling; and assault and battery on a police officer (two counts).

Matos and fellow Officer John Small arrived at the victim's Cohasset apartment after responding to a call for help. The alleged assailant met the officers at the door; he punched Matos in the face and shoved Small, who pursued him on foot. Small was not injured.

Bank robber sought

Police are still chasing the man who robbed the Rockland Trust at Cushing Plaza, March 6.

Sgt. Brian Noonan said Cohasset police are working with bank robbery unit of the Boston Police and the FBI.

Noonan said the robbery investigation is "very alive." He said the Cohasset robbery may be related to a recent bank robbery in Atlanta, Georgia.

The lone gunman, wielding what appeared to be a semi-automatic 38 snub-nose revolver, robbed the Rockland Trust of more an $3,000 in cash.

Car fire misses mark

Police are still investigating recent incidents which they feel are part of an ongoing feud among area youths.

At 3:53 a.m., July 13, an attempted arson of a vehicle parked in a Jerusalem Road driveway, failed when the fire stopped short of reaching the car, Sgt. Brian Noonan said.

The door of the gas tank was open and there was a line of gasoline from the car to the end of the driveway, Noonan said.

In apparent retaliation at about 2 a.m., July 17, youths overturned a jeep parked in the driveway at 60 Forest Avenue, police said.

Complaints were dismissed in a May 15 incident on Jerusalem Road involving a car and a youth. Police think the May 15 incident is also related.

"The feud has been brewing since then," Noonan said.

Board appointments

Selectmen approved the following appointments:

- Helen "Taffy" Nothnagle, 36 Atlantic Ave., and Christopher Laugelle, 17 King St., to the Handicapped Commission.
- Frank Burk Ketcham, Jr., 29 Fernway, to the Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee.
- C. Christopher Ford, 145 Border St., to the Housing Partnership Committee.
- James R. Bonetti, 20 Parker Ave., to the Government Island Study Committee.

Engineering firm paid

Selectmen approved payment of $1,267 to Nucci Vine Associates, a waterfront engineering company, for work performed from Feb. 6 through July 3, 1992 related to the Cohasset harbor dredging project.

Appliance fee set

Effective immediately there will be a $10 fee per appliance for all residents disposing appliances containing chlorofluorocarbons (CFC's) in their cooling units. Examples of such appliances are refrigerators, air-conditioners and dehumidifiers.

New regulations require removal of CFC's before they are sent to the scrap dealer.

Library summer hours

Summer hours at the Paul Pratt Library, 106 South Main St., are: Monday and Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; closed Wednesday; Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

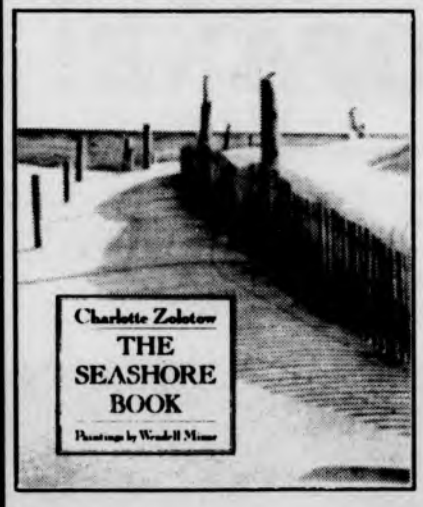
Tax abatements listed

The following homeowners will receive about $86,000 in property tax relief for FY'90 and FY'91.

The property owners recently settled a dispute with the town over property tax assessments for those two years.

About 55 homeowners brought at total of 75 cases before the appellate tax board after realizing a disproportion between the assessed valuation of their properties compared with others in town.



By settling the town will save a considerable amount in legal fees, officials said.

Abatements issued: Stephen B. Andrus, 37 Lothrop Lane, (1991) $1,188.00; Gerhard Birmann Birman, 107 Atlantic Avenue, (1990) $649.92, (1991) $670.23; Benjamin S. Whistle stop . . .

there was a lot of opposition to a downtown site when the matter was discussed several years ago.

"There was a consensus if the train went through, it would take parking away from businesses," she said.

Selectman Merle Brown said he prefers the center of town location for two reasons.

"There is a conservation area by the rink and it (station) would help the businesses in town," he said.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said he wasn't sure downtown parking could accommodate parking for a train station.

"I don't see how we could easily expand the parking," he said.

Sullivan said the town should have two stops — a small stop downtown and a larger stop at the skating rink.

Moore said discussions in the past were "colored" by opposition to the train. He said the hearing would encourage views from all sides.

"(This discussion) is not about whether or not you want the train but if we get a train what do we do with it," he said.

Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) officials say the Greenbush line could be built and in full service in late 1997.

Cohasset's museums are open for visitors

The Cohasset Historical Society's two summer museums at Elm Street, Cohasset center, now are open for their summer season.

The Maritime Museum and Capt. John Wilson Historical House are open each afternoon except Mondays from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Cohasset's history as a small New England seacoast village is portrayed in each of the two museum buildings.

The Maritime Museum contains collections of artifacts, pictures and charts relating to the town's 19th century "Age of Sail" when fishing and shipbuilding were an important part of its economy. Shipwrecks, lifesaving and the fascinating story of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse are some of the subjects covered, and models of 19th century sailing ships are on view. There also is a section devoted to general artifacts and collections relating to the early town in general. Stone tools of the early Indian tribes are displayed, as are antique school desks. Housewright's and cordwainer's tools can be seen among the numerous displays on the museum's upper floor.

The adjacent Capt. Wilson House, furnished as an 1810 Cohasset home, is the site of this summer's series of exhibits by the society's Costumes Committee. Rotating exhibits, changed monthly, show some of the many 19th and early 20th century examples of fine clothing found in the society's extensive costumes collection.

This year the society's museum shop is located at the Maritime Museum. Articles available include items relating to the history of Cohasset. Both volumes of the Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset, by Rev. E. V. Bigelow and by Burtram J. Pratt, are available, as is the biographical Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains by E. Pomeroy Collier. A Children's Coloring Book of Cohasset, by Barbara Conte, also is featured. This year's additions to the Historical Society's museum shop are two Cohasset-related tee shirts having designs, one marking the establishing of America's first volunteer lifeboat station at the town's Whitehead Point in 1807 by the Massachusetts Humane Society, and the other showing a replica of an 1842 Temperance Banner from Cohasset, the original of which is owned by the society. Admission to Cohasset Historical Society museums is free.

Raccoons . . .

cation to another should be discouraged.

"It just gives somebody else the headache," he said.

Quigley said he's been flooded with calls about raccoons this summer. He stressed that raccoons can be vicious.

"Raccoons are so used to seeing people but if people get too close to them they can lose a finger," he said. "A raccoon can kill a cat with no problem."

Quigley, who said raccoon problems this year are the worst he's seen in eight years on the job, said the only way to get rid of problem raccoons is to hire a professional trapper.

"If residents call my office, I can give them names of professional trappers who do the job the right way."

Quigley said one resident recently needed help when a skunk wandered into the trap. Another used an illegal leg-hold trap, he said.

Quigley sees the current distemper epidemic among raccoons as a way of thinning out the population before rabies reaches Massachusetts.

Authorities expect raccoon rabies to come through the southwest corner of the state near Springfield later this summer.

Quigley can be reached at 383-0037. People can also call the state environmental police coastal headquarters in Hingham at 727-0882, which can also put them in touch with professional trappers.

The big dig . . .

Cohasset was not alone. Three-hundred thousand acres of shellfish areas were closed in 1989 because there was not enough resources to perform the required sanitary surveys.

He added that the division concentrated its efforts on communities with shellfish beds which were already open and showed a commitment to keeping the beds open.

However, in a show of goodwill earlier this year, Cohasset contacted the division regarding its intention to upgrade its waste water treatment plant.

Upgrading the treatment plant would improve water quality in the harbor because more waste could be processed and less would overflow into the harbor area during times of wet weather.

Churchill said the division, which frequently shut down the town's clambeds in the 70s and 80s because of poor water quality, looks favorably upon any community effort to make shellfish environments cleaner.

He added that improving the waste-water treatment plant would improve shellfish environments in the harbor.

Churchill cautiously added that the town still needs to commit manpower to the division to perform the sanitary survey.

"We desperately need the town's help at this point—for the local expertise in the area," he said.

Churchill also warned against assumptions that performing a sanitary survey would ensure the beds would be opened.

The survey is necessary in order for the division to classify the shellfish area, however, that classification process does not mean an area will be open to harvesting, he said.

The division classifies shellfish areas three ways based on the concentration of fecal coliform bacteria in the water: prohibited, restricted and approved.

A prohibited classification would be warranted if there was more than 64 fecal colonies per 100 milliliters of water.

Fourteen or fewer fecal colonies per 100 milliliters of water warrants an approved classification, while a restricted classification results from 14 to 64 fecal colonies being present in 100 milliliters of water.

Cohasset's water results have been varied at best.

Churchill tested the water in Cohasset Harbor in 1990 and the results reflected unusually clean water which would have warranted an "approved" classification for the area shellfish beds.

The 1990 sample showed colony counts of 1.7 per 100 milliliters of water.

Conversely, water samples taken in 1988 and 1989 yielded fecal coliform counts which exceeded 64 counts per 100 milliliters of water.

Churchill said a sanitary survey would accurately reflect an average fecal colony count for the harbor.

Governor vetoes new aid for schools

Cohasset's legislators are mixed whether there are enough votes to override Governor William Weld's veto Monday of $185 million in new education funds.

Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) predicts the legislature will overturn the governor's veto.

"Definitely, the votes are there to override," Hedlund said Tuesday.

Hedlund said he planned to break with the governor and vote to override the veto.

Most legislators will go along with the override because, particularly in an election year, they won't want to be perceived as anti-education, he said.

The new education funds included $85 million for $100 per pupil aid, and $100 million in new Equal Education Opportunity Grant (EEOG) funds for communities which spend less than $5,000 per pupil which is about the state average.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray isn't sure the legislature has the votes to override the governor's veto.

Murray said she would support Weld's veto because although the funds would be earmarked for education — there are no guarantees the towns would actually see the money.

"The legislature can turn around and spend the money someplace else," she said.

Murray likened the current scenario to the gas tax, which was supposed to be "earmarked" for roads and bridges, and was "dipped into" for other things.

Murray said she supports more money for education but said the money should be tied to an education reform bill.

The Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA), a lobbying agency for cities and towns, urges support for the education aid.

The MMA said although it supports education reform — a reform bill cannot be implemented by September and the money is needed immediately.

School board chairman Barbara Bliss said the school committee hopes the legislature will override the governor's veto.

She said Cohasset would receive $100 per student or $110,000.

To receive the $100 per pupil aid, towns would be required to submit a plan on how they would spend the money.

Bliss said the state has cut local aid for years and the new education funds would put some of that back.

"I think every school district in the state is anxious to have that (override of Weld's veto) happen," she said.

Drama Club elects board

Cohasset Dramatic Club in its 71st Annual Meeting May 27 elected officers for the 1992-1993 season.

They are: Gayl Varallo of Cohasset, President; Joe Rota of Scituate, Vice President; Lisa Fichtner Pratt of Kingston, Treasurer; Julie Clarke of Norwell, Secretary. Also elected to the Board were Peggy Corrigan of Cohasset, Julia Szulerowski of Hanover, and Anita Aherne of Scituate. The club thanked its outgoing board members Yvonne Julian, Clark Young, Arthur Paquette for distinguished service during their 3-year terms. Also at the meeting were announced the October and December productions: "Wait Until Dark" and "Best Christmas Pageant Ever."

Membership in the club is open to anyone interested in theatre who pays dues and works in a production. Dues are $25 for couples, $15 for singles, and $5 for juniors (under 18). Members receive advance announcements of upcoming auditions, monthly newsletters, and season tickets to CDC plays, play readings and theatre-going parties.

Write CDC, P.O. Box 225, Cohasset, for application.

The Cat rocks to the '50s

Surf in Nantasket the Bamboo Lounge at the Cliff Hotel in Scituate.

After a few years, the band — known as the Scott Anderson Band — started working more regionally across New England at concerts and state fairs.

Then in the early 1980's, Anderson's manager introduced Anderson to blues guitarist Roy Buchanan, who asked Anderson to put a band together for him.

For three years, Anderson traveled all over North America as lead singer and guitarist for Buchanan, who was one of the finest blues guitar players ever, Anderson recalls. Anderson has also opened concerts for Ricky Nelson, Frankie Valli, the Four Seasons, Ventures, The Cars, Fabian, and Los Lobos.

But life on the road had its drawbacks including heavy use of alcohol and drugs.

Anderson retired from touring to get his life in order.

"I knew I wouldn't be alive much longer," he recalls.

Addiction later claimed the life of Buchanan, who committed suicide in 1988.

In addition to getting sober — Anderson took a 'real' job in the security for State Street Bank in Quincy. An unforeseen benefit of his new job was meeting his wife, Diane.

His self-imposed retirement from the music industry coincided with the economic downturn.

"The bottom dropped out of the music business like everything else," Anderson recalled.

Today, Anderson is "Mr. Mom" during the day — and at night, he can often be found playing with bands like Dave and the Shades and the All-Star Sha-na-na band.

mariner visits

In the near future, Anderson plans to record several Doc Pomus songs. Pomus wrote hits like "Suspicion," "Teenager in Love," and "Save the Last Dance for Me."

Pomus, who composed many of Elvis' hits, heard Anderson sing and liked his "interpretation" of Elvis songs.

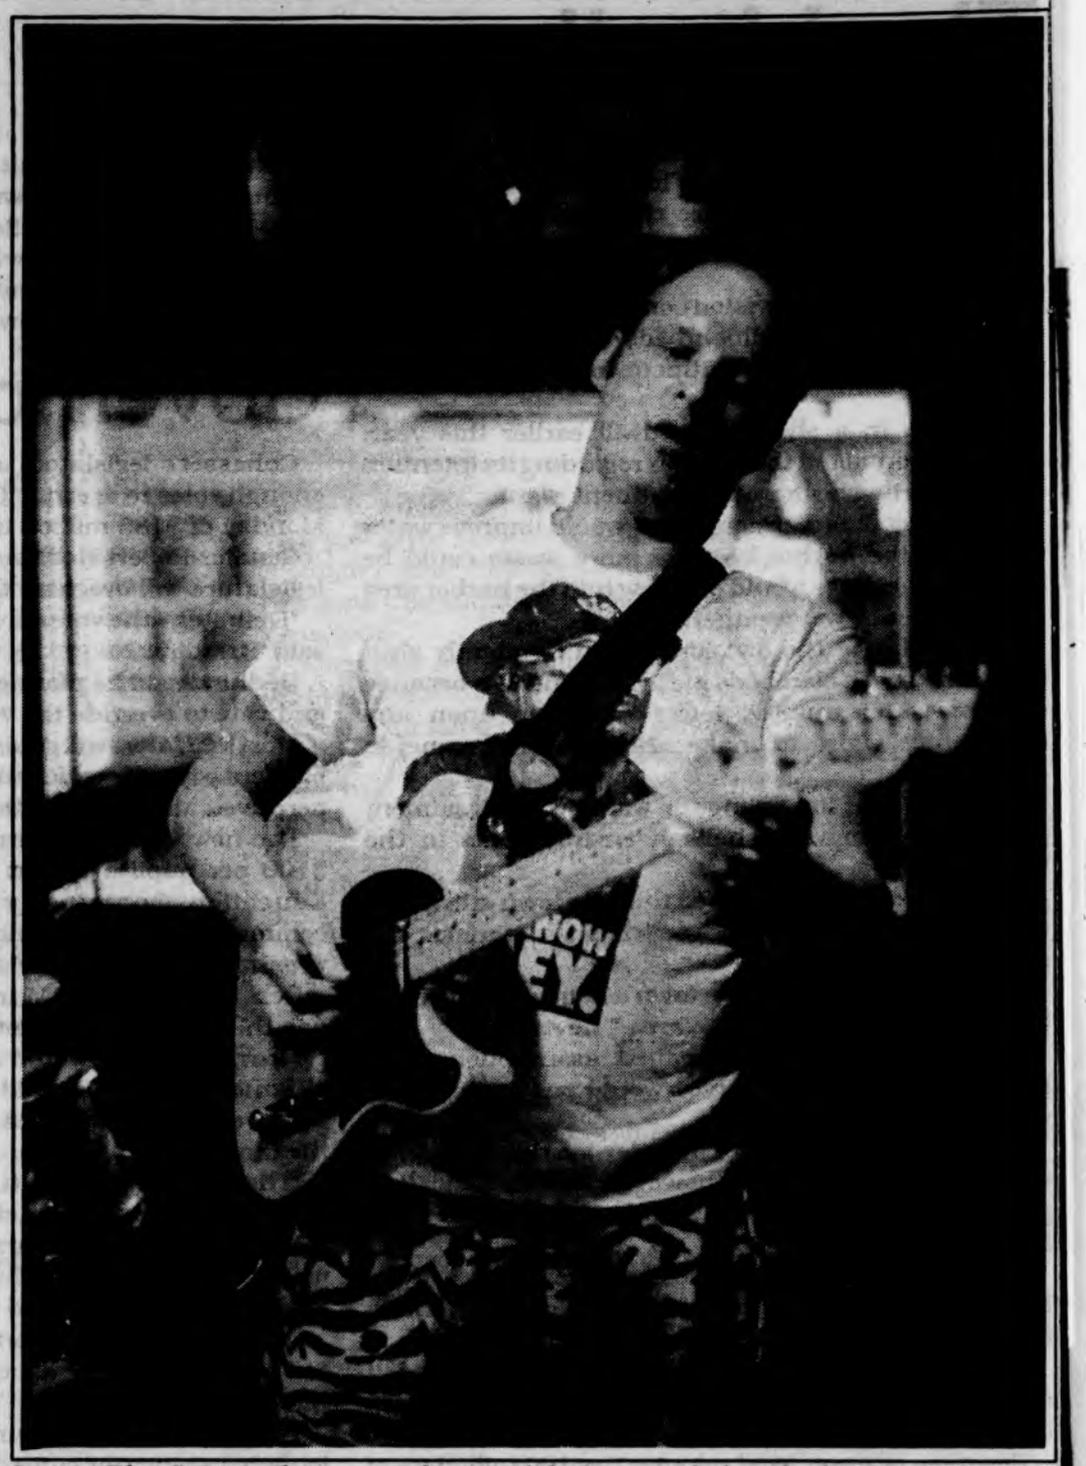
Pomus gave Anderson some of his unpublished compositions, which Anderson plans to record with the help of producer Barry Marshall. Plans are to bring out the original 50's feeling of the songs but with a modern sound.

"We'll send them to the right people and hope something good comes of it," he says.

But Anderson has been around long enough to know that success in the music industry has more to do with luck than ability.

"The most talented people I've ever played with have never made it," he says.

Anderson wouldn't mind breaking into the really big time — but as a seasoned musician and performer, his dreams are tempered with realism.



"I'm very happy with the success I've made in the music business," he says.

"I have a lovely wife," he adds. "And after all the places I've ever played — there's no where as nice as Cohasset."

Rock 'n Roll fans can see Anderson with Dave and the Shades at Elaine's in Hull, August 7, and at the Dry Dock in Hull, Sept. 3.

And August 26 Anderson will perform on the radio show Blues Before Sunrise with Dave Lavoie on WATD, 95.9 FM.

Fees not waived for non-profits . . .

unanimously not to waive fees for non-profit organizations as a matter of course.

In a July 26, 1990 memo to the board, Executive Secretary Greg Doyon noted that property tax exempt organizations in Cohasset receive free fire and police protection as well as road maintenance.

He said that user fees are one means of deriving revenue from otherwise property exempt groups in return for municipal benefits.

Selectman Merle Brown was the sole board member to support waiving the fee for the community center project.

Brown said the community center is available for all.

"I feel it's something the entire town gets use of," he said.

Glen Pratt of the community center said that the center "is not looking for a hand out." He said the planned addition would house the Council-on-Aging, a town group and would be leased to them for ten years at no charge.

"The only reason we are here is that this (addition) will clearly benefit the town for the next ten years," he said.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said not waiving fees is a philosophical issue.

"It has nothing to do with the community center and nothing to do with the COA," he said.

The board also denied the housing authority's request to waive the fee for its project which will provide housing for the mentally impaired.

Summer reading club at the library

This summer all Cohasset school children are invited to join the summer reading club at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. "Reach for It! Read!" is a summer incentive reading program whose focus is athletics and the 1992 Summer Olympics.

The goal of the program is to encourage children to visit the library and to read throughout their vacation months. According to Library Journal, children who "...regularly read books, magazines and newspapers often display the highest reading proficiency."

Reading cards for recording the titles read on each child's own reading level may be picked up at the library. These cards must be endorsed by a parent. Those participants in grades 1-3 who read 20 books will be awarded a paperback book of their choice. Participants in grades 4-6 need to read 15 books for their paperback gift, and those in grade 7 and up need to read 10 books. The library will provide reading cards and charts, bookmarks, activity sheets — and of course, plenty of good books.

There will also be a program for "Almost-Readers," those younger children who enjoy being read to or are just beginning to read themselves with help. These children will receive a booklet in which to record their titles.

In addition, several Massachusetts organizations have donated discount coupons and passes which will be made available to summer reading participants. Included are: Basketball Hall of Fame, Higgins Armory Museum, Whalom Park, Heritage Plantation, New England Aquarium, and many other museums. All participants will celebrate with a party at the end of the program.

Dates of the Summer Reading Program are June 22 to Aug. 21.

Nancy Snowdale

Name: Nancy Snowdale.

Occupation: Assistant tax collector.

Best day of your life: The day my three sons graduated from college, and my 65th birthday party on the Spirit of Boston.

Most embarrassing moment: I took a course in public speaking and had to give a three-minute speech in front of the class. I turned every color in the rainbow.

Goal: To enjoy my retirement, which starts October 1, in good health.(Mrs. Snowdale has worked in the treasurer's office for 25 years.)

Favorite season: Spring

Best vacation: Many years ago, when my husband and I went to Cabbage Island in Booth Bay Harbor.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet Peeve: "The telephone."

Favorite book: "84 Charing Cross Road," Helene Hanff.

Favorite movie: "Chariots of Fire."

Biggest worry: To remain independent.

Favorite place: My favorite place is my island at 52 Mill Lane. (Mill Lane is an actual island.)

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

HOUSE VALUE VS LOT VALUE

QUESTION: What is the proper relationship between the cost of a lot and the value of the house on it?

ANSWER: Old rules of thumb have lost much of their meaning. It used to be that land represented about one-sixth of the home's purchase price. Then it moved up to one-fourth. And it will change again as the cost of land continues to rise.

Nevertheless, the land value versus house value ratio cannot be totally dismissed because it does, to some extent, affect the resale value of the property. It may not make much difference if you put an inexpensive house on an expensive lot, but it could be a mistake to have too much house for the land.

around town

❑ On May 18, Boston College held its 116th Commencement Exercises at Alumni Stadium. Cohasset had a large contingent all its own...John B Atkinson, who received an AB in Arts and Sciences, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Atkinson; Stephen E. Casey, AB Arts and Sciences, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Casey; Carolan Hurley, AB, Arts and Sciences; Victoria Kelley, AB, Arts and Sciences, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E Kelley; and Ronald A. Massa, BS, School of Management, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald A. Massa Sr.

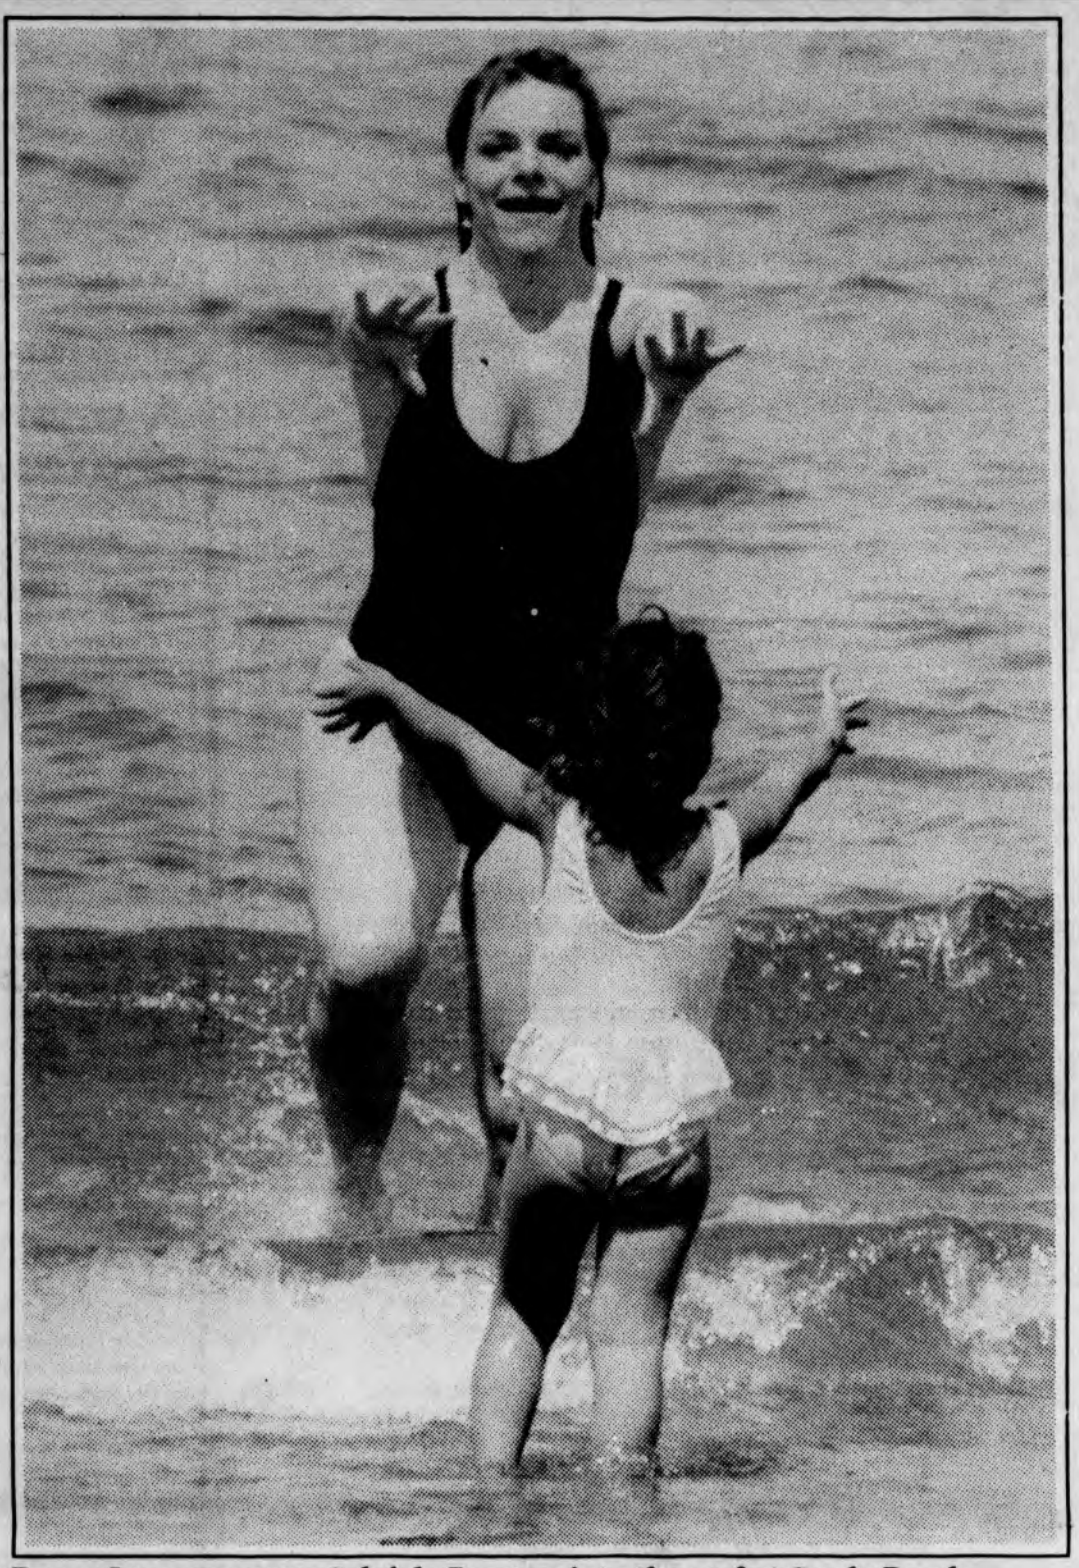
A toast to you all, and here's to a job real soon.

❑ Ann E. Dockray is a proud member of the dean's list at the University of Massachusetts Dartmouth. Ann's major is management.

❑ Well, Ray Jones, who has been a METCO student here since kindergarten and will be a senior in September, has done it again. He has just returned from Offense-Defense Football Camp in Long Island where he was one of 780 players. He was awarded the Best Quarterback Award for the second year, also awarded "The Fastest Kid in Camp" award for winning all the sprint competitions. Finally, he won the "Best Touchdown Dance" award for making a touchdown and then doing a back-flip and split in the end zone. The Boosters Club helped Roy get to this camp with scholarship aid...money well spent as he was approached by coaches from several East Coast Colleges!!!

We can't wait for fall and football season in Cohasset!

❑ Kimberly Steimle, a senior at Milton Academy, has been named to the 1992 Boston Globe All-Scholastic Independent School League Spring Team. Kimberly won four events at the ISL track meet, the 4x100 relay, the 4x400 relay, the 300 hurdles, and the 100 hurdles, three of which set league records.



A two-time team captain, she was voted team MVP twice and all-league in each of her four years. She will attend Holy Cross in the fall, wow are they lucky to have her!!

❑ Alia Asahar and Greg Bilton, stand up and take another bow!! They were each awarded the Deer Hill School Athletic Citzenship Award upon their graduation June 22. Ken Ekberg presented them with the honors, which, by the way, is voted on by the entire staff of Deer Hill.

Greg and Alia took part in the ceremonies, and we are sure that CHS Jr./Sr. High is looking forward to their being there next year!!

❑ Jonathan A. Kent, son of Joseph and Sandra Kent, was among the 212 law students who were awarded degrees from Western New England College at the commencement ceremony May 16. He received a Juris Doctoral degree, was a graduation committee chairperson, and was a member of the curriculum committee. Congratulations!

❑ A standing ovation goes to Brandon DeVoe and Dave Leahy, CHS students who were selected to compete in the 1992 Bay State Games for lacrosse. Tournament play will be held at MIT this weekend (July 17, 18, 19) Good luck to you boys, all of Cohasset will be awaiting the results and we are proud to have you represent us.

Barbara is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lagrotteria and is a member of the class of 1995.

❑ Frederick Toppan of Fair Oaks Lane was honored by the Fessenden School, his junior boarding school Alma Mater, at their June 4 commencement. Mr Toppan was presented the school's Alumni Award in recognition of extraordinary service in his chosen field, to his community, and to the Fessenden School. Mr. Toppan has been a class agent for his class of 1944 since 1986 and is an original member of the Fessenden Alumni Steering Committee. After leaving Fessenden, Mr. Toppan went on to Milton Academy and graduated from Colby College.

❑ Peg Atkinson-Mavilia and David Mavilia sure presented a wonderful present recently, their daughter Michaela Mavilia! She was born June 28 and weighed in at 7lbs. 9-1/2 ozs.

You can be sure that Cohasset's own Tom and Marian Atkinson are thrilled grandparents, as are Alfred and Grace Mavilia of Hingham. I remember Peg when she was a toddler, oh my...enjoy your little girl everyone!

❑ Joy and Joseph A. Rosano are the parents of a baby boy, born June 30 at South Shore Hospital. Congratulations!

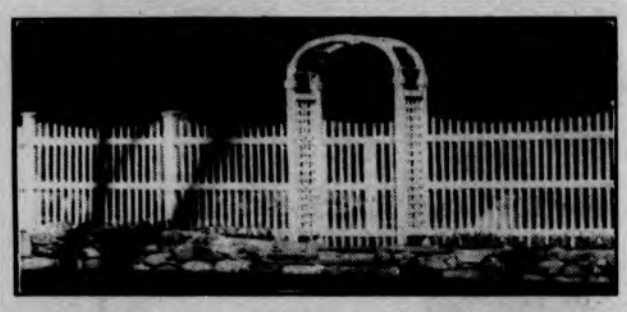
❑ Congratulations to Deborah Marie Hartley, who recently graduated from the University of Rochester with a bachelor's degree in political science.

Gee, it's hard to believe that "little Deb" is about to make her way into the business world....good luck Deb, in whatever you decide to do.

❑ News from Middlebury College this week, and its good! Kristin K. Martin, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John D. Martin Jr., has been named a College Scholar, the highest recognition for academic achievement for the spring term at the college.

Stephen M. Pozatek, son of Dr. and Mrs. Zigmunt W. Pozatek, has attained dean's list status, the second-highest recognition for academic achievement for the spring term at the college.

How nice it is to have students from our town doing so well, and how proud we are of them!



❑ The College of the Holy Cross lets us in on some news this week. Allison Reilly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Reilly, has been named to the dean's list for the second semester. Allison is a junior, majoring in English, and we congratulate her.

❑ Congratulations to Matt Silvia, who made the dean's list at the University of Maine. Matt also was the assistant director of the University's production of "A Funny Thing Happened On the Way to The Forum."

Knowing Matt and his talents, we'll bet that it was superb, and that we will be hearing a lot more about him in the future.

The butterfly effect

When did stardust become particles of pollution?

When did dewdrops become smog?

When did the rain that falls gently on the plain become acid?

It has happened so gradually—this pollution of our earth.

In the 1970s a scientist named Edward R. Lorenz tried to warn us.

He advanced the possibility that large changes in the future would result in very small alterations of the present.

It was called the butterfly effect and was proposed in a paper called "Can the Flaps of A Butterfly's wings in Brazil Stir Up a Tornado in Texas?"

Sounds pretty farfetched, doesn't it. But there is no question that what we do now to protect our environment will have a stunning effect on future generations.

Maybe the U. S. government got a little worried about the butterfly effect in 1972 because they passed the Wetlands Protection Act.

We are celebrating its 20th anniversary this year.

So maybe it's an appropriate time to take a close look at it.

The Wetlands Protection Act prohibits any filling, excavation or other alteration of land surface, water levels or vegetation without a permit from the conservation commission.

Many communities have adopted additional controls requiring separate permits for floodplains.

Wetlands include cattail marshes, wet meadows, red maple swamps and streams that may be dry for a significant portion of the year.

The act also covers banks, dunes, beaches and land under rivers and ponds.

Many wetlands are defined in part by the abundance of wetland plants.

A floodplain, on the other hand, is an area that floods during storms. Three types of floodplains are protected by the wetlands act.

The common places are coastal areas and those bordering streams that flood during 100-year storms.

The less common areas are isolated depressions that flood at least once a year to six inches or so.

Over half of this country's original wetlands have been lost to development.

This loss in water quality, storm protection and depleted fish and wildlife is staggering.

Left in their natural state, wetlands provide many services.

Wetlands channel storm waters and buffer damage to roads and buildings .

Wetlands store floodwaters so the water can recede slowly.

Wetlands are water supply sources and purify the water they receive.

Wetlands serve as natural settling ponds trapping sediments and sometimes detoxify pollutants.

Wetlands retain nitrogen and phosphorus which lead to nuisance weeds.

Wetlands are valuable to wildlife as a food source, nesting area and protective cover. Shellfish beds and fisheries are dependent on healthy wetlands.

Maybe our ecology is not so delicate that the flap of a butterfly's wing in Brazil can stir up a tornado in Texas.

But there definitely is extraordinary inter- dependence in nature

A whole chain of life depends on our wetlands.

And protecting them is ecologically honorable.

The residents of the Ripley Road Nursing Home gather for goodbyes. The nursing home recently closed.

Donations for simple marker needed

To the Editor:

Sad to say, the Ripley Road Nursing Home has closed its doors for good. Ripley Road Nursing Home is known for its personal and "homey" atmosphere. The one-to-one attention and love that each and every patient has received there was another attraction and made the nursing home like a close-knit family.

Staff and families were all upset upon hearing this news and were hoping that the nursing home would remain open and sold, especially for the residents' sake.

Throughout this whole ordeal, a patient, Theresa Guyette, died. Theresa had no family and the patients and staff, especially Mrs. Thelma Harrold, were her immediate family.

Mrs. Harrold arranged a beautiful service for Theresa and there was a nice turnout of people. Rev. Hall from Beechwood Congregational Church gave a very moving sermon and along with the excellent service from the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, made it a very simple but elegant way for Theresa to be laid to rest.

If anyone would like to make a donation towards the cost of a simple marker for her grave, please send it to Denise Murphy, 33 Cedar Acres Lane, Cohasset. Thank you.

Mrs. Harrold and myself would like to thank everyone who has given something to the Ripley Road Nursing Home and made the nursing home and the residents' lives a little brighter. They are the following: Rev. Ritts, Rev. Cutler, Rev. Ebersol, Father Keohane, Rev. Hall, Betsy Stevenson, Yolanda Baccari, Bobbie Fowle, Virginia Hamilton, Mrs. Marie Price, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. O'Malley, the students at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools, Mrs. Helen Watson and her beautiful piano playing, Nick Latteo, the entertainer, Angie Walsh, Jane and the wonderful staff at Kimballs by the Sea, The Strawberry Parfait, the Upholstery Shop in Scituate, Reed's Country Way Nursery, The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset Charlotte Thompson, Christine Flood, The Cohasset Council on Aging, the drivers of the senior shuttle, Erin Lennon, Mr. and Mrs. Feeley of Hingham, and most importantly, all the families and friends who have been more than supportive to the nursing home, the patients and the staff.

Thank you, each and every one of you, for making a difference.

All of the staff, Mrs. Harrold and myself would like to wish each and every resident the best of luck and continued health. We are all very concerned that the nursing home closed and you all had to move out of your home. We can only hope that each patient gets the best loving and caring environment similar to the one at Ripley Road.

Sincerely yours,
Denise L Murphy, Activity Director
Mrs. Thelma Harrold, Administrator

Mrs. Harold's care is appreciated

To the Editor:

Cohasset has lost a great asset in the closing of the Ripley Road Nursing Home. Mrs. Harold has done a fantastic job in the way that she cared for the patients there. Each was treated as an individual, with dignity and respect, and with thoughtful attention to each one's needs and wishes. There were cheerful name plates to identify each room, which helped not only visitors but the sometimes confused inhabitants. Cheery sayings and quotes decorated the stairway. There was always new and innovative entertainment in the afternoons. Patients who could manage outside walks and drives were encouraged to do so. An unusual and very commendable feature was the awareness that caring, concerned visitors were more important to the patients than rigid time schedules, and therefore the visiting hours were flexible.

The staff was always cheerful and welcoming and reflected Mrs. Harold's concern and caring. The nursing care was first-class, the food attractively served and delicious.

It is sad indeed that the patients have had to be transferred elsewhere, but we all owe a thousand thanks to Mrs. Harold for her devoted care of our friends and relatives for so many years.

Gertrude and Helen Hooper
Atlantic Ave.

The temperature is rising and the heat is on for the Norfolk and Plymouth District state senate seat.

Incumbent Bob Hedlund is sending out bi-weekly press releases to the local newspapers - maybe it would be easier just to start his own. In one report he wants to let his "constitution" (sic) know that nominations are being accepted for the fall session of the Citizens' Legislative Seminar Program. The program, he explains, meets once a week for six weeks to examine the legislative process. Try and stay awake for that one.

If you're interested in participating in these seminars, call the senator's office at 722-1646.

In another news flash, Hedlund says he and Democratic Representative Janet O'Brien recently joined commissioner Peter Webber of the Department of Environmental Management on a "bipartisan" boat survey of the North River. That's one way to beat the heat. Hedlund notes that from 1979 to 1991 the North River Commission's activities were funded from the DEM budget. Funding for FY'92 has been vetoed by Gov. Weld. The Republican senator didn't say whether he agrees with that action or not.

You want more? You got it. Another Democratic challenger in this race, Chartis Langmaid, has received the endorsement of the Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus (MWPC). Wow. What a surprise.

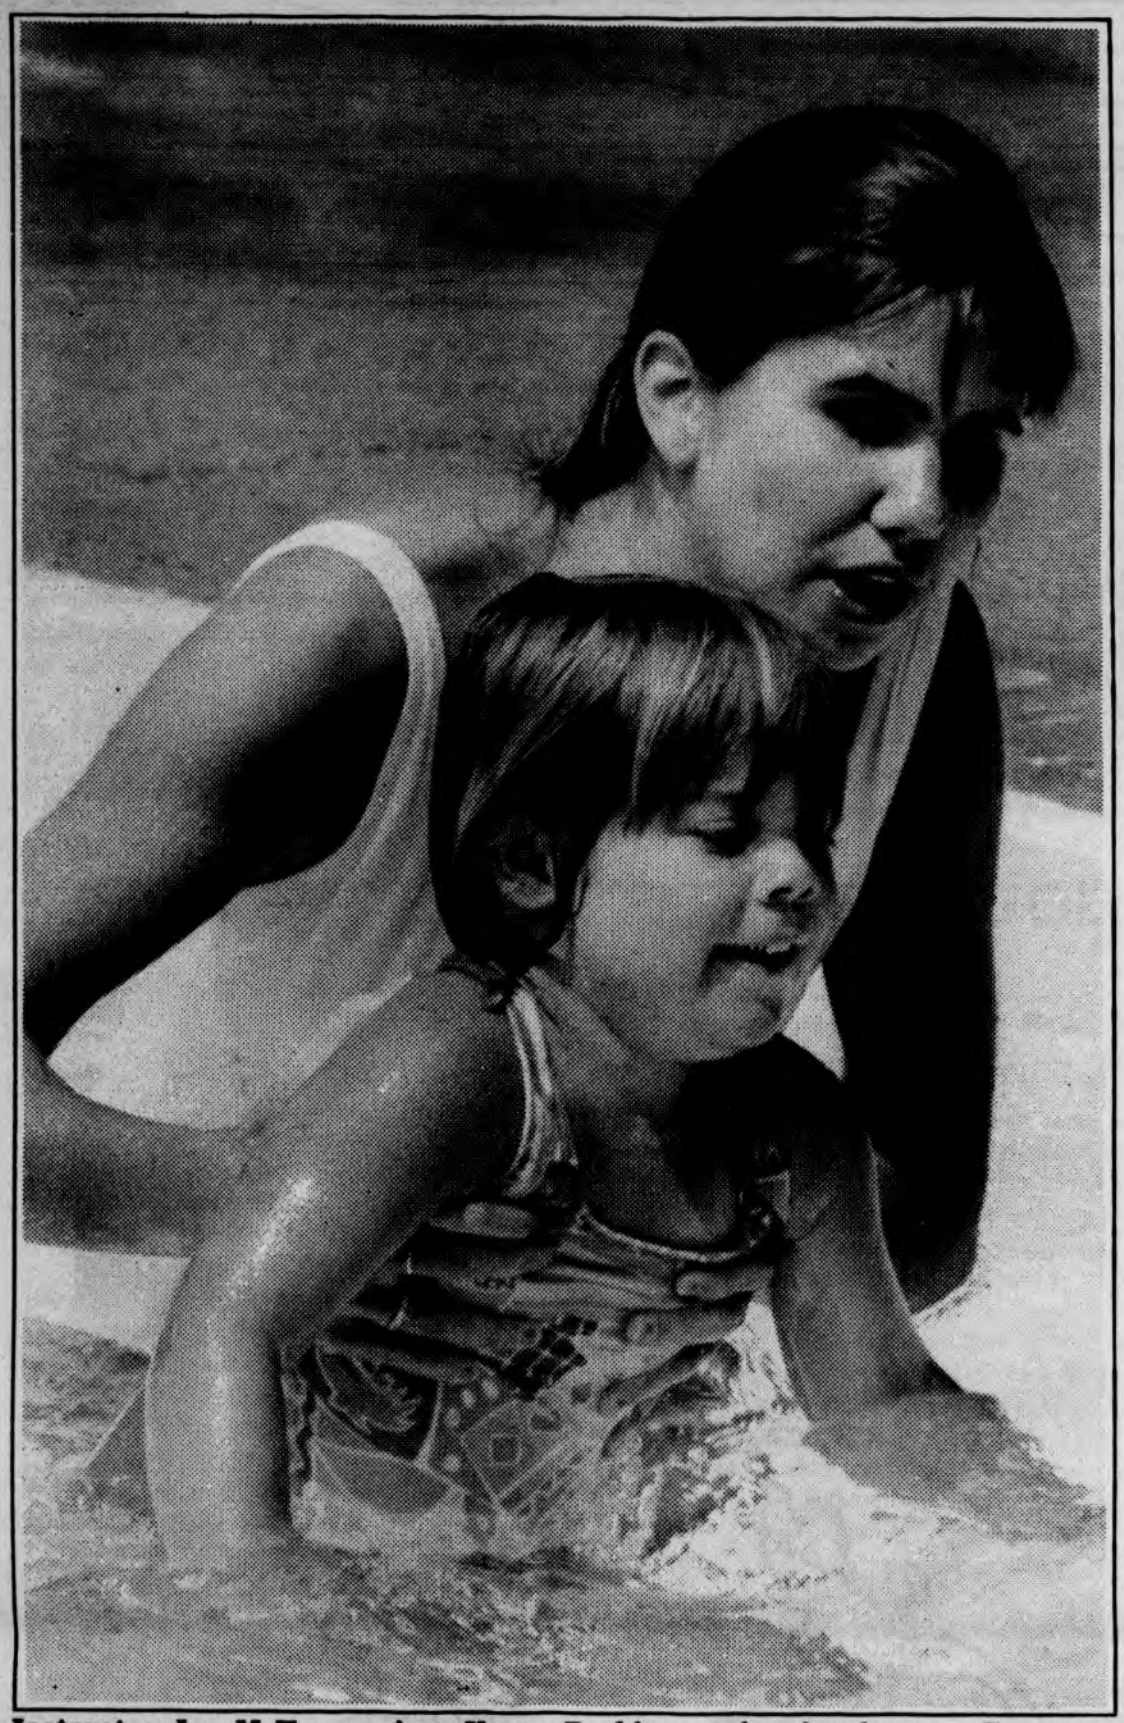
The caucus explains that it has all candidates fill out a detailed questionnaire and then submit to an interview by the organization's political action committee. Then and only then is a decision made to endorse.

However, the organization quickly goes on to explain that "we are all fortunate this year to have over 100 women running for seats in the Massachusetts legislature. We know that Chartis Langmaid and the rest of this year's qualified group of women candidates will make an important contribution to the state senate and to the commonwealth." Now we've heard about bag jobs - could this be a case of pocketbook politics?

In the "good news - I'm a winner!" department, Chartis actually sent out a news release saying she won a $1000 travel certificate at this month's Greek Taverna in Cohasset. We all suffer through the slow news weeks of summer, but this could easily fall into the category of pressing your luck with the press.

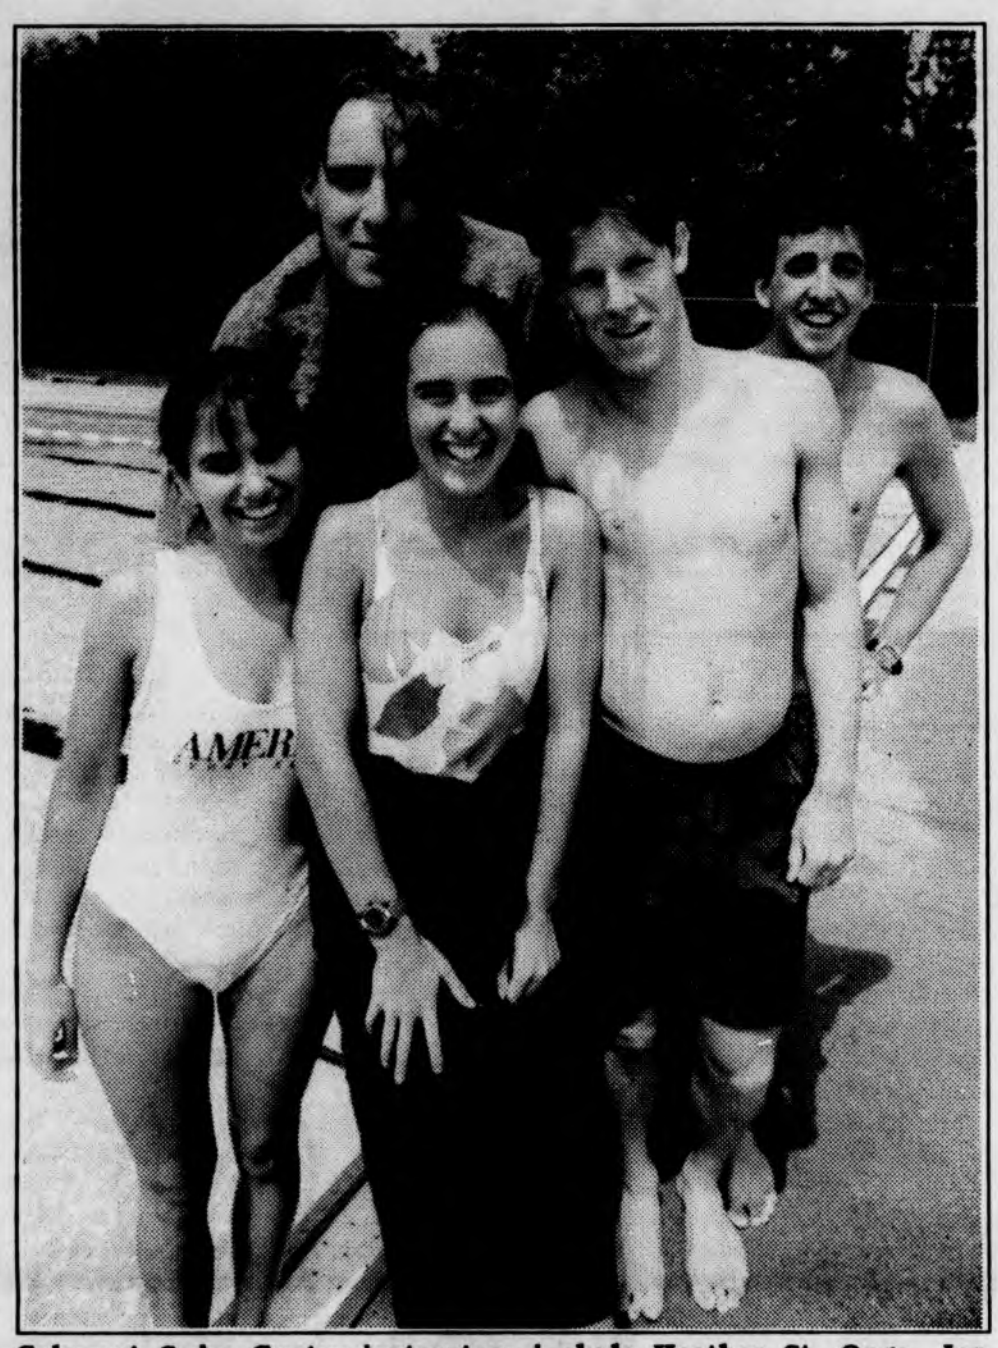
Beacon Hill Roll Call

Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) 722-1646 Room 416B



Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) 722-2800 ext.7957 Room 134

QUESTIONS



THE HOUSE AND SENATE. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on four roll calls and local representatives' votes on five roll calls from late legislative sessions July 6-10.
(House and Senate) FISCAL '93 BUDGET (H 5800) — House 119-27, Senate 33-3, approved and sent to Governor Weld the conference committee version of a fiscal 1993 $14.47 billion budget. Provisions include an additional $185 million in education aid untied to education reform; a phase out of the estate tax; and a section allowing communities to exempt their "overlay" accounts from the limits of Proposition 2 1/2. Supporters said the package is a fiscally responsible and balanced one which funds necessary programs and establishes accountability. Some opponents said the package includes unnecessary spending, violates Prop. 2 1/2 and does not provide sufficient tax relief. Others objected to a provision they said violates a century-old agreement allowing Clinton and Lancaster to receive free water and sewer service. (A "Yea" vote is for the budget. A "Nay" vote is against it). The remaining roll calls are on proposed amendments to different House- and Senate-approved versions of the bill scaling back the recent hike in the unemployment tax paid by businesses and making other changes in benefits and eligibility. The House and Senate eventually passed a conference committee version on a voice vote without a roll call and sent it to Governor Weld.	N	N
(House and Senate) 15 to 20 Weeks (H 5909, S1654) — House 104-45, Senate 24-12 rejected similar amendments increasing from 15 to 20 the number of weeks an employee must work before being eligible for unemployment. Amendment supporters said most states have a 20-week requirement and argued the change could save $27 million annually. Opponents said now is not the time to reduce benefits and claimed the change will hurt thousands of people who are laid off through no fault of their own. (A "Yea" vote is for 20 weeks. A "Nay" vote is for 15 weeks).	Y	Y
(House) JOB TRAINING (H 5909) — House 113-36, rejected an amendment providing that unemployed persons who seek job training only be eligible for resulting extended benefits if they start training by their thirteenth week of benefits. Amendment supporters said this will prevent people from purposely waiting until near the end of their benefits period to start job training and encourage them to start training earlier and perhaps get off the rolls sooner. Opponents said people who enroll usually do so in week fifteen and argued the amendment will prevent more people from participating in job training. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment requiring training by the thirteenth week. A "Nay" vote is against the amendment).		Y
(Senate) MORE JOB TRAINING (S 1654) — Senate 23-11, rejected an amendment requiring that unemployed persons who participate in job training programs complete the programs within their 30-week unemployment period. Amendment supporters said this will save $12 million annually by prohibiting people from starting their training late in their 30-week period and as a result being able to collect an additional 18 weeks. Opponents argued this will prevent many people from taking advantage of this useful program and argued there has been no abuse in the system. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment requiring completion within 30 weeks. A "Nay" vote is against the amendment).	Y

Edith L. Chase

A funeral service for Edith C. (Fuller) Chase, 95, of Cohasset was held July 2 at the Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, Quincy.

Mrs. Chase died June 30 at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home following a long illness.

A native of Boston, Mrs. Chase had lived in North Quincy, Wakefield and Weymouth before moving to Cohasset six years ago. She was a graduate of Framingham State College.

Wife of the late Louis Chase, she leaves two sons, Robert P. Chase of New York and Frederic S. Chase of Florida; two daughters, Jean Jones of Quincy and Louise Burnett of Wakefield; nine grandchildren, and 13 great- grandchildren.

Contributions may be made to the Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St., Quincy.

Clare I. Maki

Clare I. (Grogan) Maki, 45, of Cohasset, formerly of Weymouth, a former secretary, died July 8 in Milton Health Care after a long illness.

She was a former secretary in the supervisor's shipbuilding office at General Dynamics in Quincy, where she worked for a few years.

Mrs. Maki was also a secretary for the Cohasset School Committee in 1968.

She was born in Weymouth and educated in North Weymouth. She lived in Weymouth until she moved to Cohasset 24 years ago.

She leaves her husband, Robert N. Maki; a son, Eric A. Maki of Cohasset, and a daughter, Kristin M. Maki of Cohasset; five brothers, Richard Grogan of Norton, Thomas Grogan of Minnesota, Steven Grogan of Braintree, Ronald Grogan of Braintree, and Paul Grogan of Hanover; and four sisters, Christine George of Rockland, Lucille Gately of Braintree, Sandra Amber of East Bridgewater, and Janice Oliva of Yarmouthport.

She is the daughter of the late Henry and Cecilia (Higgins) Grogan.

A funeral Mass was celebrated July 11 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Cohasset. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery in Cohasset.

The McNamara-Sparrel Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset, handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to the New England Deaconess Hospital Cancer Research Fund, c/o Carla Connolly, 185 Pilgrim Road, MASCO Building No. 4, Boston 02215.

Caroline Williams

Caroline B. (Buttolph) Williams, 100, of Westport, Conn., formerly of Cohasset, retired resident dean of women at Boston University and the Rhode Island School of Design in Providence, died July 17 at Norwalk Hospital in Connecticut.

Mrs. Williams was one of the oldest alumni of Middlebury College. She graduated in 1913 and was a member of the Kappa Gamma Society 75 years.

Born in Middlebury, Vt., she lived in Cohasset from 1948 until moving to Westport in 1985.

Wife of the late Harry O. Williams, she leaves two sons, Harry O. Williams of Wilton, Conn., and Clayton H. Williams of Willoughby, Ohio, eight grandchildren and 20 great-grandchildren.

A memorial service was held July 15 in Second Congregational Church. Burial is private.

Arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset and Norwell.

Donations may be made to Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset.

public notice

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT NORFOLK DIVISION DOCKET NO. 92P1652E1

Estate of ALICE SOKOLOWSKI late of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that CHESTER J. SOKOLOWSKI of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on August 12, 1992.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the ninth day of July, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-two.

COHASSET BOARD OF HEALTH FLOOD PLAIN MAP DESIGNATION AMENDMENT

On September 27, 1988 the Board of Health voted to designate the "Map of Flood Plain and Watershed Protection District by Loring Jacobs dated 1984 as the Board's flood plain map reference. On June 23, 1992 the Board voted unanimously to designate the Federal Emergency Management Agency Firm Flood Insurance Map Revised July 2, 1992 as the second designated flood plain reference. In all cases the more stringent of the two maps shall prevail.

Art from private collections

A special three-day exhibition of outstanding art from private collections on the South Shore will be held July 24 to 26 at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

Among the works are paintings by Joan Miro, Robert Motherwell, Edward Hopper, Eduard Manet, John Stockwell, Henry Bacon, Georges Braque, Ralph Cahoon, Clement Drew, Raoul Dufy and Hans Hoffman.

Tickets for a gala reception opening at 6:30 p.m. Friday, July 24, are $75 per person. Dinner at the seaside home of Lois and David Weltman is included.

The exhibition will be on display from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, July 25, and from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, July 26.

Tickets for the exhibition only are $5.

The exhibit was assembled by committee members Susan Nalband of Scituate, Chris Rifkin and Nancy Tiffin of Hingham, Robert Vose of Duxbury and Stephen Andrus, Lesley Grilli and Claffy Williams of Cohasset.

For more information, call 383-9548.

VIP soccer camp signups

Call the Cohasset Recreation Dept. at 383-6791 to register for the July 27-31 VIP soccer camp, which is geared for youngsters aged four-through-seven.

The ABC camp for four and five year olds runs for 1-1/2 hours per day and costs $40. The VIP camp is three hours and costs $70.

The co-directors of the VIP camp are Dave Pike of London, U.K., who is a qualified English football coach, and Scotland's Ross Irwin, who is head soccer clinician at the South Shore Sports Center in Hingham.

The dedication of a square honoring Mrs. Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy takes place at 6 p.m., July 24. The Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy Square dedication is at the corner of Welles Ave. and Harley Street near Codman Square in Dorchester where Mrs. Kennedy lived as a young girl. Cohasset's Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, seated far right, is the chairman of the Governor's Committee on Women Veterans and a member of the committee working to insure the success of the dedication Friday.

Carillon concerts set

The 68th annual series of summer Carillon Recitals are given on the 57-bell Cohasset Carillon in the tower of St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset on Sunday evenings through through August 30, at 6 p.m.

The public is invited to attend free of charge, and may bring picnic suppers, lawn chairs, and blankets. Printed programs will be distributed on Cohasset Common, and will also be available in St. Stephen's Courtyard on Highland Avenue. The best listening places will be noted on the reverse of the program. The concerts occur rain or shine, and in case of bad weather, the bells may be heard from parked cars.

July 26, Tood Fair of the Oude Kerk in Amsterdam, The Netherlands, plays; Frank DellaPenna, Carillonneur of Washington Memorial Chapel at Valley Forge perform on August 2. August 9 the carillonneur is Judson Maynard of Texas Tech University, Lubbock, Texas; August 16, Janet Tebbel of the First United Methodist Church of Germantown, Pennsylvania; August 23, George Matthew Jr. of the First Presbyterian Church in Stamford, CT. The final recital August 30 will be given by Sally Slade Warner.

Following each recital, visitors may climb the 45 steps to the playing cabin to see the keyboard. For further information, phone St. Stephen's Church at 627/383-1093, or Sally Slade Warner at 508/475-2599.

Band concert, Aug. 11

The Cohasset Recreation Department holds summer concerts at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 11.

Performing will be the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Concerts are free of charge and open to the public. Please bring lawn chair or blanket and insect repellent.

Funding for the 1992 Band Concerts has been provided through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc., and a matching grant from the American Federation of Musicians, New York City.

Tennis lessons set

The Cohasset Community Center is offering tennis lessons with Amanda Church for the month of July and August, Monday through Wednesday or Tuesday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., ages six to adult, four students to a lesson. Lessons are held on a private court. The cost is $40 for eight one-hour lessons.

For information, please call the community center at 383-0088.

State dye-tracing turns harbor 'red' Monday

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Cohasset Harbor was not the scene of a blood-bath Monday.

Similar explanations, however, were entertained by callers who alerted police and fire personnel to the bright red color the harbor turned Monday afternoon.

An immediate investigation lead to the cause: dye-tracing.

According to Stephen Nelson, manager of the town's wastewater treatment plant, the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) poured about one gallon of red dye into James Brook, which is near the plant, to determine the flow of the existing stream.

The action was taken as part of a DEP feasibility study to determine whether the town's proposal to expand the existing wastewater treatment plant should be approved, Nelson said.

"They put it directly into the stream to see how long it would take for it to get to the mouth of the harbor," Nelson said.

Treated wastewater from the plant empties into James Brook, which then flows into Cohasset Harbor.

The wastewater treatment plant is located across from the police station on Elm Street at Jacob's Meadow.

Nelson said the plant is approximately 500 yards from the mouth of Cohasset Harbor.

"It's harmless enough, but it certainly did make a spectacle," he said of the dye. "I was really surprised to see how much it mushroomed."

Sewer commission chairman Ted Guild said the DEP continued testing on Tuesday.

"We want to expand the plant," Guild said. "They want to determine the state of the brook and harbor in order to project the impact of the expansion."

Guild said the $2 million plant expansion project will not begin for several years.

In 1988, the sewer commission planned to convert the existing wastewater treatment plant to a pumping station and link it to Hull's treatment plan.

The conversion/linkage project, priced at $6 million, was scrapped when state and federal funds dried up.

Guild said the $2 million expansion project is a financially more palatable option to improving the town's wastewater treatment facility.

Despite pleas, Torin Sweeney rejected...

School leaders choose former Osgood teacher to full-time position

Despite polite, but persistent pleas of a dozen parents at Monday's school committee meeting, Torin Sweeney was not selected as the physical education teacher for the Joseph Osgood School.

School committee members opted for former Osgood physical education teacher Michael Weydt, who they feel is more qualified for the position.

Sweeney, a graduate of Cohasset High School, has been playing the role of a full-time physical education teacher at Osgood since January when he filled a position vacated by a retiring teacher.

Sweeney's title was permanent substitute. He has also been the high school's wrestling coach since 1983.

In a unanimous vote, school committee members upheld the recommendation of Supt. Stephen Hart and a screening committee to hire Weydt for the position.

In an ironic twist, Weydt was re-hired Monday for same position he was forced to leave in 1989 because of a lay-off.

Since 1989, Weydt has been a physical education teacher in the Hanover schools.

School committee members said the decision to hire Weydt was based on his specific qualifications.

"We have to try to find the strongest person for this age-level," school committee chairman Barbara Bliss explained. "We felt the other person (Weydt) was more qualified for the position of K through 3."

Bill Caldwell, whose son was in Sweeney's class, disagreed with the committee.

Art Center draws 88 treasures

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Think of hidden treasure on the South Shore and you'll probably conjure images of Captain Kidd, sea chests and pieces of eight.

But when the South Shore Art Center uncovered their version of hidden treasures, it turned out to be a visual feast for art lovers.

Last weekend, 88 works of art hung in splendor in the Cohasset-based art center. The names on display included Dufy, Miro, Braque and Boccaccino. The only captain in the bunch was a portrait of Captain William Drummond, master of the good ship Rappahannock.

The exhibit testified to the good taste of local art collectors. More than 50 residents around the South Shore allowed the center to display paintings and sculpture from their personal collections. Viewers only needed a flirting knowledge of art history to recognize the importance of many of the art works on display while others represented delightful new discoveries for the unitiate.

The exhibit also shows the incredible diversity of the collections on the South Shore.

The exhibit hung for an all-too-brief three days, primarily due to the high cost of security guards and insurance premiums. Center director Lanci Valentine confessed owners also found it difficult to be parted from them for long.

The exhibit, Collector's Choice, represented a smorgasbord of 500 years of creative genius. The exhibition was assembled by committee members Stephen Andrus, Lesley Grilli and Claffy Williams of Cohasset, Susan Nalband of Scituate, Chris Rifkin and Nancy Tiffin of Hingham, and Robert Vose of Duxbury.

Cohasset's week

Four new hires

The school committee unanimously hired four teachers Monday night.

Ann Berman will teach art part-time and Susan Horigan will be a full-time teacher to elementary school-aged children. Both will teach at Deer Hill.

The two other full-time teachers hired are Michael Weydt, for physical education and Barbara Myers to teach elementary school. Both will teach at Joseph Osgood School.

Compost sifter

A compost sifter will be purchased for the town dump.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said the money was sent by the Massachusetts Municipal Association to the recycling committee.

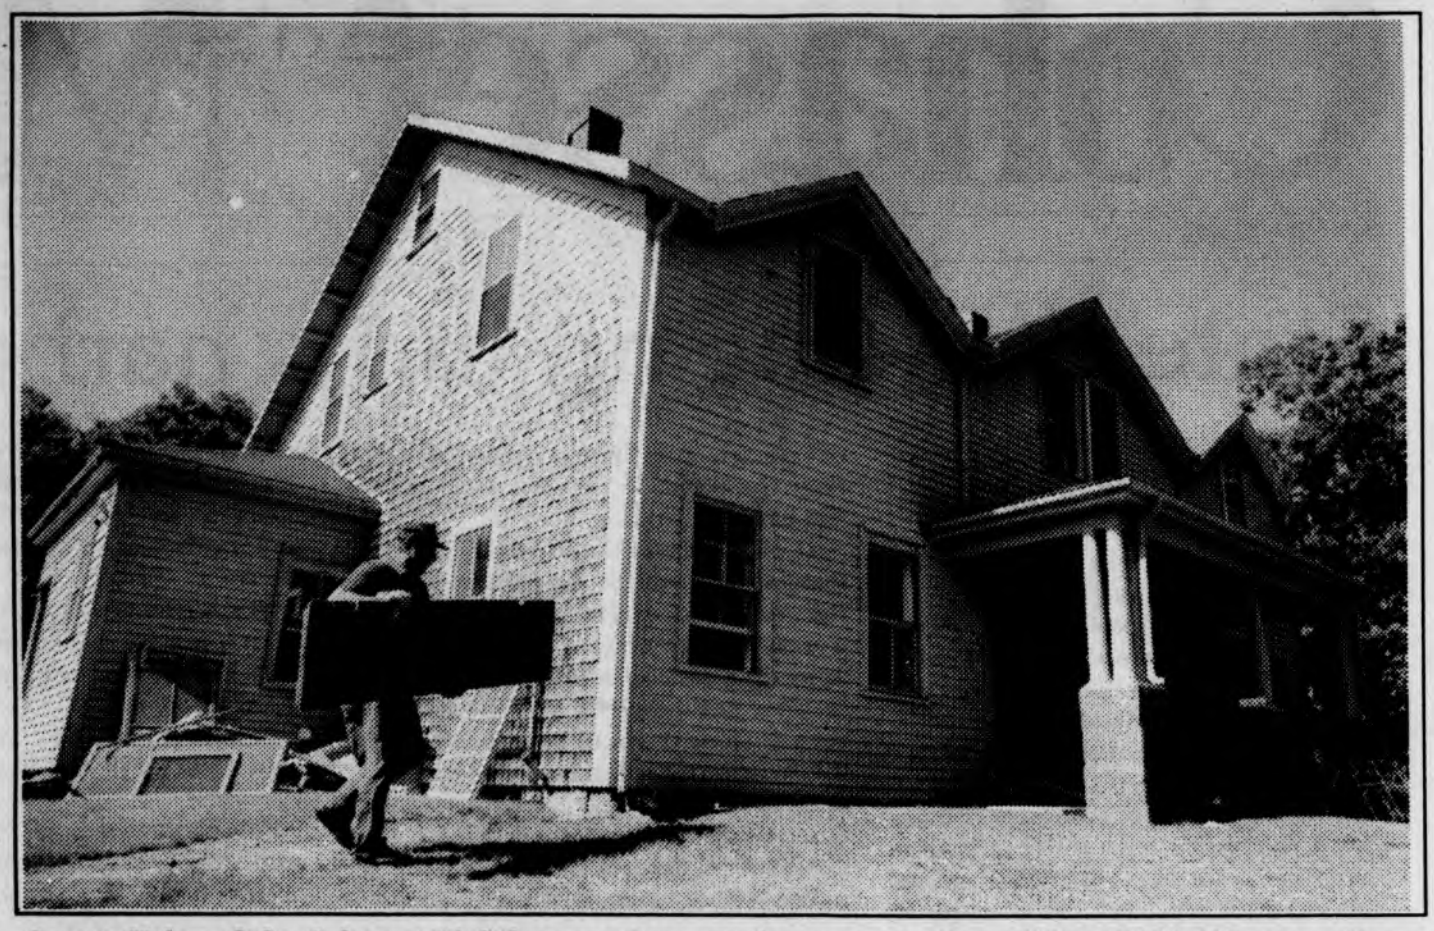
Doyon said the new sifter will cost approximately $395, the exact amount of the check.

The sifter will be installed at the town dump.

Walkway rolls along

Plans are underway by the Rennaissance Committee to build a 200-foot walkway, adorned with flowers and shrubs, from the town municipal parking lot on Pleasant Street to South Main Street.

Phyllis Leslie is the benefactor of the project, Dormitzer said.



Jackie Dormitzer, chairman of the Rennaissance Committee, said flowers will be planted at the entrance of the walkway at South Main Street, beside the Texaco station.

The Girl Scouts will plant the flowers, she said.

Bill Niles and Philip Carney of the Men's Breakfast Club will also lend their expertise to the project and develop a landscaping plan for the rest of the walkway using shrubbery, Dormitzer said.

The overall design of the walkway was conceived by James Sandell, who volunteered his architectural talents.

Dormitzer, and her colleagues on the committee Beth Christoffel and Ann Whelan, said the walkway should be completed by September.

George Haley of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corp. works on renovations of the Old Lightkeepers House which will be for public use. (Alan Chapman photo)

Lead mystery continues

Bill Baird of the health department said the town will continue to test the water at several schools in town for an unusually high lead content.

"We've closed a number of bubblers and taken steps to ensure the water used in the schools is safe," Baird said.

The next test, according to Baird, is to test sections of pipe at the schools to see if they could be the cause of the lead in the water.

No date has been set for the test.

Real estate taxes due

p.m., Monday, Aug. 3. Postmark dates will not be accepted. There are no exceptions.

A number of bills have been returned to our office because of improper mailing addresses. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the Collector's office at the Town Hall, 383-9900, extension 113.

Failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after the due date.

The mailing address for tax payments is: Treasurer-Collector's Office, P. 0. Box 296, Cohasset, Ma. 02025.

For those taxpayers who wish to pay their taxes in person, our office hours for this week are: Monday through Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Monday Aug. 3, the hours will be 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Deputy Collector John P. Riley has been serving warrants on the unpaid Fiscal 1992 real estate and personal property taxes, prior years' motor vehicle and boat excise taxes.

This is the first step toward placing a lien on your property for the unpaid real estate taxes.

There will be a follow-up letter sent in the fall for those property owners who still have an unpaid balance on Fiscal 1992.

If you have any questions, please call the treasurer-collector's office at 383-9900, extension 113.

Encephalitis risk warned

Public health officials are warning residents of Plymouth, Norfolk and Bristol counties of the dangers of eastern equine encephalitis.

Horses, which can be protected with an annual vaccination, have historically been early victims in outbreaks of the disease.

There is no licensed vaccine for people, whose natural immunity to the disease is rare, probably because infections are uncommon and often fatal, health officials say.

Historical data indicates the disease typically emerges for a two- or three-year period. Because of the prevalence of the disease in 1990 and 1991, there is a likelihood it will occur again this summer, officials say.

Heavy precipitation levels from late summer into the fall of 1991 left groundwater levels higher than average, which provides favorable breeding conditions for mosquitoes.

To reduce the risk to people, health officials recommend:

- Controlling mosquitoes in yards by getting rid of standing water where mosquitoes lay their eggs. Clean gutters, empty children's wading pools and pick up other toys that could collect water. Cover garbage cans you use and store those you don't, pick up watering cans or buckets around the yard. Remove old tires from your property or drill holes in them so they don't collect rainwater.
- Stay away from mosquitoes, especially in their peak feeding hours of early morning and early evening. Because mosquitoes need still water to reproduce, they tend to live around wet swampy areas. Avoid walking or camping in these places.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

THE SOLO ACT

QUESTION: My REALTOR suggested to me that he do a "solo act" when showing our house to prospective buyers. Wouldn't it be wiser for me to accompany them around?

ANSWER: One of the fastest ways to sell your house in a hurry is to keep out of it when it's being shown. First, tell the REALTOR everything that should be known about the house, then let the REALTOR do the selling. He or she is a skilled negotiator and knows how to close a sale without emotional involvement. If you must be around when the house is being shown, greet the prospect graciously, take the children and pets and retire.

Valentine said the committee collectors volunteered their works without hesitation, although 90 percent requested anonymity for security reasons.

"It spread by word of mouth," she said. "People are very generous."

Nalband installed the exhibit without regard to historical period or style. The result constantly tantalized the eye and allowed each work to be regarded individually, rather than as a representation of a period or painter.

"By intermixing styles, it really made us look at each piece," Valentine said.

The exhibit also demonstrated the rich possibilities of freeing yourself from a lockstep period-based decorating style. Big bold abstracts co-existed happily with traditional landscapes, linked only by theme and color. Plump-cheeked and shy madonnas had no quarrel with neighboring old seafaring men.

One of the special treats for gallery visitors during the opening reception was the opportunity to hobnob with collectors and art cognoscenti. Rather than flaunting their largess, they shared anecdotes about artists and the joys of collecting.

Vose, owner of a world-renowned art gallery in Boston, qualifies as a real treasure trove of art lore. Vose related the tragic story of artist A.C. Goodwin, a painter at the turn of the century in Boston. Goodwin was the quintessential starving artist in chilly garret.

According to Vose, Goodwin would receive a prepared canvas or block of watercolor paper from a little art gallery every morning. The artist would go out and paint scenes of Boston. When he returned a finished work, the gallery would give him a pair of silk stockings or a bottle of whiskey in payment.

Although Goodwin lived in poverty throughout his life, he finally amassed enough money to travel to Europe. He died while preparing for his grand tour. His body was found hunched over his travel chest.

Goodwin's paintings now sell for $20,000 - $40,000 each. Two Goodwin paintings were on display, a view of the Little Building in Boston on a gray, snowy day and an impressionistic sunrise on the Charles all turquoise and lavender with the rosy glow of the sun warming up the morning.

In contrast to Goodwin's hard-knock life, Robert Logan started life in the lap of luxury. His father invented the watch hairspring. Logan had the means to travel the world and paint whatever struck his fancy. The exhibit contained a Logan painting of a French country road and another of an Algerian street scene.

Unfortunately, the outbreak of World War I turned Logan's world view topsy-turvy. He found war so depressing he stopped painting. His art surfaced only after his death when it was acquired by the Nantucket gallery where the anonymous collector discovered it.

The art center tried to personalize the art work on display with tales of how and why the individuals came to own the pieces. In one case, the owner chose the Thomas Doughty painting of a Hudson River schooner from his grandmother's billiard room. Although sentiment and subject matter drew him or her to it, it was only after having it professionally cleaned that "I discovered the real beauty of the painting."

Inheritance played a role in many of the acquisitions. One resident owns a spectacular and huge painting by the French impressionist Maufra thanks to his grandfather's good taste. The grandfather purchased it directly from the artist.

According to Vose, Maufra ranks as one of the best of the second tier of impressionists.

Other collectors chose their works themselves.

Some found the work by serendipity—while browsing in a gallery or antique shops or stopping by an auction, something caught their eye. One chose a Hans Hoffman because they liked "the wonderful colors of dark blue, black, white and red."

Another discovered a wonderful carved doorpiece while traveling through India in 1972. The ancient carving features detailed figures of Ganesa, the elephant god worshipped for his influence over rain and wisdom, and his consorts.

As might be expected on the South Shore, scenes of storm-tossed vessels, stern and rock-bound shores and lighthouses abounded. At least one collector searches out period marine paintings because of a family history in the shipping business.

Some collectors displayed a whimsical nature in the work they acquired. Vose owns a primitive-style painting by Ralph Cahoon, a Cape Cod artist, of a snowball fight between some ancient mariners and a bevy of beauteous mermaids. Viewers couldn't help but chuckle when they came upon it.

Many people came to the South Shore Art Center Friday evening to view the group of varied artworks. (J. Paul MacDonald photo)

At the opposite end of the artistic scale, Hingham architect Vcevold Strekalovsky, whose contributions demonstrated eclectic tastes, allowed the center to display an elaborate and richly detailed painting of a bejeweled and turbaned man on an elegant white steed soaring over the tree tops. The work was painted by his father in the style of Persian miniatures. It would be treasured by anyone who ever loved fairy tales.

At least two residents in the area enjoy portraits of Native American Indians. Whether they chose them for historical reasons or for the strong character in their faces is a matter of conjecture.

Alison Cann-Clift's large fabric painting. "The Visiting Troupe," fascinated countless viewers. People would view the painting from a distance, step up and peer at it intently and then step back again as if trying to figure out how she creates her illusions of openness and depth. Cann-Clift plays with space and tantalizes her audience with her sense-defying feats of creativity.

The litany of names great and small and descriptions of their artistic accomplishments could fill several newspapers and whet your appetite, but to no avail.

They've all gone home to their own walls and display stands. With luck and financial support, Valentine promises another and perhaps longer glimpse of the wonderful world of private art. All is not lost however, after a brief hiatus the art center reopens August 18 with an exhibit of the printmakers' art. Four artists working in different printmaking mediums will be featured in a show entitled "Limited Editions/Unlimited Vision.

"Mandy Avery of Weymouth, Jean Reardon of Hingham, Eleanor LeBlanc of Hull and Mary Moquin of Sandwich have four distinct voices," Valentine said.

Weld vetos overlay exemption for communities

A little publicized part of the state budget package could have given cities and towns a financial boost.

But for the second year in a row, the governor exercised his veto power and decided not to tinker with Prop. 2-1/2.

Under Prop. 2-1/2 levy limits — the town can only raise its tax levy 2-1/2 percent more than that amount of taxes collected in the prior year.

By exempting the overlay account from Prop. 2-1/2 levy limits, cities and towns could raise new taxes an equivalent amount to their overlay accounts.

A town's overlay account consists of money set aside for property tax abatements and exemptions.

Cohasset's FY'93 overlay account is $200,000. Exempting that amount from Prop. 2-1/2 constraints would give Cohasset $200,000 in additional levy capacity, assistant assessor/appraiser Joseph Divito said.

If used, the $200,000 tax increase would cost the owner of a $300,000 home in Cohasset about $70 a year, Divito said.

The state allows towns to set aside five percent of their tax levy in the overlay account.

Assessors set aside about two percent of Cohasset's $10.2 million tax levy.

Divito said the state checks to make sure towns don't pad their overlay accounts.

"You couldn't automatically go to five percent," he said. "The state looks at the recap sheet and does a five-year analysis.

"It can't be abused even if its taken out of the constraints of Prop. 2-1/2," he said.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) said she will support the governor's veto on exempting the overlay account.

Murray said she wasn't surprised about the governor's veto.

She said only the people should be able to change Prop. 2-1/2.

"Prop. 2-1/2 passed overwhelmingly in my towns," said Murray, who represents Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull. "And I think the people should call the shots when it comes to a referendum."

A two-thirds majority in the senate and the house are needed to override the governor's veto.

State Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) said he will not vote to override the governor's veto of the abatement exemption.

"I see that (abatement exemption) as an assault on Prop. 2-1/2 and the homeowners because it would raise property taxes," he said.

"Torin Sweeney is a tremendous role model. It's not a political thing," Caldwell said. "I really see it as a loss for the kids of Cohasset."

Susan Fiore also spoke in support of Sweeney.

"The reason I'm here is that I feel so strongly about it," Fiore said.

Bliss told parents that the process in place for hiring teachers attempts to discourage politics.

"We do not like to view our hiring of teachers as a lobbying effort," Bliss said.

She added that it was procedure to re-advertise teaching positions during the summer which had been filled during the school year by temporary replacements.

The process in place ensures that the town will have a large pool of qualified candidates to choose from, she said.

"We want the largest pool possible to have the best candidate," Bliss explained to the Sweeney supporters who attended.

In the past, Bliss said, mid-year vacancies have drawn as few as a single candidate to choose from for the position.

New RTF regulations set for hauler use

The Board of Health amended the Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) Regulations for resident/hauler use, a summary of which follows:

The regulation defines various types of wastes to include recyclables, garbage, rubbish, refuse, special wastes, bulky waste, commercial waste and household waste.

The RTF may be used by residents who have a current sticker purchased at the board of health or the RTF for waste generated at their residence only. Persons who recycle must also purchase a sticker by August 1, to be admitted to the RTF. Certain businesses may also purchase a permit. Landscapers may deposit leaf and yard waste from Cohasset without a permit. Violators may be fined $25.

The RTF is open Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Wastes or recyclables must be placed in their appropriate area. Refuse must not be allowed to spill from a vehicle carrying litter. Certain items are prohibited: demolition waste from contractors, stumps, automobiles, toxic and/or special wastes, large animals and septage. Brush, including Christmas trees, is accepted only on designated days as published in the local newspaper.

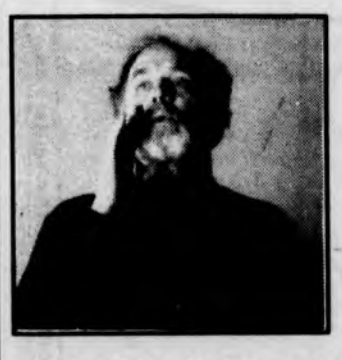
A sticker fee will be set annually by the board of health. A fee for truck loads of other than normal household waste is also set. These and other fees for commercial haulers, businesses and recycling are posted in the board of health office.

Solicitation is permitted only within 75 feet of the exit gate.

The entire regulation is available for public review at the board of health offices, town hall.

Appliance fee set

Effective immediately there will be a $10 fee per appliance for all residents disposing appliances containing chlorofluorocarbons (CFC's) in their cooling units. Examples of such appliances are refrigerators, air-conditioners and dehumidifiers.



New regulations require removal of CFC's before they are sent to the scrap dealer.

Margo Sylvester has many irons in the fire

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

You may not know her name, but you've seen her around town. The traditional Scottish Balmoral cap with its sweep of feather tops a mass of silvery curls and signals that this is a lady with style.

Meet Margo Sylvester, a woman of many talents.

"I've done everything I set out to do," she says happily. "I've lived a good life."

Although she's 88, Sylvester isn't resting on her laurels. There's always something else that needs the Sylvester touch.

"I've got too many irons in the fire," she jokes.

At the moment Sylvester is working on a brochure about the beginning of the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset.

"Drama was really the beginning of it," Sylvester says. The train turned Cohasset into a summer colony for the Brahmins, and actors followed on their heels, she explains.

They started a drama club that brought more people to Cohasset. The flirtation with the arts became an enduring marriage that ultimately led Cohasset into the forefront of the arts movement on the South Shore.

Sylvester's brochure-in-progress also demonstrates her impish sense of humor: The cover bears a little poem that reads:

Cohasset for beauty,
Hingham for pride,
Except for the herring,
Weymouth had died."

Her interest in the art center is no surprise. Sylvester's artwork is well-known on the South Shore and points beyond. She has work displayed all over the United States and Europe.

Although she studied design and drawing and painting at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, her career as an artist started much earlier. As soon as she could hold a pencil, Sylvester was translating the world around her into line and color.

"Mother kept all the things I did," she says. One of them is a drawing of a chicken sitting on a nest.

Sylvester herself is a keeper and saver. Her home is chock-a-block with paintings and drawings by family members and friends.

"Art is in the family," she adds. "Mother always stimulated our imagination. She read to us from the classics and poems. She had the most marvelous voice."

Sylvester's imagination ran rampant when her mother read, and that led her to an early career choice.

"I always wanted to illustrate books," she says.

Serendipitously, Sylvester joined a nature club in Scituate. One of the members of the club was the publisher, D.C. Heath. When Sylvester told him what she wanted to do, he opened the door to his editors' offices. Sylvester did the rest.

Most of her work consisted of black line drawings and vignettes for text books. She drew whimsical animals, adorable children, Spanish dancers, fairy tale landscapes—you name a subject matter and she almost certainly has drawn it.

Her skill was such that her editors never sent her back to the drawing board for revisions.

In the 1930s, she decided warm weather was more to her liking. She headed off to the Hawaiian Islands where she remained from 1935 to 1937.

Margo Sylvester

While in Hawaii, she decided she would like to add journalism to her resumé.

"I had no more idea what to put in a newspaper than—oh I don't know what," she confessed. But her central philosophy held her in good stead.

"I am convinced if you really want to do something and you set out to do it, you can do anything you want to," she maintains.

Sylvester wrote some pieces about a stray dog she had been feeding and presented them to the top editor. He liked her writing and her style and hired her on the spot. Eventually she wrote and did artwork for two newspapers in Hawaii.

Sylvester's sense of humor and playfulness led her to create a fake photograph of a Norse ship being uncovered on the beach in Honolulu. The paper ran it one April Fool's Day. She also got to interview and paint George Bernard Shaw when he visited the Big Island.

"He was quite an old geezer, but he was fascinating," she confided.

When she returned from her sojourn, she went to work for the Boston Herald. Later she developed expertise in the electronics field and worked for the Air Force at their Cambridge research center.

> "It's (family history) like putting a puzzle together, I went into graveyards and town offices."

Sylvester did a little bit of everything for the Air Force. She designed a reception area desk and a large painting, created special exhibits and a medal, suggested a cost-saving measure for a special lens the Air force needed to construct and designed a chart reader for a galvanometer-type recording instrument.

"I was not a draftsman, but I had a drafting book," she said with characteristic understatement.

Often experts contended her solutions couldn't work, but Sylvester stubbornly held her ground. When put to the test, her ideas always came out on top.

She believes her ability to use visualization helped her solve problems that stymied more technically-minded people.

Another key to her success, she said, was that rather than discussing theory with engineers, she talked practical applications with workmen.

Sylvester and fellow artist Priscilla Sibley, a longtime friend who died a short time ago, visited Scotland in 1965.

"My grandmother emigrated from Scotland," Sylvester said. "I always remembered her telling me it took her 40 days and 40 nights to arrive here."

And there were other stories her grandmother told about life in the highlands with its purple twilight and heather. Sylvester always wanted to see the places that danced in her memory.

In addition, Sylvester had maintained a 30-year correspondence with a young man she met on the boat to Hawaii. The handsome fellow with pink cheeks turned out to be titled. Sir Mark Dalrymple, Lord of Newhailes, invited Sylvester and Sibley to stay with him and his wife.

The 40-room house is now part of the National Trust in Scotland and Dalrymple's widow, Lady Antonia, lives in an apartment in it. Sylvester remembers getting lost trying to find the bathroom and meeting up with several of the resident ghosties.

"The first night Priscilla came into my room with her hair standing on end," Sylvester recalled. Sibley reported feeling a vacuum and a tremendous chill coming over her. The following morning they learned Sir Mark's grandmother had taken a bad chill and died in that room. Sibley found it impossible to sleep in the room after that revelation.

Another day, Sylvester was washing up when she heard someone running in the corridor. When she went out into the hallway, it was empty. She returned to her room and asked Sibley what she had wanted. Sibley responded that she had not been out of the room.

On a couple of occasions, Sylvester smelled the very strong scent of roast beef in her bedroom. When she asked Sibley if she smelled it too, Sibley said there was no smell of roast beef or anything else.

Finally Sylvester made some reference about it to the woman who brought up her breakfast tray.

"Oh, they're at it again," the woman laughed and then reassured her, "They're friendly ghosts."

Sibley and Sylvester also tramped about the countryside, painting what they saw. They fell in love with the moody light of Scotland and tried to capture its changing moods in paint.

Sylvester's studio is full of mementos of that trip. There are paintings of the rugged coastline, the castle at Tantallian and a crofter's house tucked into the countryside.

Sylvester displays them alongside the paintings of Scituate scenes and wildflower studies and portrait work left from the artwork of two lifetimes.

"I paint whatever appeals to me," Sylvester says. Of her success, she merely says, "People like my paintings. I've been lucky."

One of her favorite memories is an exhibit she and Sibley mounted. They prepared a tape of narration about the paintings accompanied by piano music played by Sibley. It caused quite a stir. No one had done anything like it before.

"We always felt that music and art go hand in hand," Sylvester said. "You really see things better that way." Sylvester still has the tape and plays selections to prove her point.

One of Sylvester's favorite pieces of work memorializes the day her grandfather and his brother launched their big red red dory in storm-driven surf to save the victims from the wreck of the Lucy D. Winsor. Had it not been for the brave rescue by D.P. and Irving Sylvester, many sailors would have gone to a watery grave March 9, 1890.

Sylvester takes great pride in her family history. The Sylvesters and Manns have been shaping life on the South Shore as far back as 1630. Thanks to her genealogical detective work and the gift bestowed on the town by Sylvester, her sister Ruth and a cousin, Scituate residents can claim that history as part of their heritage as well.

Long ago, a Hingham High school music teacher gave Sylvester a collection of publications from the New England Genealogical Society that she had kept but never done anything with. Then a distant relative contacted her to find out how William Sylvester tied into their genealogy.

"It's funny how things happen," she mused. "They tend to get you to do things you hadn't intended."

That one innocent question led Sylvester to spend two years putting the family history together piece by piece.

"It's like putting a puzzle together," she said. "I went into graveyards and town offices."

Often she would find blind alleys and roadblocks caused by fires and water damage to town records. But nothing could deter her from her quest to track the family back to their arrival in Nantasket from England. When she finished, she donated her family history to the town library.

Following the death of her somewhat eccentric cousin, Percy Mann, the family gave the town a treasure trove on condition that Scituate maintain, preserve and protect the the Mann house and its contents as a public

around town

❑ Aug. 5 is a special day for a very special person! One of Cohasset's favorite townies, Bill Enos, is going to have a special one, and we all wish you the best of health happiness and love. Karyl, who works and lives in Arizona, sent us the message that it is your big day. She wanted to surprise you, and we sure hope that it worked! By the way, Karyl loves her new home in Arizona. After living in Hingham she finds it quite hot, but its okay with her. Naturally she misses our fair town, but we would expect that! Anyway, Bill, happy birthday, and may you find a real slugger for the Red Sox as a gift!

❑ Speaking of birthdays, it's the time of year again...Happy Birthday greetings to Clark Chatterton, whose birthday was July 29. Hope it was a super day.

❑ We welcome Katherine Brennan Baker, daughter of Elizabeth and Mark Baker of 32 Nichols Road, born June 28 at 7:54 a.m. at South Shore Hospital. Katherine weighed in at 6 lbs., 8 oz., and we know that the Bakers are in for a joyous summer.

❑ There was a real "happening" last weekend; that's when Jay Fiori held his first annual tribute to Elvis Presley. His collection of Elvis memorabilia is unsurpassed in this area and he wanted to share with all. By the time the day was over, everyone there was convinced that Elvis lives; they claim they actually felt his presence. Any Elvis question that you need to have answered, ask Jay...any tape or recording the same thing applies. For the second annual Elvis tribute, they plan to go to Graceland. I wonder what they will find there that Jay doesn't already have (or know).

❑ We salute Robert Leggat, son of Richard and Patricia Leggat; Robert received a bachelor of arts degree from Dartmouth College, with government as his major.

❑ And, David Russell Shultz, son of Larry and Linda Shultz of Linden Drive, also deserves special praise. He graduated from Bowdoin College with a major in economics and a minor in government. David was a dean's list student, a member of SAVO (Student Admissions Volunteer Organization), and was a varsity letter winner in soccer.

❑ Who can mention Bowdoin College without mentioning Holly Nicole Pompeo, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Roger Pompeo? Holly also graduated this May, with majors in government and Spanish. Her activities included Bowdoin Big Brother/Big Sister Program; Student Phonathons (for fund-raising for Annual Fund); and American Red Cross. Holly spent the fall of her junior year in Madrid, Spain, in a program administered by St. Louis University. Good luck in your job search Holly!!

❑ Mary Elizabeth McNamara, daughter of John and Susan McNamara, also was awarded a bachelor of arts degree from Bowdoin College. Marybeth's major was government, with a minor in Asian studies. Her honors included dean's list student and James Bowdoin Scholar (for academic excellence). She spent her junior year, fall semester, in Geneva, Switzerland, as part of the Kent State University Program.

❑ Finally, the last of the Bowdoin news...Todd Fitzpatrick, son of Pat Fitzpatrick, earned his degree in economics, with a minor in government. Todd was a varsity letter-winner in ice hockey and soccer.

❑ A little undergrad news that sure is great...Michael A. Russell (a junior) and Gerhard W. Lubitz (sophomore) received academic distinction from Noble and Greenough School.

❑ Justine Stohl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Stohl, was named to the dean's list during the 1991-92 school year in recognition of academic achievement at the National Technical Institute for the Deaf, a college of Rochester Institute of Technology.

❑ Congratulations to Angela Parisi-Butman and Janet Hoyler for achieving the highest award for a Cadette Girl Scout. The girls gave over 100 service hours to our surrounding communities, completed several badges and patches, and did a service project on recycling. The service project taught brownies how to make recycled paper, what are renewable and non-renewable resources, a resource tree and how to make musical instruments out of recycled materials. These girls will receive their silver medal in September from State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, a Girl Scout herself. Again, congratulations to you both.

❑ More exciting Girl Scout news. Girl Scouts from Cohasset, Hull, Hingham and Weymouth enjoyed a night with Girl Scouts from India. Angela and Amy Parisi-Butman and Janet Hoyler were host families during their stay in America. The girls enjoyed sights from New York, New Hampshire and throughout Massachusetts. Girl Scouts learned their customs, wore bindis, saris and enjoyed games and authentic Indian food.

Cohasset resident chosen for area pageant

Dancer and model Amy Currier of the Cohasset High School Class of 1990, has been selected for this year's Miss Teen Providence Pageant.

Amy Currier

A dance party, Dance Athon, will be held for Amy's sponsorship of the Pageant.

Open to the public, the dance will be held Sunday, Aug. 9 from 6 to 9:30 p.m. at Cohasset Community Teen Depot Center (3 North Main St.).

Amy hopes to be a professional dancer and model and to own her own business with her own creations such as clothes, jewelry and other accessories, paintings and more.

Amy also was a finalist in this year's New England Model in Stamford, Connecticut.

Admission to the dance is $1. For more information, Amy will be available at the Center after 6 p.m. Sunday, Tuesday, and Thursday. Free admission for previous sponsors.

The pageant will be held at Veterans Memorial Auditorium in Providence, RI, Aug. 31 at 4 p.m.

The New Book by the Author of Honey Fitz and Put It On the Front Page, Please!

The autobiography of the founder of the Duxbury Clipper, John H. Cutler

What they said about Put It On the Front Page, Please!...

"One of the gayest weekly mirrors of New England small-town life..."--The New York Times

"For lively, humorous reading there has been nothing recently as delightful as Put It On the Front Page, Please." --Boston Sunday Globe

Here's what critics say about some of his other books:

Honey Fitz...
"Here is The Last Hurrah in fact, not fiction... It is more a rogues' gallery of the Golden Age of Skulduggery in Boston politics than a biography..." --The Saturday Review

"Cutler... has written not only a biography of a man but a history of a period in American politics which was as bizarre as the most imaginative writer of fiction could dream up... It is as factual as a weather report, but as irresistibly funny -- and sad -- as Emmett Kelly, the master clown." --Chicago Tribune

Cardinal Cushing of Boston...
"This is the definitive biography of the Cardinal to be issued to date. It is in greater depth, evidences more painstaking research and offers more detail than any of the others." --The Sign

Cohasset's museums are open for visitors

The Cohasset Historical Society's two summer museums at Elm Street, Cohasset center, now are open for their summer season.

The Maritime Museum and Capt. John Wilson Historical House are open each afternoon except Mondays from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Cohasset's history as a small New England seacoast village is portrayed in each of the two museum buildings.

The Maritime Museum contains collections of artifacts, pictures and charts relating to the town's 19th century "Age of Sail" when fishing and shipbuilding were an important part of its economy. Shipwrecks, lifesaving and the fascinating story of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse are some of the subjects covered, and models of 19th century sailing ships are on view. There also is a section devoted to general artifacts and collections relating to the early town in general. Stone tools of the early Indian tribes are displayed, as are antique school desks. Housewright's and cordwainer's tools can be seen among the numerous displays on the museum's upper floor.

The adjacent Capt. Wilson House, furnished as an 1810 Cohasset home, is the site of this summer's series of exhibits by the society's Costumes Committee. Rotating exhibits, changed monthly, show some of the many 19th and early 20th century examples of fine clothing found in the society's extensive costumes collection. This month antique wedding gowns and accessories are featured.

This year the society's museum shop is located at the Maritime Museum. Articles available include items relating to the history of Cohasset. Both volumes of the Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset, by Rev. E. V. Bigelow and by Burtram J. Pratt, are available, as is the biographical Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains by E. Pomeroy Collier. A Children's Coloring Book of Cohasset, by Barbara Conte, also is featured. This year's additions to the Historical Society's museum shop are two Cohasset-related tee shirts having designs, one marking the establishing of America's first volunteer lifeboat station at the town's Whitehead Point in 1807 by the Massachusetts Humane Society, and the other showing a replica of an 1842 Temperance Banner from Cohasset, the original of which is owned by the society. Pairpoint glass cup plates illustrating Minot's Ledge Lighthouse, and canvas tote bags having the society's seal along with a Minot's Light songsheet, round out the history-related items offered at the Museum Shop.

Admission to Cohasset Historical Society museums is free.

Driven to distraction

Once again Cohasset has achieved the dubious distinction of a listing on the highway department's 1,000 most accident-prone intersections in Massachusetts, based upon data for 1991. Beechwood St. and Lower King St. where they intersect with Route 3A are the sites to be most wary of in town.

Traffic congestion is a way of life to the residents of the South Shore. We all can recite our own list of least-favorite intersections and most user-unfriendly roads.

Recently, a nationwide study ranked the Bay State first in the nation in the number of fender-benders per miles of roadway. The Massachusetts driver's reputation appears secure for the time being.

It's true that some drivers tend to take advantage of every opportunity to seize the right of way or cut off other motorists. But it would be an oversimplification to paint all of our motorist brethren as lead-footed maniacs with a blatant disregard for vehicular safety.

To solve the problem, we need to address why our motoring habits are propelled by this unique sense of urgency. Chronically congested roads pose the dilemma of spending a disproportionate share of one's days in traffic, or driving aggressively to minimize the delays and increasing the risk of a fender-bender. Judging from the frequency of accidents on roads like Routes 139, 18, 228 and 53, and it's clear which path many have chosen.

Many of our secondary roads are merely the successors of old cow paths, later upgraded as local roads and strung together under a common route number. The absence of an east-west route on the South Shore complicates the path from Cohasset to Brockton, Scituate to Abington, or similar journeys.

In the absence of any consensus for major highway construction projects to upgrade an overtaxed infrastructure, the region's best hope for relief lies in the Old Colony commuter rail project. If the trains succeed in removing any substantial percentage of vehicles from our roads, the numbers of fender-benders is sure to decline.

Unfortunately, that won't happen until 1996 at the earliest. In the meantime, drive carefully. School's out.

Resident is 'no longer silent'

letters

To the Editor:

Lest the Mariner be accused of biased journalism, I would like to add my comments to your July 16 article headlined as, "Pro-Choicers Supported at Demonstration."

That's quite an assumption made along with Ms. Cutler's quote that, "We haven't seen one negative reaction." Three paragraphs later we read that there was, in fact, some negative reaction.

As a "veteran" of holding campaign signs, I know that it is not always possible to determine the sentiments of the public as they whisk by.

Your article, however, states that the six women received overwhelming support.

No mention was made of the hundreds of cars driven by people such as myself who passed by in silence.

I am certain that the media and the National Organization for Women would have us believe that the Pro-Life movement is in the minority.

I choose to disagree and if my silence has been interpreted as consent, count me in as one who will no longer be silent.

Rec. director warns of impatient drivers

(The following letter was sent to Acting Chief Brian Noonan)

Dear Brian:

Per our conversation of Monday, July 20, re. playground traffic at the intersection of Ripley Road and Sohier Street, I observed the traffic flows between 8:50 and 9:15 a.m. today and am not completely satisfied that we are going to be able to control traffic in a manner that is 100 percent safe.

We have re-established the regular traffic signal sequence, which is in consideration of pedestrians crossing the intersection. Traffic flows were heavy this morning and we had one problem which has previously occurred twice before; one vehicle ran the yellow line between two lanes of opposing traffic creating an extremely hazardous situation. Unfortunately, I was unable to ascertain the registration number of the vehicle.

For the most part, traffic flowed well, despite the number of vehicles. From time to time, vehicles would get caught in the intersection with a red light. I am unable to say that this particular condition created an unsafe or hazardous situation, however, the potential for a problem to occur, under these conditions, probably does exist to some degree, especially if anyone were trying to cross the street on foot.

Generally, vehicles did not get backed up or caught in the intersection and we may be able to institute a couple of actions, preventing this occurrence. I have instructed our playground director to relocate the standards marking the turn-around/drop-off area inside the parking lot of Osgood School. In effect, we will widen the turn around area, which should accommodate three more vehicles. Reducing three vehicles from the street traffic lanes may eliminate the occurrence of vehicles caught in the intersection in red light cycles.

It should be established that this action is about the only action left that we can take in order to make traffic flows smoother. I am not inclined to assign a staff member to the street or intersection to sort out traffic, but rather will confine our efforts to the drop-off/turn-around area inside the Osgood parking lot. I would request that the safety officer or some other designated officer be assigned to observe the 8:50 to 9:10 a.m. drop-off scheme. That is, there may well be a better way of handling the traffic flow and I would appreciate an evaluation of our current system right away.

In our favor is the relative speed of the traffic, which is, of course, very slow. None the less, should we have future occurrences with impatient, inconsiderate drivers, a very unsafe and extremely hazardous situation could manifest quickly.

I thank you for your efforts on our behalf, and your consideration of assigning an officer to evaluate our situation as soon as possible would be greatly appreciated.

Little Harbor provides hospitable environs for birds

(The following letter was sent to the Conservation Commission and the Selectmen.)

Dear Members of the Conservation Commission,

Over a month ago, I attended a meeting to determine the feasibility of permitting an airboat to be placed in Little Harbor in front of our home.

At that time, you wisely turned down the request which had been brought before you by a neighbor, Mr. Carl Van Etten.

Mr. VanEtten claimed that the airboat would remove the existing algae, in no way diminish the wading bird population, and please those of us surrounding Little Harbor.

It occurred to me that you might like to know that since that time, my husband and I have had the pleasure of watching many green heron (which I understand to be in the Bittern family) while they fed on tiny eels lodged in the algae. Prior to this, we had not seen any Green Heron in this area.

This part of Little Harbor continues to provide a hospitable environment for several species of ducks, swans, snowy egrets, blue heron, great white heron, night herons and an osprey.

So the particular human denizens of this household wish to thank you for permitting us to continue to enjoy sharing the space with the wildlife, whom I suspect wouldn't have liked the sound of an airboat any more than we would.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

THE HOUSE. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on four roll calls from July sessions. There were no roll calls in the House last week. The House is expected to meet this week to act on a fiscal 1992 supplemental budget and some of Governor Weld's budget vetoes. The four House roll calls are on proposed amendments to the bill scaling back the recent hike in unemployment taxes paid by employers and making other changes in benefits and eligibility. The House and Senate eventually passed a compromise version which was signed by Governor Weld. (House) SUBSTITUTE (H 5909) - House 92-60, rejected a Republican-sponsored substitute bill repealing the additional increases in the unemployment tax and going back to the old system. Substitute bill supporters said this will stop the estimated average hike from $280 to $362 and simply allow the automatic lower average increase to $333 under the old system. Opponents said the substitute bill does nothing to solve the problem of a $500 million deficit in the unemployment trust fund and noted the state is borrowing some $5 million a day from the federal government to stay solvent. (A "Yea" vote is for the substitute bill. A "Nay" vote is against it).		Y
(House) CHANGES (H 5909) - House 105-43, rejected a Republican-sponsored amendment making changes in the wage base and schedules. Amendment supporters said this is a less drastic hit on businesses and argued that combined with benefit changes this will make the fund solvent by 1996. Opponents said the amendment raises less money and will lead to continued borrowing. They argued it is not a solution and will not make the fund solvent by 1996. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it).		Y
(House) 26 OR 30 WEEKS (H 5909) - House 108-41, rejected an amendment to the provision allowing a person to collect unemployment benefits for 30 weeks. The amendment would provide 30 weeks of benefits only when unemployment is higher than 4.5 percent and reduce the period to 26 weeks when unemployment is below 4.5 percent. Amendment supporters argued only one other state allows 30 weeks and said this would save millions of dollars. Opponents said the additional month is important to individual people who depend on these benefits regardless of the overall unemployment rate. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment reducing the period to 26 weeks when unemployment is below 4.5 percent. A "Nay" vote is against the amendment).		Y
(House) SEASONAL EMPLOYEES (H 5909) - House 93-54, rejected an amendment allowing seasonal employees to collect benefits only if they have their job during "the season." Amendment supporters said this will prohibit anyone from knowingly taking and completing a temporary job and then filing for benefits. They claimed the amendment will save millions of dollars and stop abuse of the system by students and others who take summer jobs and then try to collect. Opponents said the amendment will hurt construction workers and others who would be denied benefits. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it).		Y
THE SENATE. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on two roll calls from July sessions. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week. The Senate is expected to meet this week to act on a fiscal 1992 supplemental budget and some of Governor Weld's budget vetoes. (Senate) ABUSE (S 825) - Senate 31-0 (two senators voted "no" but under a Senate "pairing" rule their votes were not reflected in the final tally) gave initial approval to a bill allowing additional court personnel to issue temporary restraining orders in domestic abuse cases when the courts are closed for business. Current law gives this authority to justices of the superior, probate and family, district and Boston municipal courts. The bill would add clerk magistrates, registers and their assistants. Supporters said this will protect these abuse victims and make it easier to obtain temporary restraining orders by telephone when the courts are closed and the plaintiff demonstrates a substantial likelihood of immediate danger of abuse. Opponents offered no arguments. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay vote is against it).	Y
(Senate) VOLUNTARY (S 1654) - Senate 19-15, approved an amendment to the bill scaling back the recent hike in unemployment taxes paid by employers. The amendment would eliminate unemployment benefits for many people who voluntarily quit their jobs. Amendment supporters said this will save $25 million and said the state should not subsidize people who voluntarily quit their jobs. Opponents said this amendment eliminates flexibility and urged the Senate to retain current language providing that a person can receive benefits if he or she establishes that his or her reasons for leaving were urgent and compelling. They noted people should be able to collect if they leave for health reasons or to follow their spouse who gets a job in another state. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment eliminating benefits for many people who voluntarily quit their jobs. A "Nay" vote is against the amendment).	Y

'Colony' author in town

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Anne Rivers Siddons' care-free and earthy manner offers few clues to the multi-million dollar contracts she commands for her novels.

Siddons, 56, was featured at Cohasset's Buttonwood Books & Toys July 23, where she exuded the southern grace she is noted for in publishing circles.

She read and signed copies of "Colony," her latest literary endeavor. "Colony" is a multi-generational tale which traces the failures and successes of three families from the backdrop of their traditional summer vacation spot on the Maine coast.

"Colony" is the first of three novels Siddons has agreed to write for HarperCollins for a reported $3.25 million.

Her last novel, "Outer Banks," landed at number five on the New York Times best seller's list.

The native Georgian endearingly admits to a less-than-strenuous writing schedule.

"I usually write between 9:30 in the morning and 2 in the afternoon, except towards the end of a novel when I write longer because momentum is building," Siddons said.

"I take five or six months to write — there's usually not a lot of research involved."

Siddons and her husband, who live in Atlanta, built a cottage in the woods behind their house so she can write in solitude. She uses a "coward's word-processor," a.k.a. an electronic typewriter, to compose her work.

With a three-novel contract hanging in the balance, she was asked if she ever works on more than one story at a time.

"I can barely chew gum and walk at the same time," she laughed. "Oh no, I couldn't do that. I become totally immersed in the story I'm writing at the moment — often more so than in the real world."

With "Colony," Siddons said her immersion into her characters, particularly the main character Maude x, deepened to previously unknown depths.

"I'm not able to leave her behind. She is very much with me," Siddons said of Maude, the strong-willed matriarch of the family.

Siddons said involvement with her characters usually ends with the completion of the book.

"Colony," represents another departure for Siddons, because unlike her other novels, it is set in Maine.

She said she is as personally connected to the Maine setting as she is with the southern locations she used in her seven other novels.

"We go to a colony in Maine every summer," she drawled.

The colony she visits in Maine has been in her family for three generations, she explained. "My husband's grand-father built it over 100 years ago."

In "Colony," Maude also married a man whose family had been summering at the same place in Maine for generations.

And Siddons, like Maude, married a Princeton man.

She said the proximity of the story to her real-life ends there.

"Oh, but the main characters aren't me and my husband, or I would have been divorced a long time ago," she laughed.

The main character, Maude Debois, is patterned instead on Siddons mother-in-law, for whom Siddons has the highest regard.

With an option for a mini-series already in the works, Siddons said she would like to see Helen Bonham Carter, ("A Room with a View,") play Maude.

"And I don't know what they are thinking if William Hurt doesn't play her husband," she said.

"Colony," is not Siddons' first work to go from paper to film. "Heartbreak Hotel" was made into the 1976 movie "Heart of Dixie," staring Ally Sheedy.

Betsey Detwiller, owner of Buttonwood Books and Toys on Route 3A, said "Colony" " is a good summer read."

She also said she was humbled by Siddons' decision to include Buttonwood on her book tour.

"She's really a major name," Detwiller said. "It's nice to make an author of her stature available to people on the South Shore."

Siddons' book tour began in California June 20 and will end in Maine next week.

MEDEX UPDATE

By Kathy Glenzel, SHINE Coordinator

Congress passed legislation in 1990 that will effect your Medigap insurance. This is insurance designed to cover the deductibles and co-insurance associated with Medicare.

Effective Aug. 1, all health insurers that sell Medigap insurance in Massachusetts will be required to offer new benefits.

The new benefits include the following: coverage for the 20 percent coinsurance for all Medicare covered services under Part B. This includes the 20 percent coinsuranée for Medicare covered office visits, outpatient services, ambulance, coverage for the first three pints of blood and the purchase/rental of durable medical equipment.

As a result of these changes, benefits will improve significantly, but premiums will also increase. Blue Cross and Blue Shields' Medex premiums will increase August 1st.

While these new benefits will improve coverage, Medigap insurance remains unaffordable for more and more elders. A Medigap Working Group (headed by the Division of Insurance) is working to identify and subsidy source that would assist low income elders with the purchase of Medigap insurance.

Legislation has also been filed to establish a subsidy program (Medigap Relief bill, House 5275). For those unable to afford Medigap insurance, they may qualify for assistance through the Qualified Medicare Beneficiary Program (QMB). The QMB Program will cover all the deductible and co-insurances associated with Medicare and will cover the monthly Part B premium (31.80-1992).

It will also cover the Part A monthly premium for those who do not qualify for Medicare. This program has income and asset limitations. For more information on the QMB Program and other health benefits information, please contact the SHINE Coordinator, Kathy Glenzel at 383-9116.

Summer Arts at Derby

The fourth season of "Summer Arts at Derby" is in full swing at Derby Academy in Hingham. Thirty artists and 130 boys and girls are participating in over 50 courses such as clay, rock band, gymnastics, ballet, weaving, animation, soccer, puppetry, acting, cooking, and photography.

A newspaper, The Weathervane, is published daily, and a full-scale musical is produced. This summer's musical, "Once Upon A Mattress," a comedy adaptation of "The Princess and the Pea," will be performed July 30 at 7:30 p.m. and July 31 at 11 a.m. Guest artists complement the program with special one-day residencies.

An addition this year is an authentic teepee that is used as a classroom space. It has also inspired some innovative new projects, such as the creation of Native American shields by the folk arts class.

The program culminates in an all-day arts festival Friday, July 31, to which the public is invited. The arts festival celebrates the talents of the students through performances and exhibits of their work. For information about "Summer Arts at Derby," please call Thalia McMillion at 740-4766.

South Shore Soccer Camp

Registrations for South Shore Soccer Camp have begun for boys and girls ages eight through 18. This is South Shore Soccer Camp's third year in Cohasset. Anyone interested in registering for South Shore Soccer Camp should contact the Cohasset Recreation Department, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall, or call 383-6791.

Soccer Camp for boys is held Aug. 3 through 7 and for girls, Aug. 10 through 14.

Both camps will meet daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Cohasset's Milliken Field.

The cost for camp is $159 and discounts are available for subsequent children registering from the same family, as well as team-enrollment discounts.

South Shore Soccer represents top flight soccer training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players from the New England area.

The Cohasset Recreation Department holds summer concerts at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 11.

Performing will be the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Concerts are free of charge and open to the public. Please bring lawn chair or blanket and insect repellent.

Funding for the 1992 Band Concerts has been provided through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc., and a matching grant from the American Federation of Musicians, New York City.

'Wait Until Dark!!' Auditions set

Cohasset Dramatic Club will stage the Frederick Knott suspense thriller 'Wait Until Dark' Oct. 23 to 31 at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Auditions for all roles is set for Sunday and Monday, August 16 and 17 at 7 p.m.

There are character roles for three male actors (any age) to play the con men; one male actor to play the husband; one girl age (nine to 10-years old) to play the neighbor child and a role for one woman (25 to 40 years old) to play the resourceful-capable yet vulnerable blind wife (acted on Broadway by Lee Remick and by Audrey Hepburn in the movie).

The play director is Bob Champagne of Scituate, an experienced director (many South Shore shows and musicals) as well as accomplished actor, and recent independent movie director and producer.

Scripts may be read at the Paul Pratt Library in Cohasset, 383-1348.

Auditioners will be asked to read from the play, with which they should be familiar. For anyone interested in being a member and working behind the scenes, call Gayl Varallo at 383-2366.

Carillonneur to perform

Frank DellaPenna, Carillonneur of the Washington Memorial Chapel Carillon at Valley Forge, Pennsylvania, will give the fifth in the continuing series of concerts on Cohasset's 57-bell Taylor carillon in St. Stephen's Church overlooking the Common, Sunday, Aug. 2 at 6 p.m.

DellaPenna will play his own "Jungle Suite" for carillon, as well as music from musicals, old Spanish dances, a medley of 1920's songs and patriotic selections.

Printed programs will be provided on the Common and in the courtyard in back of St. Stephen's Church on Highland Avenue. The program will be played rain or shine, and the public is invited to bring picnic suppers, blankets and lawn chairs.

Following the recital, a brief tower tour is available to those interested in viewing the carillon console.

For further information, please call 383-1083.

Blueberry festival Aug. 9

Beechwood Congregational Church will hold its Annual Blueberry Festival Sunday, Aug. 9, at 6:30 p.m.

The cost of the blueberry treats will be a single price of $4. The ladies of the church will be making blueberry pies, cakes, sundaes, pizza, and other blueberry delights.

A Pound Auction will be held following dessert. For further information call the church at 383-0808.

SHARE registration dates

Registration dates for the Council on Aging SHARE Program are Wednesday, Aug. 5, 10 a.m. to noon and Thursday, Aug. 6, 7 to 8 p.m.

Distribution Day is Aug. 22 at Town Hall, 9 to 11 a.m.

Cosby benefit set

Education advocates Drs. William and Camille Cosby just might accept the invitation to attend the lawn party before his 9 p.m. Music Circus show Saturday, Aug. 29. Bill Cosby is personally committed to children, families, and educational excellence, and, for those reasons, the 18 member task force developing the new foundation chose his show as their kick-off benefit.

To order tickets, call Superintendent Steve Hart's office (383-6111) during the day, or Clark Chatterton (383-0560) at night, or send a check, payable to the Cohasset Education Foundation, to the Office of the Superintendent, 143 Pond St., Cohasset. Tickets are $50 and $45, and will be tax deductible in part. Everyone who orders one of the 200 reserved tickets through the foundation will receive an invitation to the pre-show party.

In addition to furniture and furnishings, the house contains a unique collection of tools once common in Scituate but rarely seen today.

"The Mann House is the only place with a collection of marine equipment from the early days even though Scituate was second only to Boston in the shipbuilding industry," she said.

The house contained yet another treasure.

When she was a child, Percy used to show her his watch fob. It was a silver coin from France dated 1759.

"There's plenty more where that comes from, " he would tell her with an air of mystery.

When he died, she recalled those words and set about to find if he did have a hidden treasure. She had nearly given up when a treasure hunter spied the gleam of gold hidden beneath the floorboards that had been covered by carpeting. They uncovered an old tin can and an old canvas bag filled with gold doubloons and pieces-of-eight from what is believed to be pirate booty.

Historians can only speculate how Percy Mann came to have the loot. He carried that secret to his grave.

Although the coins were sold to settle the estate, Sylvester kept the watch fob coin that triggered the hunt.

Sylvester remembers the day the family turned over the house and its contents to the town. Sibley wrote a poem for the occasion entitled "This Old House Speaks." Everyone remained silent after the ceremony.

"We were just speechless," Sylvester recalled. "Then a hermit thrust sang the last song of evening. I'll never forget that day."

Today Sylvester lives in a rambling Cape surrounded by the photographs, paintings, books and memorabilia of a fascinating life. You could wander through rooms for weeks and never get bored. But as much as Sylvester treasures her past, she lives for the present.

The newest part of her present is a black and white cat she adopted from the Standish Humane Society.

Sylvester had been sending the society a monthly donation and they had sent back pictures of the cat her money helped feed and care for. Then she saw the cat's picture in the newspaper as part of the society's regular effort to find good homes for the animals it rescues.

"I didn't want anyone else to adopt 'my' cat,' " Sylvester said. She called the society and they delivered Poppy to her doorstep.

Today Poppy follows Sylvester around and chirrups at her non-stop as if expressing constant gratitude for her new home. In turn, Sylvester seems smitten with her fuzzy friend. It seems likely there will be a new series of Sylvester paintings featuring a black and white cat.

Sylvester also thinks it's about time she writes up a little "ditty" on the dory. Although she says, "I didn't go out of my way to do a damn thing that I know of," Sylvester has enough projects to last beyond her centennial year.

And you can bet your buttons that famous Sylvester determination will see them all through to completion.

Osgood second graders interview a dragon!

I interviewed a dragon named Flappy. He was born in San Diego. Now he lives in Michigan. His dad is rich. They went to water parks every day. His dad took him to stores. He learned to fly by jumping off the Sears Tower. When he has problems he roasts them.

— Emily Larson

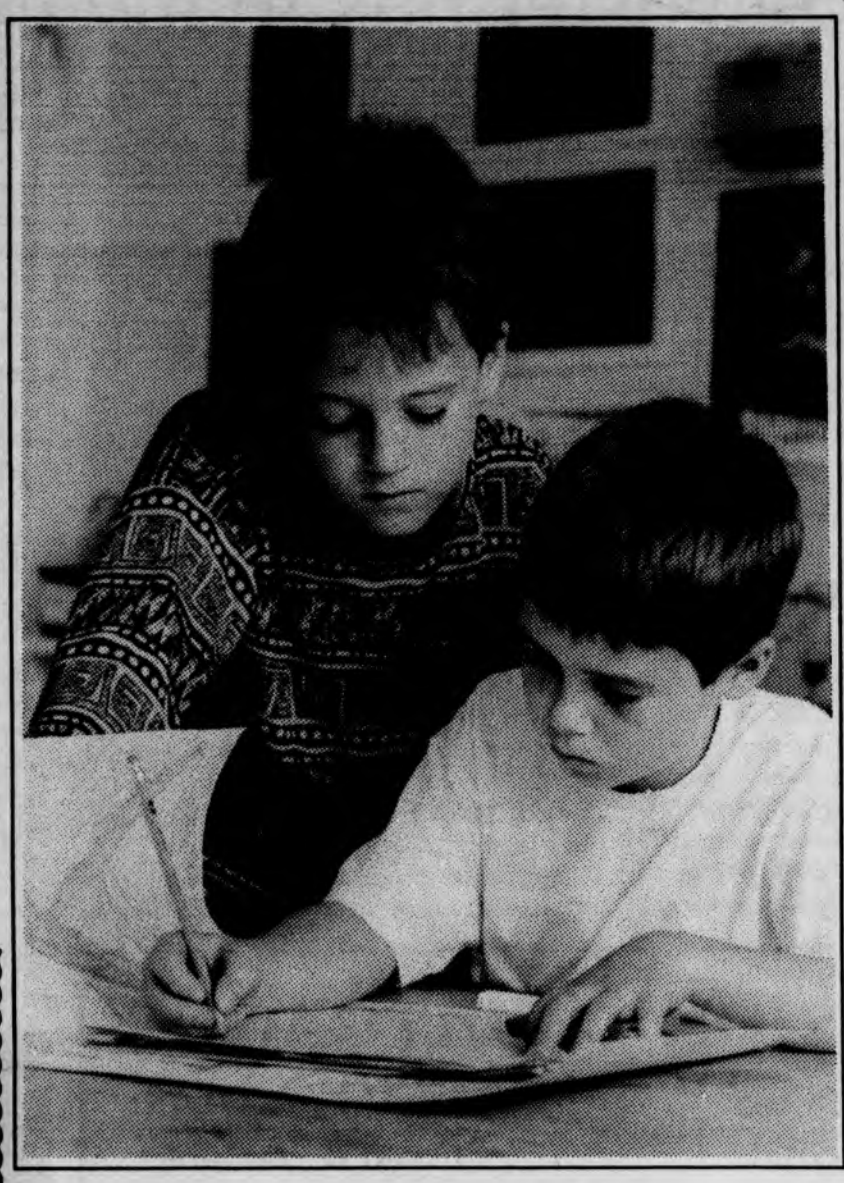
I met a dragon named Dufus. He was born in Japan. He lives on Jupiter. He said, "It's hot there." One day he went to school but he didn't like the work. Dufus learned to fly by falling off the sun. He is sad when his friend leaves for one second. He is happy when he is on vacation. His favorite sport is basketball but he fouls lots of people.

— Philip Kreycik

One day I interviewed a dragon named Deth Strike. He was born in Ejept and now lives in Cohasset in a cave in Sam's house. When he was a child his favorit thing to do was blow fire at his friends. Nowadays he travels by wing.

— Nick Laas

I intervud a dragon that lived in the grass. And she lives near a stream now. She learned to fly when a bird taught her. One day she was sad because she didn't get to see the birdys babes. When she was a baby dragon she flew on a crow.



— Nickolas Cavanaugh

I met a monster named Metidor. He lived in the sewer when he was born. Now he lives in the swamp, he likes it there. He learned to fly when he jumped off of a cliff and flew. He is sad when he burns his hand.

— Sam Dolph

One day In intervewed a dragon named Worn. She was born in a book called Worns. The other day Worn moved to New Mexico. And she was crazy when she was little because she threw pies at her mother. But listen to this she learned how to fly by jumping of a five hundred foot building and when she met a friend she gets sad because they were nice to her. And she gets happy when she get to eat pizza.

Cohasset meets Scituate K of C Friday, July 31 with diving beginning at 1 p.m.

Yankees win tri-town Pony League baseball championship

They played like a "team" all season. No individual was bigger than the sum of the combined parts. Each player found a way to contribute, and like the fabled "little engine that could," they gained momentum as the weather turned warmer.

Individually guided by Coaches Rick Kondrat and Mark Batts, they found enjoyment in playing the game. The wins started to come.

Cohasset has two Pony League teams (with players 13-15 years) that compete against eight teams from Scituate and two teams from Norwell.

They play approximately 20 regular season games before the beginning of the playoffs and the championship.

The Pony League season ended three weeks ago. The Yankees are the second Cohasset team in ten years to have won the Championship.

Sports physicals required for all fall sports athletes

A physical exam is required for all students planning to play boys' soccer and football or girls' soccer and field hockey.

Dr. Robert T. Sceery, School Physician, will be in the Health Room at the Junior/Senior High School on the following dates:

- Boys soccer and football, Thursday, August 27, 1:30 p.m.
- Girls Field hockey and soccer, Friday, August 28, 9:15 a.m.

PLEASE NOTE

This will be the only time physicals will be offered by the school before practice begins Monday, August 31. If you are unable to take advantage of the physical at this time, you will need to be examined by your family physician and get a note stating that you are in good physical condition to participate in athletics.

No student will be allowed to begin practice until he/she has had a physical examination.

Soccer camp late registration

Boys' Soccer Camp will be conducted the week of Aug. 3, and the Girls' Soccer Camp will be held the week of Aug. 10. Both camps will be located at Miliken Field, Cohasset.

Should you wish to register for either camp, please call the Cohasset Recreation office at 383-6791 (1st floor, Cohasset Town Hall), immediately. Camps are open to non-residents and the cost for this program is $159 for the week, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Summer activities at Center

LIGHTS OUT CAMPOUT

Families can join Science Center staff Saturday, Aug. 8, from 6 to 10 p.m. or stay overnight until 10 a.m. Saturday (raindate August 15). Optional overnight and breakfast followed by a morning hike (w/o overnight – member families of 4/$25, $3 each additional child, $12 single adults; non-member families of 4/$30, $4 each additional child, $15 single adults, w/overnight – member families of 4/$45, $5 each additional child, $22 single adults, non-member families of 4/$50, $6 each additional child, $25 single adult). Start with a campfire meal that everyone helps prepare. After dinner enjoy a live animal presentation, "Nocturnal Animals," featuring an owl, skunk and opossum. Then hike through the woods in search of wildlife inhabitants before settling down to smores by the campfire, complete with tall tales of adventure.

TEACHER WORKSHOP

Teachers of children ages 4 - 10 are invited to join early childhood specialist Joni Benn Thursday, Aug. 13, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. for Nature In and Out of the Classroom: A Teacher Workshop (members/$12; non-members/$15). Make a new school year's resolution to let nature spark learning for the children in your classroom. This workshop will explore new ideas for using indoor and outdoor nature experiences to add fun and meaning to early learning. Come see what Mother Nature has in store for you and your students!

ANIMAL "TAILS"

Ages 3 to 6 can join Elsa Ryberg Saturday, Aug. 15, 9:30 to 11 a.m. to learn about forest friends. Take a woodland walk and meet animals that make their homes in the forest. Play a game, make an animal puppet and sing songs (members/$6; non-members/$8).

AFTER CAMP CLUB

Join Science Center staff for After Camp Club, Ages 6 to 8, Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning Thursday, July 2, all programs 1 to 3 p.m. (members/$7; non-members/$10). You don't have to be a camper to come! Learn about wildlife and their habitats through outdoor detective work, nature activities, games, crafts and stories. New topics each week so plan to come all summer. Bring lunch if you're staying after morning camp.

Hours: 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday, noon to 4 p.m. Sunday. A 30-minute drive south of Boston, the Center is located just off Route 123, Norwell, one mile from the Route 3/Route 53 interchange (Exit 13). All programs require pre-paid registration at least two days in advance unless otherwise noted. Please call (617) 659-2559 for more information.

Rotary awards scholarships

Scholarship awards total $18,000.

The Cohasset Rotary Club announced the 1992 Rotary Scholarship recipients. The Scholarships are made possible by the Rotary Club from revenue raised by the Cohasset phone book. This is just one of the community fund-raisers sponsored by the Rotary Club. The club also sponsors the Cohasset 10K road race each year along with many other community events.

Rotary International is an organization of independent business people with chapters of the club found in almost every country in the world. Each year Rotary International has a local, state, national and international agenda. With no political affiliations, the Rotary Club works diligently in helping others in need. Whether it is donating scholarships, cleaning up the environment or helping to wipe out infectious diseases (such as polio) the Rotary Club of Cohasset has been actively involved in the community for over 50 years.

from the kitchen

by Joan Pinkham

The bounty of summer fruits has many of us making a bee-line for the kitchen. Many are also heading for the nearest blueberry farm, returning with berries that lend themselves to countless delights, especially when frozen to serve later in numerous ways. Take along a sandwich and cold drink to enjoy under a shady tree. Armed with a can of bug juice and sheltered from the noon-day sun by a broad-brimmed hat, you're ready to pick 'til you drop. Your reward is a pie such as this, served hot from the oven, smothered in ice cream.

MAINE BLUEBERRY PIE

1 9 inch baked pie shell
1 qt. blueberries
1 c. sugar
3/4 c. cold water
2T flour
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 c. water

Take out 3 cups blueberries. Set aside. To the remaining berries, add sugar, 3/4 c. water and cook 'til soft. Make paste of flour, salt and 1/4 c. cold water. Cook slowly 'til thickened. Add hot mixture to uncooked. 3 cups berries. Cool, pour into shell. Chill for three hours. Serve with whipped or ice cream.

Soon we'll be faced with the annual onslaught of garden tomatoes, with friends, neighbors and comparative strangers begging us to relieve them of a few. Fortunately, there's a multitude of ways of preparing tomatoes and one that we found everywhere in Spain and more than welcome here in hot weather is

GAZPACHO

In a food processor or blender puree 4 tomatoes and one cucumber, all peeled, seeded and chopped, one onion and one green pepper, both chopped and a garlic clove, crushed. Add 2 c. beef broth, 1 1/2 c. tomato juice, 1/4 c. each of olive oil and red-wine vinegar. Salt and cayenne to taste. Spin machine briefly to combine the mixture. Transfer to a bowl and chill for at least four hours. Ladle into mugs or bowls and garnish each serving with 1 tsp. ea. of peeled, seeded and minced cucumber, minced green pepper, minced onion, chopped tomato and croutons. Serves 6.

NOTE: If you, too, have a favorite family recipe, do share it with us by sending to me c/o Box 25, Marshfield Hills, 02051. We won't vote, knowing if your family and friends enjoy it, it must be good.

Prepare for Storms Before They Hit!

When little showers turn into big storms, your electric service may be interrupted. However, there are some simple measures you can take to help ensure your comfort and safety during a power outage.

Food... Have canned and packaged foods that need no refrigeration. If you have an infant, keep several days' supply of formula. You can extend the life of perishable foods by turning the controls of your refrigerator and freezer to the coldest position before the storm hits. During winter storms, you can use a picnic cooler outside your home to preserve frozen foods. And don't forget your manual can opener.

Water... Clean containers should be filled with tap water in case your electric water pump or area water supply is affected. Also, you can flush a toilet by pouring water into the bowl.

Medical Supplies... You should have a complete first-aid kit. You should also have an adequate supply of prescription drugs or dietary needs.

Cooking... A fireplace or wood stove can be used for cooking. Gas grills or camp stoves should only be used outdoors. Charcoal grills–because they release carbon monoxide, a deadly poison–should NEVER be used indoors.

Lighting... Camper lanterns and battery-operated lights are safer than candles. And keep an adequate supply of fresh batteries. Propane and oil lanterns are useful. But you need to store the fuel in a safe place.

Radio... A battery-operated, portable radio may be the only way you can get up-to-date information on what's going on during and after a serious storm.

Burning Wood for Heat...
If you have a fireplace or wood stove, keep an emergency supply of dry firewood on hand.

Emergency Generator Safety... If you have an emergency electric generator, please follow these safety precautions: the generator must be UL approved and it should be installed by a licensed electrician and inspected by your municipal wiring inspector. There must be no link between our lines and your generator, because an improperly wired generator could endanger your life and the lives of your neighbors and emergency workers by "backfeeding" electricity from your generator out to the power lines in your neighborhood.

Water Pipes... If your home-heating system is down for an extended period of time due to a winter storm, drain your water pipes and traps. Remember to shut off the main water valve to prevent flooding when the power is restored.

Protect Your Appliances...
Turn off and unplug all appliances that would go on automatically when your electricity is restored. This includes your TV, VCR, microwave, dehumidifier, furnace, water heater and water pump. These appliances could be damaged by a brief voltage surge when the power is restored. Turn off lights, but leave one light switched "on" so that you'll know when your electric service is restored.

Remember to stay away from fallen wires!

Our emergency numbers are open 24 hours a day.

Ambulance billing policy hits curve

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The town's new ambulance billing policy came under fire Monday by one of its creators.

An angry Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle demanded to know why the fire department sent out two bills to a single family for one ambulance run that transported its two children.

"They both rode the ambulance at the same time to the hospital. That's not in my way of thinking the way to run an ambulance service," Laugelle said. "I can't get it, I really can't."

July 21, the Cohasset Fire Department received a call for mutual aid from Scituate.

Cohasset's ambulance transported two youngsters who had accidentally locked themselves in the trunk of a car.

The badly shaken parents found the kids right away

Oaks estate is on the market

By Dori Dwyer

A Cohasset landmark is up for grabs, again.

The Oaks, the Georgian mansion which overlooks Cohasset Harbor from a private oceanfront peninsula, is on the market for $5.5 million.

The current owners, Peter and Susan Roy, purchased the 55-room estate in 1989. While their purchase price was not readily available, the asking price for the mansion at that time was $3.7 million.

The Oaks is also known as the Cox estate, in honor of Jessie Bancroft Cox, who lived in the mansion for most of her adult life. The property was owned by her family from the early 1900s until 1983 and two houses occupied the property during that time.

Executives combine expertise in consulting service

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Two-hundred years shouldn't go to waste.

That's what ten local executives say.

All unemployed — victims of the white collar recession — they've decided to take matters into their own hands.

"We sit around the table, talking and sharing stories," says Anthony C. Greenwood, spokesman for the newly formed Hingham Team Resources, which draws from several area towns including Cohasset.

"And what keeps coming out is — there's such talent in this group, let's see what else we can do."

They met through a support group for unemployed businessmen and women that meets weekly in Hingham.

The executives, who share 200 years of experience between them, have expertise in everything from manufacturing to marketing.

The group plans to offer confidential consulting services free of charge to small businesses on the South Shore through weekly forums at the Old Ship Church, 107 Main St. Free follow-up consultation by one or more of the members may also be provided.

In exchange the members of Hingham Team Resources keep their skills honed. They also receive exposure and obtain contacts within the business community, which individual members can pursue.

"We'll be using our own time to keep ourselves stimulated and involved in business," Greenwood says.

Hingham Team Resources has ten members ranging in age from about 40 to 60 years. Greenwood says the Exercise time at Wompatuck Park

By David McKee
Mariner staff

Summertime and the biking is easy.

And if you're talking about the 2,877 acre Wompatuck State Park, which touches the towns of Hingham, Norwell, Cohasset and Scituate, you would have to include rollerblading, jogging and even dog-walking.

New York city residents and avid rollerbladers Walden Mathews and his wife Susan were visiting relatives in Norwell and stopped by the park on Sunday to get some exercise.

"This is definitely more civilized than skating in Central Park," Susan said in her complete rollerblade attire which included a helmet and knee and elbow pads.

"At first I was a bit wary because I thought the traffic might be tough," she said. "But the road conditions are great and everything is maintained really nice. I like this place a lot."

On sunny Summer weekends cars jam the Wompatuck parking lots and scores of bike riders, joggers and exercise fiends emerge from their cars to work up a sweat in the nicely wooded park which has miles of paved trails.

Doane Street project is up in the air - again

The hopes of 23 families on the far side of the Doane Street bridge could be dashed if the town depends on state reimbursement for the badly needed bridge repairs.

"I had curly hair when we started this," said Tony Finegan, 70, an abutter. "We can't wait anymore."

Abutters have lobbied for a decade to get repairs made to the bridge, which spans the Aaron River.

Cesspool hearing set

The Cohasset Board of Health will hold a hearing to propose changes in current regulations regarding the upgrading of cesspools used for subsurface sewage disposal. Such a requirement could coincide with the sale of property or apply to those cesspools located near sensitive areas such as Lily Pond, Straits Pond or Little Harbor.

This hearing takes place in the town hall August 11, at 8 p.m.

Homeowners as well as commercial property owners whose properties are serviced by cesspools should attend. The public's input regarding this important environmental protection issue is encouraged.

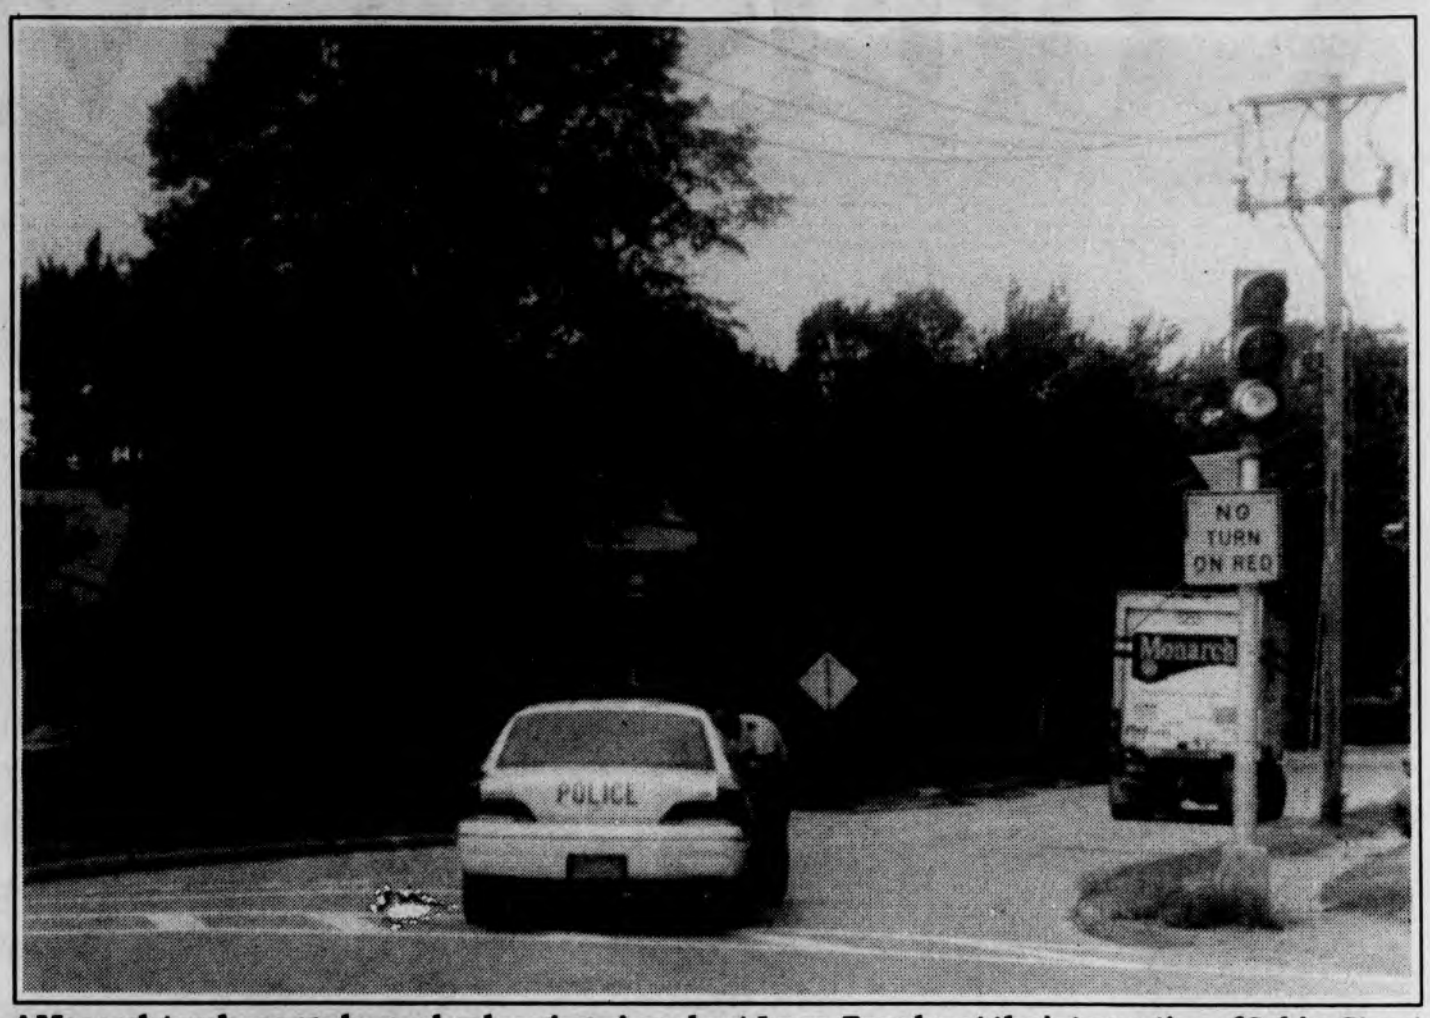
Register to vote

The Board of Registrars of Voters is in session at the town hall Saturday, August 15, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Tuesday, August 18, from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. to register voters for the state primary Tuesday, September 15.

This is the last day to register and to change party enrollment for the state primary.

Clerk's salary clarified

Jane Henderson, newly hired clerk for the fire department, will be paid $7.92 per hour not $9.33 as previously reported.



The town budgeted for the $9.33 salary level. But selectmen told Fire Chief John Nadeau Monday that he had no authority to offer Henderson higher than the entry level of $7.92 for a clerical position.

Henderson's qualifications; the absence of any benefits for the 15-hour-per-week position; and adequate funds in the budget were reasons for his offering the two percent increase, Nadeau said.

Although Nadeau said he was prepared to take his argument before the personnel committee, he won't get the chance.

Selectmen must authorize sending the issue to the personnel board for review and they declined to okay that Monday.

Selectmen Michael H. Sullivan, Rocco F. Laugelle, and Merle S. Brown said they were worried about the impact offering a higher salary would have on other town employees.

A Monarch truck snagged some low hanging wires about 1 p.m. Tuesday at the intersection of Sohier Street and Ripley Road. As the truck took up the slack in the wires, the Edison pole snapped, Officer Clifton Jones said. Crews worked until 7:30 p.m. replacing the pole. No citations were issued and there were no injuries in the incident, Jones said. (Staff photo/Mary Ford)

Selectmen Chairman Jane Goedecke said she was not qualified to determine how the new position compares with others in town.

But she cautioned the board that sending the issue to the personnel board would signify that selectmen accepted the reasoning behind the salary level.

Laugelle reprimanded Nadeau for not finding out how much he could offer Henderson.

"Don't you realize the crunch we're in? We are here trying to cut down and slow things up and here we're going to hire a new person a couple steps higher," he said.

Nadeau asked why the town budgeted for $9.33 an hour if it couldn't in fact pay that amount.

Sullivan also asked why the town budgeted two steps above the minimum for the position.

No answer was forthcoming.

Silvia is acting chief

Selectmen approved the appointment of Capt. Robert D. Silvia as acting fire chief while Chief John Nadeau is on vacation, August 10-14.

Name: Cliff Dickson.

Occupation: Steward of Cohasset Yacht Club.

Best day of your life: The day I got out of the service.

Most embarrassing moment: The day I put a 38-foot Sport Fisherman on top of the Cohasset Yacht Club float. The former steward looked down at me in the boat and said "That's pretty good sonny, now get that boat the h- - - off my dock!"

Goal: To make it to 40 years at the yacht club so I can be here for the 100th anniversary. (Mr. Dickson has worked at the yacht club for the past 37 years.)

Favorite season: Fall, when all these yahoos (summer people) go home!

Best vacation: I haven't had one yet.

Favorite holiday: That would be Christmas because that is the only holiday we get off.

Pet Peeve: Why let things bother you? I don't have one.

Favorite book: Anything to do with the ocean.

Favorite movie: "Smokey and the Bandit."

Biggest worry: No worries.

Favorite place: Rockland, Maine.

Keller is appointed

Linda Keller, 2 Cushing Rd., is the newest member of the Mosquito Control Committee.

Keller was asked to apply for the opening by committee members.

"As Osgood School PSO representative, I worked with the committee this spring preparing an interactive worksheet to be done by parents with their children," she wrote to the board.

"The purpose of this worksheet was to help achieve the goals of the committee to educate members of the community about identifying breeding sources of mosquitos; what can be done to eliminate or neutralize them; and the proper use of repellents."

Selectmen unanimously endorsed Keller's appointment Monday.

"Find a way to get rid of them (mosquitos)," Selectman Michael H. Sullivan joked.

Chittim will be missed

Selectmen noted with regret the death of David Chittim.

"He was a long-standing resident and great friend to this board and many others in town," Selectmen Chairman Jane Goedecke said.

Chittim served on the handicapped commission, the council on aging, the South Shore Regional School Committee, the cable TV council, the Paul Pratt Library Trustees, the personnel committee, the registrar of voters, and the U.S. Constitution Bi-Centennial Committee.

"On behalf of the board we deeply appreciate everything he's done for the town," Goedecke said.

Thompson resigns

Selectmen accepted with regret the resignation of John Larkin Thompson from the harbor study committee.

Thompson is moving to Scituate.

Thanks to volunteers

Treasurer/collector Elizabeth B. Ripley thanked the following volunteers from the senior center and their coordinator Kathy Bryanton, for the "tremendous job" they did stuffing, sealing and counting more than 3,000 real estate tax bills: Maria Perroncello, Elizabeth Abell, Olga Sawchuck, Tillie Nardo, Ann Leonard, Pauline Keating, Jacqueline Moores, Sheila Kelly, Mary Migliaccio, Mary Coffey, Libby Pompeo, Mary Keating, and Mary Andracchio.

Legal bills approved

Selectmen approved payment of the following legal bills Monday:

- Warner & Stackpole, $275, for services rendered from May 1 through June 30, 1992, for health board matters.
- Richard A. Henderson, $4,520.75, for legal services rendered in connection with the general affairs of Cohasset and tax title matters.
- Selectmen postponed approval of a bill from Goodwin. Procter & Hoar for sewer treatment plant issues from June 1 through June 30, 1992 until the board meets with the sewer commissioners.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

RESTRICTION CLAUSE

QUESTION: What is meant by a restriction?

ANSWER: It is a clause in a deed restricting the use of the property. It might be looked upon as zoning on a very personal basis.

For example, a house in a commercially zoned area may have a restriction against use for any commercial purpose. This could create future financing problems because banks may refuse to loan money for other than commercial use.

From the point of view of the buyer, it is preferable that the agreement enumerate any and all restrictions. Bring them out in the open and get professional advice before going any further. It's for your own protection.

Ambulance bill hits curve . . .

but called the paramedics as a precaution, their mother said in a telephone interview.

The discussion re-opened the ambulance billing issue. Selectmen enacted a new billing policy in June in which bills are mailed out within 24 hours directly to the users and not to their insurance company. The policy also provides for billing frequency and the possible use of a collection agency.

But it does not address exceptions to the billing policy.

Laugelle said there ought to be some leeway in special cases.

"Somethings just happen," he said.

But Selectmen Chairman Jane O. Goedecke said making exceptions would skirt the reason the board developed the policy in the first place.

"Part of the reason for developing the policy is to take the decision making away from the person doing the billing," she said. "It's not their responsibility."

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan said a change would set "a precedent that two members of a family would get one bill."

Fire Chief John Nadeau said it was the second complaint on the policy for the same reason. A recent automobile accident involved three people (two in the same family) who were all transported in one ambulance, he said.

Nadeau said sometimes there are additional costs if the care is more critical even if a single ambulance is used.

"But this (Scituate case) is clearly not one of those," he said.

Goedecke said the only fair way to deal with the issue would be "to review the policy across the board. It is equally unfair to do this in one situation and not another."

The ambulance fee is $125 plus $5 for loaded mile. A trip from Cohasset to South Shore Hospital costs about $185.

In June, selectmen decided to try direct billing of ambulance bills for a year. If the town stayed with third-party billing, it would have to raise fees to cover the expense of an outside agency or clerk to handle the bills because the information provided by the user is often incomplete and requires follow up, they said.

A group of volunteers recently helped the town recoup some of the $150,000 owed in back ambulance bills for 1991 and prior years.

Petitions anyone?

Selectmen are mulling whether or not to take up the town of Hudson's offer to lobby the legislature for more state aid.

Hudson sent the board a sample petition.

Selectmen Chairman Jane Goedecke said the board ought to examine the logistics first.

"We better figure out the mechanics before we go out and ask the public to sign," she said.

Exercising at Wompatuck State Park . . .

Weekdays are also crowded by people on vacation or seeking some exercise after work.

The procedure for most people is to take a vehicle to the park with their bike or rollerblades in tow. Once at the park, they put on their gear or take down their bike and off they go.

However, some people just bike or jog to the main entrance off Union Street in Hingham.

However, for many who don't live nearby, they must use their cars to reach the park.

Pembroke's Joline Frechettte and Dover's Kathy Byrne stopped by Sunday to walk their dogs Montana, Suki and Wizard.

"We like letting the dogs run here," Joline said. "They just love it and I think the scenery is great."

Today the two women were simply walking the trails with their dogs. Previously they have cruised around on rollerblades with their dogs secured by leash.

"I like the bike paths because they are fun to rollerblade on and the dogs get all excited and friendly," Joline said.

Jay from Norwell was biking in the Park for the first time in two years.

"I went about 20 miles today," he said barely breathing hard. "I've been riding in other places but it is great to be back."

He said he rides about three nights a week.

Jay said the lack of traffic and the clean air are the best things about exercising in Wompatuck.

"There's no traffic here and you don't have to worry about someone pulling out or riding over a huge pothole," he said. "And this is a nice quiet wooded area with trees and ponds. I will definitely be back and not in two years."

Mara Predella of Plymouth and Elise Veneziano of Braintree drove many miles in order to go for a spin on their mountain bikes on Sunday.

"We don't like having to dodge cars on main roads," Mara said. "And is a real peaceful place."

"We ride about five or ten miles usually," Mara said. "We try to keep it fun."

There are 400 campsites at the park, according to the information booth at the park.

There is also Heron Pond and Mt. Blue Spring which has fresh spring water.

There is also ample open space to sunbathe for those who don't feel like exercising.

There is even an ice cream truck on weekends.

But bikers, joggers and rollerbladers are fast taking over the park.

"You can't beat this place," Frechette said. "Everyone leaves happy but a little tired."

Doane Street project . . .

The town has a "force account agreement" (a document in which the state agrees to reimburse the town) in hand. Voters at the June special town meeting authorized the town to borrow $175,000 for the project with a guarantee of state reimbursement.

But the state must approve funding and now it's not clear if there is adequate money for the project.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said Monday that July 1 was a key date to get the process of advertising and accepting bids underway "and now it's August 3."

Monday a new 23-inch hole opened up in the surface of the bridge. The highway department covered the hole with a metal plate as a stop-gap measure Tuesday.

"I ask the board to think about having the town fix it (bridge) before somebody gets killed. If and when that happens the lawsuit will be terrible. I can't stand still and let this happen," he said.

Selectmen Chairman Jane Goedecke did not rule out asking voters to ante up for bridge repairs.

She said an article could be placed on the warrant for a special town meeting, tentatively planned for October. Goedecke also expressed concern that the window of time allowed for construction is running out. It is unclear whether that window could be extended from October into the winter months when the water level is higher.

Reached by telephone State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said she was "very concerned" about the Doane Street bridge repairs.

Murray said money for dams and bridges is included in the deficiency budget which passed the legislature. But the new glitches are that Gov. William Weld may veto the deficiency budget and the legislature does not come back in session until Sept. 18.

Studds floats water clean-up funding plan

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

U.S. Congressman Gerry Studds gave municipal representatives from the South Shore a preview of his plan to overhaul national clean water funding policies Monday at Hingham Town Hall.

Studds formally unveiled his plan in Washington Wednesday.

If approved, the plan could substantially reduce the amount communities pay to comply with national clean water mandates.

Studds, who chairs the subcommittee on fisheries and the environment, said he wants to alleviate the water and sewer rate increases his constituents face as a result of the 1975 Clean Water Act.

The federal government requires cities and towns to improve the condition of the country's waterways, he said, but does not provide money to accomplish the task.

Closer to home, the Boston Harbor Clean-Up project, which affects several communities in Studds' newly-defined 10th Congressional District, is federally-mandated and projected to cost $6 billion dollars.

Ratepayers have incurred the brunt of the clean-up costs, with Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) sewer and water rate hikes of 400 percent in the last seven years.

The MWRA was created in 1984 to improve the state's water and sewer systems. As federal and state aid began to dwindle in the mid-80s, the MWRA turned to ratepayers to pay for the mandated clean-up project.

MWRA Advisory Board Chairman Joseph Favoloro recently noted that the federal and state governments have "contributed less than four percent to the total costs to the mandates which they themselves have imposed."

This year, the rate hike will force the average MWRA household to pay approximately 25 percent more, or an additional $120 in sewer and water charges.

Though not an MWRA community, Cohasset has felt the affects of withdrawn federal funding to clean up the local waters.

Subsequent to a court order to clean up Cohasset waters, the town laid plans to convert the existing wastewater treatment plant to a pumping station and link it to Hull's treatment facility.

The conversion/linkage project was priced at $6 million.

Cohasset Sewer Commission Chairman Edward M. Guild said approximately $4 million was to be provided by the federal and state government.

Immediately after the plan was approved, the federal and state funds dried up.

As a result, the town is now using the $2 million it intended to commit to the conversion/linkage project to another project to expand the existing wastewater treatment facility.

Guild said the $2 million price-tag to expand is more palatable to taxpayers than the $6 million the town would have to pay to convert and link the existing facility with Hull.

Studds' proposal centers around the creation of a national clean water investment corporation. The purpose of the corporation, according to Studds, would be to provide an infusion of dollars into state revolving funds to finance state and local clean water projects.

Money to start the corporation would be raised through the issuance of "clean water bonds." Revenues to the corporation would pay for the debt service of the bonds.

The corporation would generate revenues from fees assessed to large companies and through federal appropriations. Two types of fees would be instituted.

Large manufacturers of pesticides or fertilizers, which pollute waterways, would be assessed a fee for producing the toxic substances.

Another fee would be assessed to any large company which discharges toxic substances. Companies which discharge would be required to test the water near its plant facility periodically and send the results to an independent lab.

The penalty-fee on dischargers of toxic substances should provide companies with the incentive to reduce toxins in the water, Studds said.

The federal government could provide money to the national clean water investment corporation investment's revenue stream by re-directing money it had formerly used for a military build-up during the cold war, Studds said.

The proposal is based on a German model instituted in 1976 which is successful in reducing pollution, he said.

Cox estate . . .

The first was built by Cox's grandfather, financier Clarence W. Barron, of Barron's National Business and Financial Weekly fame. He built a wooden Victorian house on the property where the mansion now stands. The family maintained a summer residence in the house until 1929, when the Victorian was replaced by the sprawling mansion there today.

The mansion was built in 1929 by Cox's father, Hugh Bancroft.

Curator of the Cohasset Historical Society David Wadsworth, 60, said the estate looks the same as it did when he was a boy growing up in Cohasset.

"They have maintained the high level of architectural standards," Wadsworth said. "It hasn't changed from the outside."

The inside, however, has changed substantially according to the listing broker Dale Temple of Landvest, Inc. in Boston.

"It's in incredible condition in every room. They converted it from a corporate center into a residence," Temple said.

The Cox family sold the property in 1983 to Yankee Companies, Inc. Yankee converted the residence into a luxurious corporate headquarters.

In 1987, MTC Associates III bought the property for $2.3 million with the intention of converting it into a condominium complex with a marina.

The development proposal was scrapped when there was a public outcry against the 100-boat marina.

MTC tried to appease the town and offered to purchase the property and turn over the house and grounds to the town.

In exchange for their generosity, MTC wanted to proceed with its marina development plan.

A town meeting vote sunk the plan. The property, which remained in the style of a corporate headquarters, was put up for sale again.

Faced with the tenuous fate of The Oaks, a town committee was formed in 1989 to determine the best use of the peninsula property.

Wadsworth said the town considered buying the property and using the mansion as town hall.

However, before the Cox Estate Planning Committee had time to hold its first meeting, the Roys bought the property.

According to a pictorial ad of the estate featured in the August issue of Boston Magazine, the mansion boasts 10-foot ceilings, a grand staircase and 10 fireplaces.

A pool, poolhouse, greenhouses, tennis court and boathouse are on the estate.

❑ Ruth Bacigalupo is counting the days until she sees her son Bill and his family again. They will be here for her birthday, August 10.

Bill is a 1962 CHS graduate (a very good year, that was my class too) who makes his home in Johannesburg, where he is a very successful businessman. They leave this week to fly to London to be with Bill's wife Hazel's family, then they are taking their boys to Disneyworld for a week. Then they are off to Chicago and St. Louis to visit African friends, then back to Cohasset for Ruth's 88th birthday, then off to the Cape for a week, then back here to go to a Red Sox game and the Music Circus, then they are off to return to Johannesburg, where Bill works as an engineer. Sure hope to get a chance to see him. Maybe some of his other classmates are around too and we can get together.

Give me a call!

❑ Seventy-five science teachers from around the U.S., including David Magnussen, attended an intensive one-week science and engineering program at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology the last week of June.

MIT's Science and Engineering Program for Middle and High School Teachers was designed to help the teachers convey excitement to their students. Teachers were selected from a field of more than 150 applicants. They spent the week listening to lectures by MIT faculty and staff, went on tours of researcher's labs and attended demonstrations of simple, inexpensive experiments teachers could use in the classroom.

Sounds like Cohasset students will have some fun learning next fall!

❑ We heard from Robert Protulius last week, and he is recovering nicely from his recent surgery to have his appendix removed. He wants to thank everyone for everything while he was in the hospital.

❑ Ted Carroll is once again doing an admirable job running the Summer Playground Program, and the kiddos are thrilled to be there. Ted's in his ninth year with the program, his sixth as director. Irene Volpe, Paulina McDonald, Katie Ryan, Chantalle Stone, Craig Carter, Ryan Cibelli, Brian Pompeo, Stephanie Endris, Liz O'Leary, Erin Monahagn, Torin Sweeney, Bob Gavin, Chris Conley, and Dave Daley are all members of Ted's staff and the children love them all.

The calendar of events is loaded with things they love to do. If your child is between the ages of 3 and 12 and you haven't investigated it, be sure to do so. Just about every summer activity that they could want is available at one time or another; check the newspaper or the recreation department.

Better still, check with the children that are participating. They are most aware of all and you will hear lots of praise for an outstanding program. It runs through August 21. Remember to do it today!

What a great thing to do, and what an addition to the depot. Have fun with the table everyone.

❑ We have to begin by saying "Happy Anniversary" to Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ricketts of Hill Street fame. They recently celebrated their 50th anniversary and had a grand time. Their son John even came from California, something they didn't expect at all!

The other great news that they had was they are about to be great-grandparents! We know that you enjoyed your special day and here's to many more.

❑ Congratulations go to George Burman of 646 Jerusalem Road, who was recently named to the board of directors of the Bucknell University Alumni Association. The alumni board augments the efforts of the alumni association to promote involvement, advocacy, leadership development and financial support. Board members are appointed to a four-year term. Mr. Burman is president and chief executive of DM Management Co., Hingham.

The South Shore Concert Band performs under the lights at a summer concert on the Common. Don't miss the next concert at 7:30 p.m. August 11. The concerts are sponsored by the recreation department with funding provided by South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. and a matching grant from the American Federation of Musicians, New York City.

David Chittim

David Chittim, 72, of Cohasset, a former personnel department executive for New England Telephone, died July 28 at home after a short illness.

Mr. Chittim worked 35 years for New England Telephone before retiring in 1982.

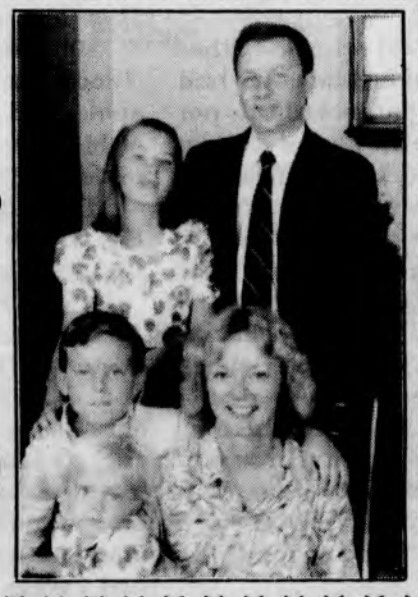
He was a member of the Cohasset Council on Aging and drove its shuttle bus for a while. He was a former member of the South Shore Regional Vocational School Committee, retiring two years ago.

An Army veteran of World War II, he was a member also of the Cohasset Historical Society and the Telephone Pioneers.

Born in Northampton, he attended Tabor Academy in Marion and graduated from Dartmouth College in New Hampshire in 1941. Mr. Chittim had just attended his 50th reunion last year.

He lived in Longmeadow for a few years, before moving to Cohasset 20 years ago.

He leaves his wife, Mary N. (Chase) Chittim; three sons, David B. Chittim of Pittsburgh, Pa., Kevin G. Chittim of Stoney Brook, N.Y.; and Mark Chittim of Barrington, R.I.; a daughter, Ann K. Chittim of Brookline; and seven grandchildren. He was the father of the late Mary K. Chittim.



A funeral service was held July 31 at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to the Hospice of the South Shore, 400 Franklin St., Braintree 02184, or Council on Aging, North Main Street, Cohasset 02025.

Ambulance policy

Fire Chief John Nadeau was in the hot seat Monday when Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle demanded he explain why two ambulance bills were sent to one family.

Mr. Laugelle was in possession of a copy of a bill sent to a Scituate family for their two children, who were transported in the same ambulance.

He was horrified that the family was billed $400 or double the amount of a single transport.

As an architect of the town's ambulance policy, it's puzzling why Mr. Laugelle lashed out at the chief Monday.

But perhaps the upshot of Mr. Laugelle's tirade is that the town needs to carefully examine its ambulance billing policy.

Chief Nadeau said that the Scituate incident was the second complaint he'd had on a multiple billing when a single ambulance was used for two members of one family.

Selectmen, who set the policy, should take an in-depth look and decide what if any exceptions there are.

You don't have to be a rocket scientist to envision a situation like multiple transports.

Just a few months ago, the town didn't even have written billing policy.

At a June meeting, Chief Nadeau asked the board to clarify and/or establish policy on such possible scenarios such as a town employee or fire department employee transport; multiple transport billing policy; and directives concerning write offs, if any.

At that time, the Cohasset Mariner reported on the lack of a written billing policy in a story about a Cohasset citizen who planned to hold his ambulance bill in abeyance until such issues were resolved.

The current billing policy, approved later that month, provides for direct billing to users and what steps to take if there is non payment. Town employees and their families are also billed for ambulance service. But issues like multiple transport aren't addressed.

Cohasset's shaky past on ambulance billing has come back to haunt the town. Until recently, the backlog of unpaid bills was large enough to buy and fully equip a new ambulance.

It's no secret that Cohasset is in tight financial straights and should be as fiscally prudent as possible.

An ambulance run from Cohasset to South Shore Hospital now costs about $185 not including oxygen.

So if the voters want fees for ambulance service, then selectmen owe it to the townspeople to set up a policy that is both fair and compassionate.

Selectmen should also look at giving the fire chief some authority in deciding when single or multiple bills should be sent out.

Chief Nadeau, who is accountable to selectmen, is paid $47,000 a year. He is a professional who can use his trained judgement in such cases.

So the board should let the chief do his job and give him the power to do so.

But grandstanding in front of cable television cameras over whether or not a bill is appropriate is counterproductive.

by Paula Knowles

My baby doctor is retiring. That may not seem like much of an issue, given that my youngest "baby" is now going into her senior year in high school; but to us it is almost like a death in the family. Like the loss of a parent or the sudden relocation of a close and cherished sister, brother, or best friend, this retirement will leave a void in our lives that will be impossible to fill.

Dr. Lloyd Hazen has been my family's pediatrician for the last 42 years, and he has seen us through illnesses and injuries both serious and mundane, obvious and obscure, fleeting and chronic. He knows our family history like no other doctor ever will, and gives us a sense of security, even in the most tenuous and frightening of situations, that can never be replaced.

He is, I suppose, a doctor of the "old school," in that he always puts his patient first, and he has never had any patience or "understanding" for parents who do not do the same. He takes the time to see the parent of every patient in his office after each exam or visit — in fact he insists on it — and not only explains what he has done or is going to do, but trains each parent to be his primary aide in the long-term health care of their child. He insists that "his" parents take an active part in their child's health care, that they get to know what is "normal" for their child, and let him know when something appears off kilter. He believes in "mother's instinct", no matter which parent is doing the mothering, and he has always believed in good old common sense. Unfortunately, this all leads to a dilemma. Because once you have been a "Hazen kid" yourself, you can't tolerate being anything less than a "Hazen parent" for your child.

I love to recount the story of my husband calling Dr. Hazen at night when my daughter was quite small and I was at work. He called me first, of course, and was very unhappy when I said that he would have to make the call, because he was at home with the baby. He called me back about 30 minutes later, sputtering with indignation and rage. The doctor, he informed me, had called him an idiot — and worse! He asked questions that he could not answer (the baby's symptom's, temperature, color of the throat, etc.), and even expected him to know what was normal for her! He then talked my husband through the process of finding out the answers to these questions, gave him a probable diagnosis, told him what to do to help her during the night, and said to call him again in the morning if she was not better. I thought that the whole experience was hilarious! But I knew that the learning process had begun. Months later, when the same situation arose, and I had again refused to make the call when I was not with the baby, I received a different call back from my husband. This time he was buoyant!

"He told me that I had done a good job" he crowed. "I took the baby's temp, checked her throat for white spots, told him how she was acting, and answered all of his questions. He said I had done everything just perfectly!"

"That's great," I told him. "I'm really proud of you. But what's wrong with the baby?" "Oh, she's sick," he said. "But can you believe it? He said I did a good job."

Dr. Hazen and his family of staff over the years — Jane, Natalie, Jodie — have been more than just "the doctor's." They are family — trusted, needed and loved; and none of us can imagine life without them. My daughter is taking Dr. Hazen's retirement very personally. He has been physician, guru, guide, teacher and friend to parents for two generations, and there are thousands of children who are healthier, happier and more secure because of his and his staff family's care and caring. An HMO organization or clinic can give good health care to anyone; but only your own neighborhood physician can hope to approach the kind and standard of care made routine and expected by the knowledge, understanding, expertise, and dedication of men and women like Dr. Lloyd N. Hazen.

Hedlund says 'Roll Call' misleading

To the Editor:

This letter is written to clarify the misleading title for the last vote in your "Roll Call" section of the July 9, 1992 edition of the Mariner Newspapers. In an attempt to describe the vote on the recent Unemployment Insurance Reform legislation, you titled this bill as "More Tax Hike." In fact, this legislation that I and all but four Senators voted in favor of, was a reduction in the Unemployment Tax not "more tax hike."

Several constituents contacted my office after reading this misleading description. They were confused because they could juxtapose my steadfast opposition to the ridiculous unemployment tax increases passed earlier this year, with your paper's report that showed me as a "yes" vote for "more tax hike."

I felt compelled to clarify this issue because of my consistent and ardent opposition to the proposed tax increases on businesses that would have devastated our economy. The vote you have recorded me in favor of actually lessens the Unemployment Insurance Tax.

On future issues of such importance, greater attention should be given in order to avoid misleading the readers.

Very truly yours,
Robert L. Hedlund
State Senator
Norfolk-Plymouth District

(Ed. note: 'Beacon Hill Roll Call' is a syndicated feature published in several newspapers across the state. Although the subtitle may be interpreted as misleading, we felt the subsequent text certainly clarified the vote and your position regarding that matter.)

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS

	Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) 722-1646 Room 416B	Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) 722-2800 ext.7057 Room 134
	VOTE
THE HOUSE AND SENATE. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' and representatives' votes on seven roll calls from the week of July 27-31.
(House and Senate) SUPPLEMENTAL BUDGET (H 6010) — House 104-40, Senate 31-3, approved the conference committee version of a $240 million fiscal 1992 supplemental budget. Budget provisions include $110 million for road construction projects; $60 million to fund cost of living increases for government retirees; and $1 million for bonuses to Gulf War veterans. Supporters said the package is a fiscally responsible one which funds necessary programs and closes out the books on fiscal 1992. Opponents objected to a variety of provisions including $3 million for the Hynes Convention Center and sections which tinker with Proposition 2 1/2. Others said the $240 million price tag is excessive and noted Governor Weld's original request was for $31 million. (Both roll calls are listed. On the first, a "Yea" vote is for the budget. A "Nay" vote is against it. On the second, a "Yea" vote is for the bonding and land conveyance portion of the budget. A "Nay" vote is against it). The next five roll calls are on attempted legislative overrides of some of Governor Weld's vetoes of items in the fiscal 1993 state budget.	1. N 2. N	1. N 2. Y
(House and Senate) EDUCATION (H 5800) — House 148-2, Senate 33-1 overrode Governor Weld's veto of $84.8 million in additional education aid for elementary and secondary schools. The aid is in the form of $100 per pupil. Override supporters said the money is desperately needed by cash starved schools to improve the declining quality of education. Some override opponents said the money should not be approved until the legislature passes an education reform package. Others said the $100 per pupil formula does not do enough for poorer communities. (A "Yea" vote is for the $84.8 million. A "Nay" vote is against the $84.8 million).	Y	Y
(House and Senate) SCHOLARSHIPS (H 5800) — House 138-14, Senate 34-1 overrode Governor Weld's veto reduction of $13 million in higher education scholarships. Override supporters said this $13 million is earmarked for middle income families and will help hundreds of needy students. Opponents said the $13 million begins to put the budget out of balance and said the federal government's expansion of existing loan programs will help these students. (A "Yea" vote is for the $13 million. A "Nay" vote is against it).	N	Y
(House and Senate) LOCAL AID (H 5800) — House 149-0, Senate 34-0, overrode Governor Weld's veto of $23 million in lottery revenue distribution to cities and towns. Override supporters said the $23 million is desperately needed by cities and towns to maintain services. Governor Weld said the $23 million distribution would be at the expense of adequate funding for other state programs. (A "Yea" vote is for the $23 million. A "Nay" vote is against it).	Y	Y
(House and Senate) DEEDS EXCISE TAX (H 5800) — House 108-44 overrode, Senate 22-14 favored but failed to gain the two-thirds margin necessary to override Governor Weld's veto of a section keeping the real estate deeds excise tax at a higher $4.56 per $1,000 of the sale price instead of allowing it to fall back to $2.28 per $1,000 as it was scheduled to do June 30. The legislature doubled the tax, paid by people buying homes, for a three year period beginning in 1989. Override supporters said this is not a tax increase but simply a retention of the status quo necessary because depressed real estate sales have resulted in a loss of revenues for counties. They said this $30 million is necessary for counties to maintain jails and ensure overcrowding does not lead to early release of prisoners. Override opponents said this is another tax increase which makes a temporary tax a permanent one. They said it will hurt taxpayers and damage an already sluggish real estate market. (A "Yea" vote is for the tax hike. A "Nay" vote is against the tax hike).	N	Y number is significant because as individual members find employment, a core group of six-to-eight will provide continuity.

Executives combine expertise . . .

Greenwood says the attraction of this type of service in tough times is simply that many local businesses can't afford "a full-fledged consulting" company.

Here's how it works.

A business schedules an appointment through the group's message center. A member of Hingham Team Resources will follow-up with a phone call to the business to determine what expertise is required.

The business then presents the problem to the forum for discussion which sets the stage for identifying solutions, Greenwood explains.

Members will provide an additional eight hours of free consulting time if needed.

"I envision a round-table discussion where a business comes in and presents a problem. We talk it out and crystallize and identify the problem and discuss solutions.

"The next day individual members may visit the facility and do further consulting on the scene — all free," he says. Then if the business desires, it can hire one or more of the members on an individual basis for further follow-up. Any additional (paid) time does not involve Hingham Team Resources in any way, he says.

Greenwood detailed some possible problems local businesses may have that could need consulting services like those provided by Hingham Team Resources:

- marketing of new products;
- inventory problems;
- production problems;
- personnel situations.
- computer questions (for example, a computer system that is ten-to-15 years old is no longer adequate; the group will advise the business on what type of system is needed).
- financial situations (what kind of person to hire; the owner may have been doing it all alone and now that business has grown may require advice before approaching the job market).

As the businesses benefit, so will Hingham Team Resources,Greenwood says.

"A key to finding a job is networking.

"In order to help ourselves, with networking contacts, we are offering South Shore business people a unique chance to present a business problem to seasoned business professionals and managers at a Tuesday night forum in Hingham. This consulting service is confidential, free and local," he says.

Interested business may contact the Hingham Team Resources message center at (617)262-5400.

Town sells Bates house to Habitat

It's official.

For a single dollar, the town sold the Bates Building on Elm Street to South Shore Habitat for Humanity, which will create two condominium units of affordable housing at the site.

Habitat's bid was the only one received by the town by last week's deadline.

A year ago, selectmen agreed to sell the property to a non-profit entity for the development of affordable housing after town meeting passed a resolution endorsing the idea.

Habitat, which formed in 1985 in Massachusetts and has 700 affiliates across the country, will hold the mortgage to the property. No interest will be charged.

The units will sell for about $50,000 each, which covers the cost of renovating the building. Habitat works primarily with volunteer labor, supervised by experienced volunteers and professional tradespeople.

Habitat could begin construction immediately and estimates completion of the project will take 12 months.

Applications are limited to those families who have lived in Cohasset for more than one year. Current employees of the town may also apply.

Education foundation update

A citizen task force, working closely with the school committee, the administration, and the PSO, developed a local education foundation for Cohasset. The new board of directors believes that their efforts benefit both the schools and the town. A commitment to academic excellence and to effective working relationships with other community groups are primary goals.

The Cohasset Education Foundation seeks educational, charitable, and governmental grants, as well as business partnerships and sponsorships. The foundation will provide a means for individuals and corporations to bestow gifts, scholarships, and bequests. In addition, the Foundation will explore ways to extend school resources and facilities for the benefit of the community.

Local Education Foundations (LEFs) were a growing phenomenon of the 1980's across Massachusetts as many concerned citizens realized that federal and state funding for educational enrichment was in serious jeopardy. While the specifics vary slightly from LEF to LEF, all are organized to be conduits of private funding for public schools. An education foundation can play a critical role in accessing innovative resources for public education, especially in communities that value excellence in their schools.

The Cohasset Education Foundation task force members and new directors will welcome supporters at a benefit party before the Bill Cosby Music Circus show, Saturday, August 29. To order tickets for the Cosby show, call Superintendent Stephen Hart's office (383-6111) during the day, or Clark Chatterton (383-0560) at night, or send a check, payable to the Cohasset Education Foundation, to the Office of the Superintendent, 143 Pond St., Cohasset. Tickets are $50 and $45, and will be tax deductible in part. Everyone who orders one of the 200 reserved tickets through the foundation will receive an invitation to the pre-show party. Bill Cosby has been invited. Let's hope he comes too!

Wild animal calls keep ACO busy

Selectmen hope that pesky raccoons will hibernate this winter.

Raccoon and other wild-animal problems have forced Animal Control Officer William Quigley to work an average of 16-3/4 hours per week since May as opposed to the 12 the town budgeted for.

Selectmen Monday gave Quigley the go ahead to keep logging in the extra hours with the hope that once winter arrives, his hours will drop to make up for the excess.

"We may have to decree that at some point in the winter there are weeks when you don't work so we don't go over budget," Selectmen Chairman Jane Goedecke said.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said the animals problems were the worst he's seen.

"It's hard to believe all the raccoons on the road," Laugelle said.

Selectmen said the may have to ask the advisory board for a transfer if Quigley's hours exceed the 600 budgeted for in FY'93.

Quigley noted that with the raccoon distemper epidemic and possibility of rabies entering the state this summer, more residents are calling for his services.

"There used to be no chance it might be rabies, now there's a chance," he said about sick animals.

Quigley also said that the extra time he's spent on wild animal calls has prevented him from adequately dealing with loose and unlicensed dogs.

Summer baseball camp is a 'resounding success'

By Art Dunphy
Special to the Mariner

A record number of youngsters attended the Cohasset Recreation Commission's annual summer instructional baseball camp for 5 to 18 year-olds held June 23-27 at Miliken Field.

According to Commission Director Jack Worley, it was a resounding success.

The camp was conducted for the third consecutive year by the staff of the South Shore Baseball Club in Hingham and for the first time offered a half-day schedule for youngsters five and six years old.

Worley said he "expanded the program this year to accommodate a growing number of parents who wanted to get their youngsters involved at an earlier age. It was the best thing we could have done," he added. 'We had 30 youngsters in that age group and the half-day schedule seemed to be just right for them."

'This was our fourth baseball camp in as many summers and the third year that the SSBC has run the program," Worley added.

"The camp has continued to grow each year, which is a tribute to Frank Niles and his staff. They are very well organized and have a great rapport with the youngsters. We started with 30 campers the first year, had 69 a year ago, and were up to 74 this year, which is quite an accomplishment in this economy. Everyone, including the parents, seemed to be pleased with the conduct and content of this year's camp," Worley said, "and we look forward to offering the camp again next year."

(Art Dunphy is a freelance sportswriter and the former publisher of Yankee Golfer and Yankee Hockey magazines. A Cohasset resident, he is presently the Public Relations Officer for the Boston Public Library.)

Nick French, 9, slides into third base before Frank Niles of the South Shore Baseball Club's instruction staff can put on a tag.

team of Meehan, Theriault, Henderson, Brister was third.

In the mixed 8-and-under free relay, the team of Etkind, Baird, O'Brien, MacDonald was first; the team of Bugley, Tufts, Ulmer, Walden was fourth; and Anton, Cavenaugh, Kreycik and Motley was fifth.

In the mixed 10-and-under medley relay the team of Berg, Chin, O'Brien, O'Brien was second; and the team of Cavenaugh, Parker, McKenney, Lubitz, was fourth; and the team of Henderson, Davis, Flaherty, Anderson was fifth..

In the boys 12-and-under medley relay, the team of Bilton, Bugley, Golden, Leahy was first, the team of Equi, Morgan, Sheehan, Motley was third; and the team of Rooney, Baird , O'Hart and deVito was fifth.

In the girls 12-and-under medley relay, the team of Kinchla, MacLeod, Whitehouse, Devine was fifth.

In the boys 16-and-under medley relay, the team of Leahey, Kondrat, Brister, Theriault was first; and the team of Greco, Kondrat, Meehan, Buckley was second.

In the girls 16-and-under medley relay, the team of Rousseau, Littlehale, deVito, Golden was first; and the team of Hansen, Jenkins, Theriault and Wojtasinski was third.

The Cohasset team was proud of its own 12 and under Greg Bilton who has this year demolished three pool records in the Individual Medley, the 12 and under boys breaststroke and 12 and under boys backstroke. With performances like these, Greg should have little trouble adjusting to the Pilgrim Conference when he begins swimming for Cohasset High School in December. Congratulations to him and to an entire team of strong and enthusiastic swimmers.

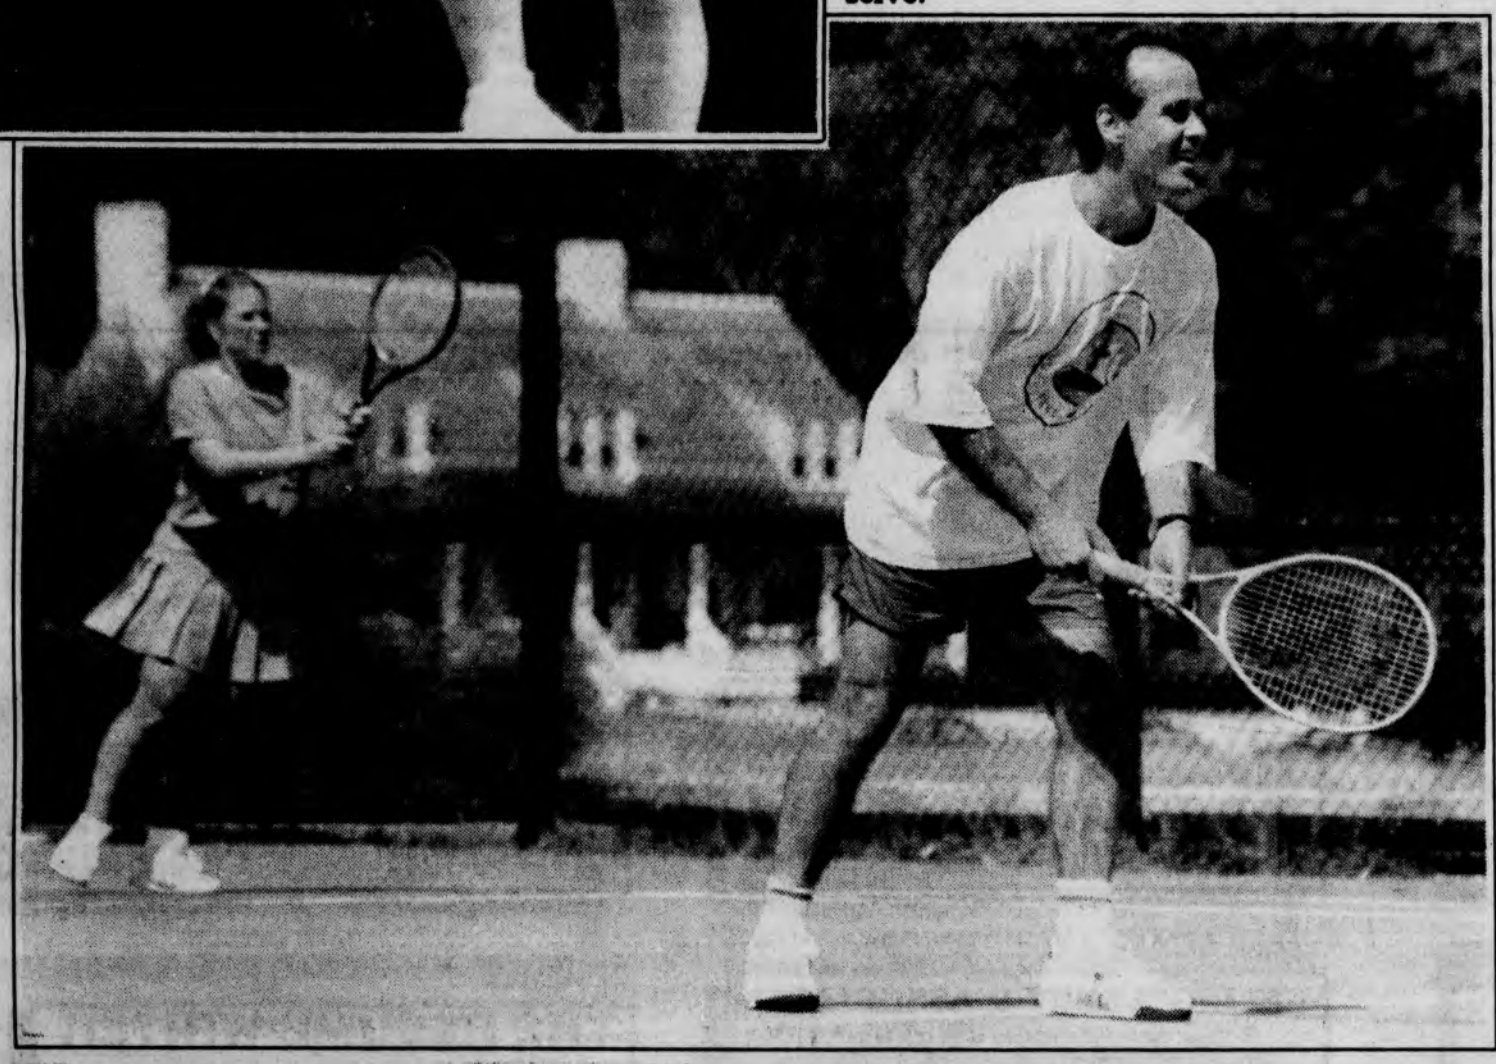
Cohasset benefit tennis tourney is love match



Chris Means fires off a sharp return to clinch the mixed doubles Draw A championship with his partner, Johanna Alessi.

Jodi Craybas successfully returns serve.

Runners' up in the A draw , Tony Alessi and Jodi Craybas get ready to receive serve.

The third annual mixed doubles tennis tournament Aug. 1 and 2 sponsored by the Cohasset Benefit Committee was a "phenomenal success", according Annie Abbruzzese, one of the coordinators.

The tourney, which drew 118 players, raised more than $3,000 for the prosthetic foundation of the orthopedic clinic at Children's Hospital in Boston to help kids who have outgrown their artificial limbs.

The winners are: A draw, Chris Means and Johanna Alessi; (runners' up) Tony Alessi and Jodi Craybas; B draw, Paul Carroll and Carol Mears; and (runners' up) Carl Nelson and Jeannine Lavoie.

Sixteen Cohasset families donated their private tennis courts for the event. The organizing committee was Abbruzzese, Mia Graham, Paul Hart, Trish Hermann, and Joy Pratt.

Cohasset Mariner

Vol. XIV, No.44 | Thursday, August 13, 1992 | 1-800-649-6661 | 50 cents

Catch of the Day

Bluefish caught by the participants in the Cohasset Yacht Club's Sixth Annual Bluefish Tournament held Saturday Aug. 8 adorn the dock. The winners were (L to R) Bill Taylor (holding his son Scott who did not join the fishing expedition), Dave Murpy, Sarah Murphy and Steve Saleski. Sarah Murphy said this was the third time she and her crew won the tournament, taking both categories of most fish caught and biggest catch. The Murphy/Taylor/Saleski team caught 19 fish, and the heaviest was 14 lbs. Murphy attributed her team's first place finish to the location they fished at during the six-hours of competition: Boston Light.

Choppy economy dunks local boat owners

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Boat owners are not immune to the effects of a flat economy.

Town Treasurer Elizabeth Ripley said payment of boat excise taxes dropped in recent years, and hit a five year low in 1992.

In 1988 and 1989 the town had a 100 percent payment rate of boat taxes. However a slide began in 1990, the first full year of a downed economy.

A total of 88 percent of all boat excise taxes were paid in 1990, 84.5 percent in 1991 and 83 percent in 1992.

Statistics are for the fiscal year ending June 30th of every year.

While boat owners are traditionally perceived to be from the wealthier strata of society, Ripley said she is not surprised by their non-payment of boat excise taxes.

"They have been really hard hit. You wouldn't believe the number of bankruptcies we see around here," she said.

"Some for homes you would never believe are in bankruptcy."

Three years ago one person in town filed for bankruptcy, two years ago there were four people, Ripley said, and last year there were ten.

She noted that the people who comprise the ten have traditionally paid their taxes in full.

Enforcing payment of boat excise taxes is difficult, Ripley said.

Unlike the recourse available to treasurers for non-

Contaminants may be present in private landfill

Water samples drawn in May suggest one of the Cohasset Heights Landfill monitoring wells may be contaminated with carbon disulfides, lead, chlorides and dissolved solids.

Camp, Dresser, McKee, the town's engineering firm, released a report in July that said a bedrock monitoring well tested positive for contaminants. They warned the contamination could have happened during laboratory testing procedures because one of the contaminants is not something usually found in a landfill.

Health board members voiced concern because the well is located between the private landfill and the town's drinking water supply.

Water samples from the bedrock well, ground water and surface water sources in and around the landfill are tested every three months for contamination. During the May test, the ground water and surface water tested clean.

The next quarterly test is scheduled between Aug. 15-25. The board will require CDM engineers to be Code could cause cesspool chaos

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Do you know where your sewage goes when you flush the toilet? If it flows into a cesspool, it could cost you dearly in the near future.

In 1978, the state established regulations requiring septic or sewer systems. Some 14 years later, state health officials want local health boards to begin implementing those regulations, but provided no guidelines or timetables for doing so.

After a hearing Tuesday night, Cohasset's health officials established a committee to recommend how to enforce the state mandates. But everyone is concerned about cost to the homeowners especially in tough economic times. Fifteen concerned homeowners turned out for the hearing.

Briefly defined, a cesspool is a below-ground pit for holding and dispersing wastewater. In some cases, the cesspool sits directly in the ground water. It does not have a tank or leaching field.

"It's just a means of getting rid of the effluent into the ground," health board chairman William Baird explained.

In contrast, a septic system consists of a tank where the effluent is held until the solid wastes settle and the scum and floatables rise to the surface. It delays the

Wait is over

Blacktop set for Black Rock Road

The wait is nearly over- Black Rock Road will be a real street.

The planning board paved the way for occupancy of two houses on the former Curtis Estate Monday night when the members voted to accept the developer's plan to resurface Black Rock Road.

The developer, Jerusalem Road Limited Partnership, agreed to put one to one and a half inches of bituminous asphalt over the existing Black Rock roadway, and repair the road to a continuous surface where it was broken up.

The agreement will allow the buyers of 15 Black Rock Road and 17 Adams Road to finally move in.

Bruce Indec has had to postpone the closing on his newly acquired 17 Adams Road property twice already.

"I'm glad it passed. It's been a lot of meetings," Indec said.

The postponement in closing forced Indec to temporarily move into his fiance's mother's house.

"Yes, I did experience a lack of housing," he said.

Steven Corey, general partner of the Jerusalem Road Limited Partnership, said Monday's vote culminates a year of work.

Cohasset's week

Former resident killed

David T. DiGregorio, 31, formerly of Cohasset, was shot and killed early Sunday morning in Wallingford, Conneticut as he sat on his motorcycle and waited in traffic at an exit ramp.

A large dark car pulled out of the traffic and shot DiGregorio , and two other motorcyclists who were riding with him, according to a press release issued by the Conneticut State Police.

Police do not know how many shots were fired and are investigating the case.

DiGregorio, who graduated from Hingham High School before moving to Cohasset, died at the scene of the shooting, Conneticut State Trooper C.W. Lynch said.

He moved to Wallingford from Cohasset four years ago.

Gregory Hodge, 25, also of Wallingford, was taken to Veterans Memorial Medical Center in Meriden where he died several hours later. The third victim, Henry Pettola, 39, of East Haven is listed in critical condition at the hospital.

Police said the shots were fired at approximately 2:30 a.m. as the three men were stopped at southbound exit 66 on the Wilbur Cross Parkway.

The motive for the shootings is still undetermined, police said. They are investigating whether there is a link between the triple shooting and recent motorcycle gang violence in the area.

Rotarians hear Langmaid

Chartis Langmaid, a Democratic candidate for the State Senate, addressed the Cohasset Rotary Club Monday night.

Langmaid, of Cohasset, said she wants to put more people to work through the introduction of a government-sponsored "revolving loan fund" to assist small businesses which cannot get loans from traditional souces, such as banks.

"I want to get government both out of the way, and, in very specific ways, help expand the economy," Langmaid said.

"It would facilitate the creation of jobs in the private sector, not the public," she added.

She did not disclose the details of her plan at the Rotary meeting.

Langmaid is running for the Senate seat which would represent Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

Assault arrest made

A Hull-Cohasset man was arrested and charged with assault after a 30-year old unidentified Norwell man was hit by a beer bottle while walking by a home on Arrowwood Street Aug. 8.

Willard Montgomery, 21, of Hull and 729 Jerusalem Rd. was charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to murder after police found a man hit with a beer bottle.

At 10:30 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 8, police responded to a caller who said three people were "knocked out" by two or three young men who "crashed a house party on Arrowwood Street," said Sgt. Brian Noonan.

Sgt Noonan said, the Norwell man was apparently walking by the house when he allegedly was attacked by Montgomery. "for no reason."

Sgt. Noonan said the three other people hurt prior to the telephone call to police did not come forward to press complaints.

The Norwell man suffered a head injury and several bruises and was treated and released by Cohasset E.M.T.'s.

Montgomery was arraigned Tuesday in Quincy District Court and pleaded not guilty to the charges. His case was continued until Nov. 3. He was released on $5,000 personal recognizance.

Sgt. Noonan said this was not the first time police have had problems with Montgomery.

Sgt. Noonan added there have been several disturbances between youth groups between Hull and Cohasset for most of the summer.

He hoped the seriousness of the above charges would cause "the feud to end."

Seafood permit questioned

In a letter to selectmen, health board members said health codes do not allow for the issuing of a temporary permit to operate a raw seafood bar without a variance from health board members.

The code said, "The preparation or service of other potentially hazardous foods including pastries filled with cream or synthetic cream, custards and similar products and salads or sandwiches containing meat, poultry, eggs or fish is prohibited. Shellfish and shrimp are potentially hazardous foods. Only the Board of Health has authority to vary these regulations."

The issued was raised after health board members William E. Baird, board chairman, Thomas Cook and Robert Davenport heard selectmen issued a permit to Robert Pattison to operate a raw seafood bar from June 26-28 during the South Shore Art Center Festival and Harborfest.

Health board members suggested in a July 30 letter that selectmen host planning sessions with appropriate town departments for the Arts Festival, Harborfest, Taverna and Village Fair. They suggested that a departmental sign off system be in place for signing licenses as it is for approval of Common Victualers Licenses.

Student registration hours

Cohasset Public Schools will hold registration session for all new students from 9 a.m. to noon, Tuesday, Aug. 25 through Thursday, Aug. 27.

Parents are urged to phone for an appointment for registration. Phone numbers are K-3, Joseph Osgood School, 383-6117, Grades 4-6, Deer Hill School, 383-6115 and Grades 7-12, Jr.-Sr. High School, 383-6102.

Committee members named

Town Moderator William Weeks recently named three residents tot he Regional School District Planning Committee.

They are Nancy L. Sandell of Stevens Lane, a member of the current school committee, Mary Jane E. McArthur of Schofield Road and James C. Kirk of South Main Street.

Selectmen's next meeting

Selectmen will next meet Monday, Aug. 17 at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall.

Electric storm damage

Tuesday afternoon's late thunderstorm caused substantial damage to Eastern Edison lighting poles.

Some 6,000 customers in 17 communities including the Norwell, Scituate, Cohasset and Pembroke area were hard hit..

Scattered power outages were reported at 6 a.m. Wednesday although most of the power was restored by the morning hours.

High winds causing downed wires and lightning strikes to the poles were causes of the power outages. The storm began to hit the area around 4 p.m. Tuesday afternoon.

August blood drive

The American Red Cross will hold a blood drive from 2 to 7 p.m., Friday August 21 at the Hingham Community (Mason Hall), 85 Central Street in Hingham. For more information, please call Helen Crowley, (617) 331-6999.

The south area of the American Red Cross offers courses in first aid, child care, and CPR at its facility, 15 Front Street, South Weymouth. For registration or more information about courses, please call (617)262-1234 ext. 221.

Boaters affected by economy . . .

payment of motor vehicle taxes or property taxes, there is little that a municipality can do to enforce payment of boat excise taxes, Ripley said.

"We have nothing beyond the warrant" for collection of boat excise payments, she said.

The warrant is a demand letter sent to delinquent boat owners.

However, collectors can block license renewals if someone fails to pay their motor vehicle excise taxes or put a lien on a house if property taxes are not paid.

Bruce Stanford, an attorney with the state department of revenue, said municipal collectors cannot use the same law to force payment of motor vehicle excise taxes for collection of delinquent boat excise taxes.

"The same tools really aren't available," he said.

However, Cohasset has fared better than most towns in collecting boat excise payments.

With an uncollectible rate for boat taxes this year of 33 percent, Hingham Town Treasurer Ruth Anne Beck instituted new measures of collection: she takes delinquent boat owners to small claims court.

Beck said she was forced to thrust the legal system into the collection process because treasurers are given little enforcement tools for boat excise taxes.

Fortunately, Ripley said, we haven't had to go that route yet.

Treasurers like Beck and Ripley, however, receive collection assistance from their local harbormasters.

Cohasset and Hingham tie issuance of a town mooring permit to payment of boat excise taxes. The harbormasters issue the mooring permits.

Cohasset Harbormaster Irving Gadow said he checks to make sure all applicants have paid their boat excise payments before he issues a permit decal.

He said there is not a boat on a town mooring which has outstanding excise taxes.

Ripley said the 17 percent disparity between what is owed the town and what has been collected could represent Cohasset boat owners who did not put their boats in the water this year.

Ripley said although boats may be dry-docked, the owners must still pay the excise taxes.

PAINT BEFORE SELLING?

QUESTION: What advice do you offer on the subject of painting your home before putting it on the market?

ANSWER: If the outside is badly in need of paint, it may be worth your time to paint it before you start showing the house. Chipped and faded paint is not only unsightly, but may discourage a sale. Most people do not want to move in and have to undertake such a big job. The same advice goes for the inside. No point to completely repaint or paper your walls since the buyer may want to select his own colors or patterns. However, if a particular room looks especially shabby, it will be worth your effort to paper or paint it.

"The Wildcard...is White"
Boston Globe 8/2/92
Why is Tim White the Wildcard in the race for State Senate?
Because he's the political outsider with the experience it takes to be an effective State Senator. As an independent business person for 13 years, Tim knows first hand that it will take tough decisions and new ideas to improve our state government.
Tim knows the state cannot offer more services when the tax base is shrinking!
Tim knows that state government and business must work together to create new jobs and more revenues for our towns!
It's time to play "the wildcard" and let taxpayers win! Vote Tim White for State Senate.

flow from the dwelling to the soil until anaerobic bacteria have an opportunity to begin to break down the effluent.

The second treatment phase of a septic system begins when the effluent flows from the tank into the leaching field or pits. The field must be a minimum of four feet above the ground water and in perkable soil. There the aerobic bacteria attack and purify the effluent, protecting the ground water from pollutants.

Although some 1,200 homes and commercial buildings are not hooked up to the two sewer systems in town, the board does not know how many of them have cesspools.

According to health agent Joseph Godzik, most houses built since 1978 would comply with the state health code. Those built prior to 1978 and not on the sewer system probably have cesspools, he said.

Currently, the health board inspects cesspools and septic systems when there is evidence of failure or the property is being transferred. If the system has found to be in failure, the board requires upgrading or replacement.

Replacing cesspools can be a pricey proposition. Godzik estimates the cost at $4,000 to $5,000 if the system can be installed in the naturally existing soil.

If unsuitable soil must be removed and replaced with sand, the cost could climb to $10,000. Homes built in environmentally sensitive areas, such as wetlands, may require barrier walls, interceptors, drains and pollution. In extreme cases, alternative systems are required.

"The range in town has been $4,000 to $43,000," Godzik said.

Residents at the public hearing wanted to know what kind of flexibility the town had in enforcing the state regulations. The cost of replacing their cesspools caused great concern to those attending the hearing.

According to Baird, the state did not "grandfather in" any existing systems when it passed the state environmental regulations known as Title V that established the minimum standards for septic systems. Title V is currently under review. Baird said revisions should be in place within a year.

Baird expects the state will continue to press for enforcement. He wants the town to establish an enforcement procedure to forestall the state from coming in and dictating one.

Several Cape Cod towns have already begun to enforce the state regulations. According to Baird, those towns have held that cesspools are "environmentally unhealthy and they should be in some manner eliminated from their towns."

Brewster's guidelines call for replacing all cesspools, but allow waivers in cases of financial hardship. Additionally, Brewster does not consider it a cesspool if it has a leaching field that meets the four-foot water table separation and it is functioning properly.

"For the moment that's a good close second," Baird explained.

Baird suggested that town could target disposal systems in environmentally sensitive areas, those suspected of being in failure and properties being sold for action. Enforcement could be phased in over some period of time.

Steven Weber of Oak Street said enforcement could be onerous for owners who bought their homes when "It will be a tremendous amount of hardship on people," he said, adding the depressed housing market means some property owners do not have enough equity in their homes to get a loan to pay for a septic system.

Weber was told his 80-year-old system was functioning adequately when he purchased his home four years ago.

"If it was good enough four years ago, I'm not sure it's fair to put the burden on the homeowner," he said.

Anson Whealler of Jerusalem Road also questioned the push for enforcement.

Whealler, who serves as a member of the Straits Pond Committee, concedes cesspools have the potential to pollute ground water as well as water supplies like Straits Pond, but added, "I have yet to see a single scientific measurement that could detect one of these pollutants, much less pinpoint the sources."

With no proof existing cesspools are creating a problem in the town's water supply, Whealler questioned the wisdom of causing a hardship on property owners and the town budget.

"Everyone in town with one these systems will be in to the assessors' office to apply for a $40,000 abatement," he warned.

Several residents worried they would install an expensive septic system to comply with Title V and then Cohasset would finally finish sewering the town.

"If I invest $10,000 only to see sewerage come done the road two years later, I'd jump up and down," Kearin Dunn of Pond Street said.

Paul Donovan of Bancroft Road drew laughter when before we get sewerage." But he suggested the town

"We purchased the old Curtis Estate about a year ago with the sole purpose to remodel and restore the property," he said.

"There were three existing homes on the property."

The partnership subdivided the estate and sold two of the three homes.

The third house is at 600 Jerusalem Rd. and has not been sold, Corey said.

"It's up for grabs," he noted.

Corey said he was glad the partnership was able to work things out with the town.

"I'm pleased we were able to satisfy the local boards," he said.

Satisfaction did not come easy Monday, though.

The planning board initially wanted Black Rock Road to meet common driveway standards.

The common driveway standard mandates that the road be paved 15 feet wide, with two and one-half feet of shoulder on each side, with a two-inch crown and provides for specific drainage along the road.

The partnership argued that in order to conform specifically to the standard, they would be required to cut into the front of people's yards along Black Rock Road.

The planning board accepted the developer's proposal to simply resurface the existing roadway.

needed to explore sewering the sensitive areas of town where septic system costs could be prohibitive.

Some homeowners asked the board to consider making changes in their regulations to make it easier and less expensive to install septic systems.

Baird promised the board would do everything it could to keep costs down for property owners.

At the finish of the public hearing, the board asked attendees to set up committee to study the issues and problems raised during the hearing and suggest ways to enforce the mandate without unduly burdening property owners. Whealler, Dunn, Mark Bell of King Street and Ed Connolly of Lily Pond Lane volunteered.

Contaminants. . .

present during the test. The samples will be split between the landfill's engineers and CDM for independent testing.

"We will ask for the results in two weeks, not two to three months," chairman William Baird said.

The test found elevated levels of iron, dissolved solids, a large amount of chlorides, carbon disulfides and a decrease in the ph level. Carbon disulfide is the contaminant not usually associated with landfills, health agent Joseph Godzik said.

According to Webster's dictionary, carbon disulfide is a clear, flammable liquid. It is used to make rayon and cellophane, as a solvent for fats, rubber, resin, waxes and sulfur, and in matches, fumigants and pesticides.

Olympic perspective

The Summer Olympics are over and how we marveled at the outstanding athletes in so many various events.

Much has been noted of the U.S. Men's Basketball "Dream Team" and of many outstanding swimming, gymnastic and track events. It was an Olympics to remember

But one aspect is just starting to take notice and that is the pressure of very young athletes who are just beginning the period of teenager, 13 to 16 years old.

Last week's cover of Newsweek illustrates the story.

The pressure of an athlete at the Olympics is enormous. But that pressure on a very young athlete should not be warranted.

Why should a child be scolded by a coach or a parent at that young age for not performing to a gold medal status?

The relevance to local community sports is again the pressure of young adults performing to an adult crowd.

No matter if it is youth soccer, Little League baseball, Pop Warner football, youth basketball and hockey and even into interscholastic sports at the high school, coaches and parents should remember that young athletes are developing constantly.

Their bodies and minds are learning every day. New situations arise each day. Each day brings highs and lows, peaks and valleys.

Young athletes should not be held to the same standards as professional athletes.

It should be not "win at all costs" or else but rather an urging of reaching a maximum potential without spoiling one's outlook on life or one's future.

The look of some U.S. gymnasts faces after a less than robust performance hints of dread, having to face their parents and coaches.

It's too bad. There are many more Olympics to face for a 13 or 16 year old. Let them enjoy life or as the saying goes, "Hey, get a life."

- Mike Berger

Airport noise

Airport noise is a persistent problem for many residents of the South Shore.

As warmer weather arrives and residents open their windows and spend more time outside, airplane noise becomes more noticeable, intrusive and aggravating.

The number of overflights is much greater over the South Shore than over other communities similarly situated.

The South Shore is affected by aircraft noise because of Logan Airport arrivals and departures.

Runway 33 arrivals are directed over Scituate, Hingham, Hull and Cohasset; over the last 12 years runway 33 accounts for 29 percent of all turbo jet arrivals and Massport has plans to increase that percentage.

Due to changes in the early 1980's, departure flight paths were directed away from other areas and routed over the South Shore.

Recently several South Shore residents met with State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Hingham selectman Kevin Costello, and representatives of Congressman Gerry Studds and State Senator Robert Hedlund to revitalize the South Shore's Coastal Noise Abatement Committee ("CNAC").

Area residents should call Massport with airplane noise complaints each time that an annoying noise episode or continuous overflights occur.

Massport's noise complaint telephone is 567-3333 and is staffed 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Residents should also call Rep. Murray, 722-2400, to register their complaints. When registering a complaint with Massport, the caller should ask that a written report be sent to the caller and also to Rep. Murray.

If anyone is interested in learning more about CNAC, and in supporting or joining its efforts, they are invited to call Rep. Murray.

If enough people join and participate in CNAC's efforts significant noise abatement for the South Shore can be achieved and further deterioration halted.

chamber chatter

by Paula Knowles

After the arrival of the seventh billion college admissions literature pack in the mail, I decided that it was time to get on the stick and pick up this year's edition of the "College Book," Barron's Profiles of American Colleges.

We learned three children ago that this book is an invaluable aid when you have a senior or junior trying to decide on where to apply to college, or even just where to visit before applying and relying on the apply-ee (applicant just doesn't sound right in this instance, since the parents actually do 90 percent of the work) to use the copy in the guidance office at school is as silly as relying on him or her to fill the gas tank after using the car!

So I planned out my route, knowing how hard it is to find an up-to-date edition of this particular book at any book store. First to Hanover Mall, then just a little past the mall, then to Kingston Mall (there are two bookstores to check there), then to South Shore, then to...and then I remembered Buttonwood's in Cushing Plaza. I really felt like a fool, having been pushing the "shop locally" campaign for about two years now, that I didn't think of them first.

"Well," I rationalized, "it's a really hard book to find at this time of year, and only a huge bookstore would probably have it in stock right now. But I'll stop there anyway." Needless to say, the book that I had not been able to find a few months earlier in all those other bookstores, was right on the shelf at Buttonwoods, along with three other books very much like it.

So as much as I hate shelling out $17.95 plus tax on a book that will be out of date in six months, I felt a lot better knowing that I had saved $10 in gas and three hours of driving, parking, walking and hunting.

Since I was there anyway, and was so far ahead of the game, I took some time to browse through the sale books, and then stopped in to the consignment shop and Walgreen's. All in all, with time, gas, wear and tear on the car, etc., I figure I actually made money by buying the book in Cohasset!

A few more finds in the last week or so...for shirt buttons, thread, bobbins, etc. After most of the stores have closed — Stop & Shop has added a sewing section in the aisle with the tea kettles and extension cords.

Cards & Shards has some great note paper and stationary for those thank-you notes after graduation, wedding, shower or vacation. Check out the sale section at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy...a lot of discontinued products at marked down prices. And look around at the weekly specials when you are getting your paint or nails or whatever at Cohasset Hardware. Some unexpected buys on great products show up each and every week.

NOW appreciates media support

To the Editor:

I am a member of the South Shore Chapter of the National Organization for Women (N.O.W.), and I want to express my sincere thanks to the staff at the Mariner Newspapers for addressing our issues.

The South Shore Chapter is relatively new, and letting the public know we're here is so important. With the Mariner's recent press, women's issues on the South Shore are finally being exposed. People are talking about these things that have been quiet for so long.

N.O.W.'s purpose "is to take action to bring women into full participation in the mainstream of American society now, exercising all privileges and responsibilities thereof in truly equal partnership with men." Our Chapter's actions range from pro-choice rallies/ demonstrations to organizing speakers on domestic violence to letter-writing campaigns. Our future actions may include self-defense instruction, a women's health forum, a candidates' night, more rallies, more letter-writing campaigns, etc. We meet monthly at the New North Church in Hingham, and the public is always welcome.

Thanks again, Mariner staff—we appreciate your support!

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS	Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) 722-1646 Room 416B	Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) 722-2800 ext.7857 Room 134
THE HOUSE AND SENATE.—"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' and representatives' votes on five roll calls from legislative sessions prior to the summer recess. There were no roll calls in the House and Senate last week. The next roll calls are on attempted legislative overrides of some of Governor Weld's vetoes of items in the fiscal 1993 state budget.
(House and Senate) COLLEGE LOANS (H 5800)—House 149-0, Senate 35-0 overrode Governor Weld's veto of a higher education loan program. Override supporters said this utilizes $5 million to leverage $45 million in low interest loans for middle class students whose families are saddled with significant debt and are ineligible for other forms of assistance. Governor Weld said this duplicates a program recently approved by the U.S. Congress and claimed a state program is unnecessary. (A "Yea" vote is for the loan program. A "Nay" vote is against it).	Y	Y
(House and Senate) NURSING HOME BEDS (H 5800)—House 151-0 and 150-0, Senate 34-1 and 33-1, overrode Governor Weld's veto of two sections requiring the state to continue the policy of paying nursing homes to hold open beds for Medicaid subsidized nursing home patients who are temporarily admitted to hospitals. The first section applies to admission to acute care hospitals and the second to chronic care ones. Override supporters said these beds and rooms are "home" for these elderly residents and argued it is cruel and insensitive for the Weld administration to be considering a plan which would result in elderly people worrying that their room or bed may not be available when they return. Opponents said the section will cost $11 million and is unnecessary because of a decrease in nursing home occupancy rates combined with recent changes in federal law mandating that former residents be granted first priority for admission. (Both roll calls are listed. A "Yea" vote is for the section requiring the state to pay to hold open beds. A "Nay" vote is against the section).	Y	Y

"Y" means the Senator or Representative voted "Yes"
"N" means the Senator or Representative voted "No"
"NV" means the Senator or Representative did not vote
"Present" means the Senator or Representative was present, but for one reason or another preferred not to be recorded on the issue. Many times a Legislator will vote "Present" because voting on the issue may be a conflict of interest because of outside occupation or interests. There are also other reasons, and readers are urged to contact their official directly.

from the kitchen

by Joan Pinkham

At every turn of the road a shady garden nook or dusty lane is brightened nowadays by golden or orange day lilies. Like the cucumber which is rampant now, we have the Chinese to thank for these delights. About 650 A.D., "gum-jum," (dried day lilies) were first used as an herb, "to reduce worry and benefit the mind." They contain vitamins and minerals and are high in protein. Wash the blossoms gently, drain and remove stamens and pistils before chopping; adding to scrambled eggs, omelets, or other egg dishes. Buds may be refrigerated overnight in the juice of dill pickles to serve with cold meat. Sliced day-lily blossoms are a nice addition to a tossed salad and while you're raiding your garden for lily blossoms, stop to gather some marigolds to enhance a salad or add to scrambled eggs. There's no end to the taste treats to be found in your flower garden, for rosebuds can be pickled, nasturtiums can be added to salads, violets made into tea, squash blossoms batter-fried and rose hips made into jelly. Home-grown squash tastes best and butternut squash can be stored by keeping in a cool place. With this recipe of Renee Shepherd's tucked away, you're all set to bake

SQUASH WITH ROSEMARY & HONEY

2 lbs. butternut squash, cleaned and cut into six serving pieces
2 T each softened butter and honey
1 tsp. fresh rosemary, finely chopped

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Place squash pieces cut side down in greased baking pan. Bake 35 min., or until softened. Turn squash over. Combine remaining ingredients and spread a spoonful of mixture over each piece. Bake 20 min. longer. Serves six.

And, speaking of lilies, you might consider this next recipe as "gilding the lily," when all one asks for on a hot summer's day is a cooling dish of sherbert or ice cream. How much tastier though is a dish of peach or vanilla ice cream topped with

MELBA SAUCE

In a saucepan combine 2 C. fresh raspberries, or 2 pkgs. (10 oz.) frozen raspberries, thawed and drained
1/2 C. red currant jelly
1/4 C. sugar

Bring mixture to a boil over moderate heat, crushing the raspberries with the back of a spoon. Simmer, stirring, for 5 min., or 'til thickened. Force the sauce through a fine sieve with the back of a spoon into a bowl. If desired, add 1T kirsch. Serve sauce chilled, over ice cream. Makes approx. 1 1/3 C.

Now, when garden plots are rampant with zucchini, good cooks are ever on the lookout for ways of disguising them in recipes. This is not the first time that some of you have seen this recipe, for it is a delicious way of preparing a casserole that serves six generously and has the added delight of fooling us into believing it is not just plain old zucchini. Dorothy Aronson brought the recipe back from a visit to California and some of us never tire of her

ZUCCHINI CASSEROLE

4 medium zucchinis, sliced about 1/2" thick
3/4 C. shredded carrots
1/2 medium onion, chopped
6 T butter or margarine
2 1/4 C. herbed stuffing mix or croutons
1 can condensed cream of chicken soup
1/2 C. dairy sour cream

Cook zucchini in small amount of boiling, salted water 'til slightly tender. Drain well. Cook carrots and onion in 4 T butter 'til tender. Remove from heat and stir in: 1 1/2 C. stuffing mix, soup and sour cream. Gently stir in zucchini. Turn into 1 1/2 qt. casserole. Melt remaining butter and add remaining stuffing, tossing gently. Top casserole. Bake in 350 degree oven for 30 to 40 min. in uncovered casserole dish.

Please remember that your ideas and recipes are what makes this column fun and we hope you will share them. Sometimes we all grow bored with what we are cooking and like to try something new on family or guests. Soon many will be reaping their home-grown vegetables. Have you a recipe for squash, or your tomatoes? And how do you cook your eggplant? Can you freeze string beans someone asked. Write and tell us your favorite summertime recipes. We'd love to hear from you. Now, when visitors flock to our beaches and historic sites, we welcome recipes that are unique to their home town. Do take a minute to send your family's favorite recipes to me c/o Box 25, Marshfield Hills, 02051. Joan.

Volunteers praised for effort

To the Editor:

Last week the Cohasset Conservation Trust completed a mailing of its new brochure to all Cohasset landowners. The purpose of the trust is to protect areas of special ecological importance such as salt and freshwater marshes, woodlands and seashores, promote public interest in conservation and sound development of land.

This mailing could not have been successful without the help of Kathy Bryanton, director of the Cohasset Council of Aging who coordinated a volunteer group of ladies and one gentleman to help stuff envelopes and apply labels.

The trust is very appreciative of the efforts of the following volunteers. They are: Mary Andracchio, Olga Sawchuck, Betty Grassie, Helen Murphy, Libby Pompeo, Lillian Lincoln, Bruce Edmonds, Sheila Kelley, Tillie Nardo, Pauline Keating, Irene Porter, Blanche Thompson and Peg Doyle.

Fire department thanked for aid

(The following letter was sent to Selectmen and the Fire Department.)

Dear Selectmen:

Enclosed please find copy of my letter to Chief Nadeau praising the aid his department rendered me during my recent accident.

As a resident of Cohasset for the past 38 years I have great love for our town and am as interested as anyone in having good services at a reasonable cost. Like a lot of citizens I am concerned with the budget.

However, when you are laying on the ground bleeding and hurting, and you have these wonderful professionals taking care of you, you just do not think about the budget. You are just so pleased to have these friendly and capable people taking care of you.

Somehow we have to preserve these excellent services our town offers us.

Dear Chief Nadeau:

On June 22, 1992 I fell from the roof of my house, suffering a compound fracture of my left leg. The leg had to be amputated later on. I remained conscious all the time and after seeing what my leg looked like asked my Mig to call for the ambulance.

I do not know how long it took the ambulance to arrive but it was not a long time. I cannot begin to tell you how good it was to see their friendly faces: Captain Silvia, Captain Lincoln, Bobie Protulis, and Ed Strzik.

These men performed their duty efficiently, professionally and with tender care. Again I was conscious all the time they were working on me but I was not worried a bit because of the way they handled themselves. I am sure I would not have had as much composure and confidence that I was going to be alright if it was an outside ambulance crew taking care of me.

In the past I have seen and admired how our firefighters and E.M.T.'s perform their duties but you really do not appreciate what they do until it is you they are working on.

Please pass on Mig's and mine heartfelt gratitude for a job well done.

Thank you,
Joe Buckley

Economist to speak

Wayne Ayers, Chief Economist for the First National Bank of Boston, and editor of their Economic Review, will be the principal speaker at the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's breakfast meeting Aug. 26.

Mr. Ayers, formerly an economist for the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve system and an adjunct professor of economics at B.U.'s Graduate School of Management, is a member of the economic advisory committees of Associated Industries of Massachusetts and the American Bankers Association.

His plain speaking and down to earth approach made a hit with chamber members last year.

He has been asked to speak again to offer his idea of where the economy is heading in the upcoming election year. The meeting will be held at Kimball's Aug. 26, at 7:45 a.m.

Cost for members and their guests is $5 per person; and $10 per person for non-members.

Reservations (required) can be made by calling the Chamber at 383-1010, or Kimball's at 383-6650.

Tickets may be purchased in advance from any chamber board member.

Carillonneur plays recital

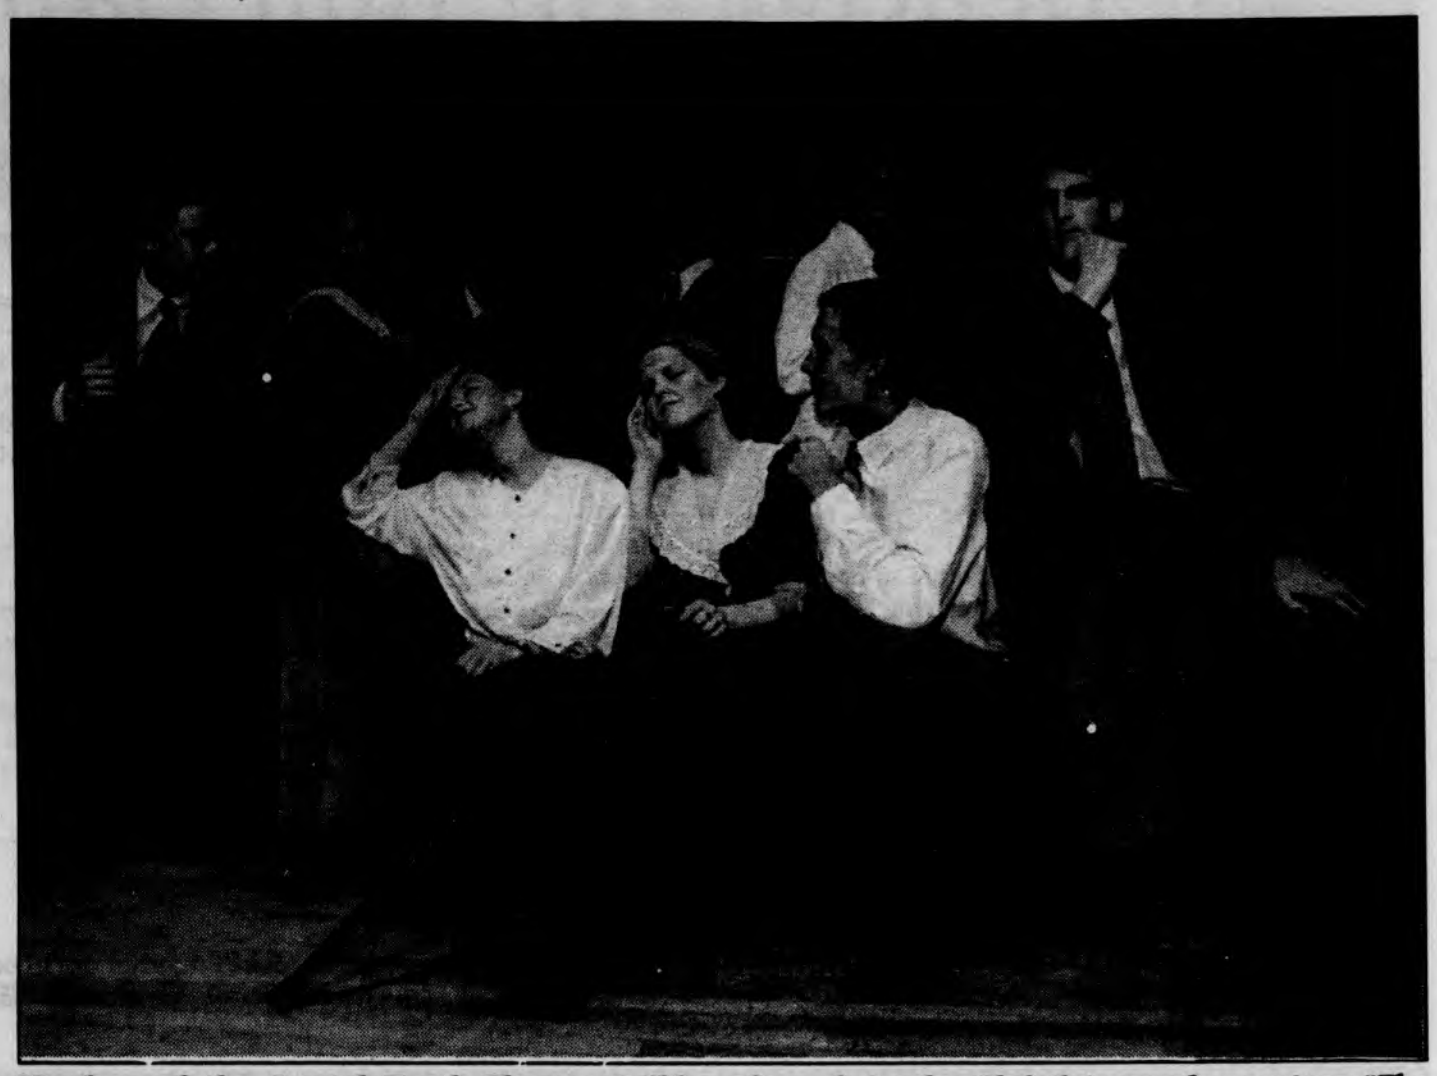
George Matthew, Jr., Carillonneur of the First Presbyterian Church in Stamford, CT, will play the eighth in the series of nine summer recitals on the recently-renovated Cohasset Carillon in the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

Matthew's program features works for carillon by Kleinschmidt, Pouseele, Vaughan and Charles Callahan, a native of Cambridge.

Also included will be arrangements of hymns, a transcription of a work by Rameau and a Strauss waltz.

Listeners may obtain printed programs either on the Common or at the back of St. Stephen's Church in the courtyard on Highland Avenue. The concert will go on, rain or shine, and blankets, picnics and lawn chairs are invited.

The music begins at 6 p.m., and will last an hour, following which those interested may climb the 45 steps of the tower to view the unusual keyboard of the carillon.



For further information, call 383-1083 weekdays, or (508) 475-2599.

Sunday, Aug. 30 will mark the end of the 68th annual Summer Series of carillon recitals from the tower of St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset.

The program begins at 6 p.m., and will be played by Sally Slade Warner, Carillonneur of St. Stephen's Church and also of Phillips Academy in Andover. Warner will play a varied program including requests received from listeners at the previous concerts this summer.

The recital will take place regardless of weather conditions; in case of rain, listen from parked cars. Printed programs will be distributed on the Common and also will be available in the courtyard behind the church on Highland Avenue. There is no charge, and picnic suppers, lawn chairs and blankets are welcome on the Common and at other listening places in the area.

After the concert, those who wish to climb the 45 steps to the tower's playing cabin may do so for a brief visit to the keyboard.

Members of the Coastal Youth Theater Guild performed Agatha Christie's murder-mystery "The Unexpected Guest" at Hingham High last weekend. Directed by Joshua Friedman and produced by Kerri A. Mullen, the cast included Matt Sanocki, Sarah Blowers, Jonathan Carr, Rebecca Pearl, Tom Giordano, Dave Perkinson, Bryan Hurley, Dave Edson, Liz Deveney and Gregory Hussey. All students were from Cohasset and Hingham. (Buzz Wadsworth photo)

Final band concert Sept. 1

The final band concert of the season on Cohasset Common is scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 1, at 7:30 p.m.

Performing will be the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band, directed by Richard P. Whitmarsh. Concerts are free and the public is invited to attend.

This year's concerts were funded through the auspices of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc., and via a matching grant from the American Federation of Musicians in New York City.

The recreation department office will be open only intermittently from Monday, Aug. 24, through Labor Day, due to vacation schedules. However, beach stickers will be on sale Monday, Wednesday and Friday, from 10 a.m. to noon, Aug. 24, 26 and 28.

Stickers will not be available from Sept. 1 through Labor Day, except by appointment.

Fall Recreation/Soccer Club soccer registrations will be held Thursday, Sept. 10, from 5 to 7 p.m., at the recreation office and again Saturday, Sept. 12, from 9: to 11:30 a.m., also at Town Hall.

Fliers depicting details will be coming home from school during the latter part of the week of Sept. 7.

Summer theatre final show

The Young People's Summer Theatre will present its final show of the season, "An Evening With Michael and Monty," Saturday, Aug. 15, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Aug. 16, at 4 p.m. at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate.

The two-act presentation is a series of comedy sketches by Michael Frayn (of "Noises Off" fame) and Monty Python. The production is directed by YPST members Dave Dowling and Merideth Finn and supervised by Program Director Donald S. Capen. Tickets can be purchased at the door for $3.

Dog obedience classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate dog training classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Tuesday evenings, on Cohasset Town Common beginning Tuesday, Aug. 25.

Beginner classes will be held from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and a second beginner class will be held from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesday evenings.

The fee for the eight-week program will be $40. Checks made payable to the Town of Cohasset, may be brought to the first class. Participating dogs should be a minimum of three months old.

The purpose of the beginner classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc.

Hints on ownership and responsibility will also be included. The training will include those exercises beneficial to pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience.

The Intermediate-Advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department Beginner Class.

For the above classes, owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars will be allowed. It is also strongly suggested that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for this session.

For all classes: the fee is $40 per dog for the eight-week, one-hour-per-week program.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size, non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis.

Fun carnival Aug. 14

The Cohasset Recreation Dept. will hold the annual Fun Carnival for all children, Friday, Aug. 14, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., at the Osgood School.

Regular playground does not meet that day and all children are invited to attend. Children will need $4 to $5 in order to try all the games and activities.

Proceeds from the event will help support the recreation commission's Special Activities Fund.

❑ We must make mention of Nicole Prisble this week! A wonderful gal, she is a great worker, and we can prove it. Nicole made the dean's list at Kent's School of Law in Chicago. She will do a super job wherever she goes. Nicole has more news. She is engaged to David Braun, an engineer with Commonwealth Edison in Chicago. Nicole and David are planning a May 1993 wedding, and we sure do wish them the best!! We so hope they will be in this area eventually.

❑ The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has a goal in mind, and we all should be aware of it!! "The Chamber of Commerce has but one real purpose, to promote its own community, not only as a good place to do business, but as a great place to live as well. In so doing, the chamber seeks to be an advocate for and a representative of the general business community of Cohasset. Be sure to support them, and to do your business locally. They support us, let us support them.

❑ Congratulations to Kimberly S. Dwyer who recently completed her junior year at Simmons College with honors. Kim is enrolled in the Prince Program of Retail Management at Simmons. In the fall she will be completing an internship at Bloomingdale's in New York City, as a buyer. Gee Kim, we remember you when you were "retailing" at the South Shore Music Circus.

❑ A big birthday that we forgot to mention last week, although most know by now. Happy birthday to Brendan Mulcahy, who turned 25 years old last week. Not everyone was belated, he received six cakes for his big event...probably with more to go. Glad your event was a happy one, Brendan!!

❑ Cohasset's own Dennis Lamp must have had a great time in his recent performance. He was the toastmaster for Roger Clemens' 30th birthday bash, held at the Hard Rock Cafe in Boston. Dennis was the hit of the night, roasting Roger in a way that everyone approved of. He was "jovial"...hard to do with the position the Red Sox are in, but Dennis must think the world of Roger (as do most)...and, we all love the Red Sox, that's for sure.

Peter Sandblom

Sarah Hamilton

❑ Nancy and Jeffrey Keast of Wellesley, announce the birth of their third child, a boy, Phillip David, June 29 at Brigham and Women's Hospital. He joins a brother, Jeffrey Curtis, age 12, and a sister, Christina Vincent, age 4.

His grandparents are Mrs. Vincent R. Loftus and the late Mr. Vincent R. Loftus of Scituate and Mr. and Mrs. David N. Keast of Carlisle. Great-grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Costa Karukas of Stamford, Connecticut.

❑ If you need babysitting, pet sitting/care, lawn mowing, yard work, boat maintenance, car cleaning or painting, you can have it! More than 40 students from CHS have signed up with the Social Service League and are anxious to go to work for you! Fees are arranged between the student you hire and yourself.

Call the Social Service League weekdays at 383-0771 for students' names.

❑ A huge welcome home goes to Shirley Laidlaw this week! Although she had to spend a bit of time in the hospital recently, we know that she will be as good as new by now, a very special person who spreads love everywhere she goes. So many people depend on you, you have to be feeling better knowing how your love has spread.

❑ Speaking of a lady that was loved by all, we are sorry to report that Katherine Migliaccio passed away recently. Mrs. Migliaccio was a special lady, everyone that knew her loved her! She was a great caretaker at the Ripley Road Nursing Home for 30 years, a super mom (I remember her fame 30 years ago when I went to school with her daughter Kathy), a wonderful wife to her husband, and a super grandmother and a great-grandmother of two. Katherine's daughters took care of her; they would not let her die anywhere but home (her wish). They take after their mother in their special ways! Mrs. Migliaccio lived through so much; a very sick husband, she took on all the cares of her friends, her love for her boy, the special gentleman that she helped through high school and saw in the Marines, the death of her grandchild, when she was "the rock." Her wish was to go to California to see her son Nick (Sonny), which she did though she was sick at the time. She was so loved and so needed by all. Our hearts go to her six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren and of course her daughters and son. Katherine lives on in so many hearts, she will never truly die!

❑ Two residents make the news this week, Colby College news that is! Peter R. Sandblom and Sarah Hamilton were two of 467 seniors who received bachelor of arts degrees at Colby College May 24. Sarah graduated magna cum laude with a degree in English, and Peter graduated with a degree in history. And we sure wish you luck, Peter and Sarah, in your future years!

❑ Mary-Catherine McElroy is a lucky gal. She gets to spend one year studying and working in Germany as a participant in the 1992-93 Congress-Bundestag Exchange Program for Young Professionals. This unique program will include a two-month intensive German language course, four months of study at a German or technical school and a six-month internship in German business or industry.

❑ We welcome Eric Austin Studley, son of Sharyn and Ernest A. Studley of 117 Hull St. Eric Austin was born at South Shore Hospital July 22, at 4:17 a.m., weighing in at 7 lbs. 11 ozs. His paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Austin E. Studley, his maternal grandparents are Carolyn and Kenneth Levey.

❑ Since January, a task force has worked to form a private foundation, the Cohasset Education Foundation, whose mission is to improve the quality of public education in our town.

The foundation will debut Saturday, Aug. 29, with a Music Circus benefit starring Bill Cosby. Meet the new directors at a festive party before the 9 p.m. show. To order tickets, call Superintendent Steve Hart (383-6111) during the day, or Clark Chatterton (383-0560) at night, or send a check, payable to the Cohasset Education Foundation, to the Office of the Superintendent, 143 Pond Street, Cohasset. Tickets are $45 and $50, and are tax deductible.

❑ Here's hoping Robert Protulius is feeling better real soon. He had to make a return to the hospital this week. Here's to a brief stay!

❑ Ross MacLeod, son of Ginny and Donald MacLeod, Cedar Acres Drive, recently passed his pilot's exam, July 27, at Norwood Airport. Ross is only 17 years old but loves to pilot those planes. He will be a freshman at Boston College in the fall. Last weekend he took two of his friends for a sightseeing flight over the Cape. They had a birds-eye view of the Queen Elizabeth II stranded in Buzzards Bay.

❑ That's the news for this week, please be sure to let us know yours!

David DiGregorio, 31, died Sunday, August 9 in Wallingford, Conneticut.

DiGregorio graduated from Hingham High School before moving to Cohasset.

He lived in Wallingford, Conneticut at the time of his death.

He leaves a daughter, Jaqueline DiGregorio of Conneticut; his parents William and Janet (Flynn) DiGregorio of Cohasset; brothers Dean DiGregorio of Florida, Gary DiGregorio of Weymouth and Todd DiGregorio of Cohasset; and a sister Kim DiGregorio of San Francisco.

Funeral services are private.

Memorial contributions can be made to the charity of one's choice.

Cleon T. Proctor

Cleon (Taber) Proctor, 90, of Summer Street, Manchester, died July 22 of complications arising from a long-term coronary illness. She was the wife of Carl Allan Proctor of Lockport, NY.

Born in Lockport, NY, the daughter of John Glenn and Florence (Farnsworth) Taber, she resided in that city until the death of her husband in 1980 at which time she moved to Manchester to be near her son, her daughter and their families.

She was a 66-year-member of the Order of the Eastern Star, State of New York; a lifelong member of the First Presbyterian Church of Lockport and, following her move here, a member of the Manchester Women's Club.

Mrs. Proctor leaves her daughter and son-in-law, Veneta and Arthur F. Roebuck of Cohasset, her son and daughter-in-law, Sherry and Esther (Moss) Proctor of Manchester; ten grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Arrangements were by the Lee, Moody and Russell Funeral Home, 9 Dane St., Beverly.

Lillian Capello

Lillian P. (Perron) Capello, 83, of Cohasset, a self-employed real estate broker for 39 years, died July 28 at the Ocean Manor Nursing Home in Scituate after a long illness.

Mrs. Capello was a member of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors and the South Shore Board of Realtors.

She graduated from New Bedford High School.

Mrs. Capello was born in Cambridge and lived 10 years in Boston before moving to Cohasset 39 years ago.

She leaves a brother, Robert Perron of Florida; two sisters, Shirley Jengo and Olive DelGrosso, both of Connecticut; and several nieces and nephews.

A memorial service was held Aug. 5 at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Contributions may be made to the Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Dr., Braintree 02184.

Katherine F. Migliaccio

Katherine F. (Monaghan) Migliaccio, 85, a Cohasset resident for 60 years died July 16 at home after a brief illness.

An avid gardner, she was a licensed practical nurse who only retired five years ago at 80 years old.

She was the husband of the late Frank J. Migliaccio and mother of Nicholas Migliaccio of Huntington Beach, California, Kathleen Palimieri of Marshfield and Marie F. Tilden of Scituate.

Mrs. Migliaccio was a sister to Thomas Migliaccio of Norton and to John, James, and Joseph Monaghan of and Maryan Craven, all of Ireland.

She was the grandmother of Daniel R. Tilden, Michael P. Kelly A. Alise K. and Leah D. Palimeri, Barbara M. and Jeanne K. Migliaccio and the late Joseph F. Palimeri. Mrs. Migliaccio also had two great grandchildren, Katie and Daniel Palimeri of Idaho Springs, Ca.

A Mass was held July 18 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial followed in Woodside Cemetery.

Expressions of sympathy may be made to the Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Road, Braintree, Mass. 02184 or to Father Flanagan's Boys' Home, 300 Flanagan Boulevard, P.O Box 7000, Boystown, New England, 68010-9907.

Cohasset swimmers swamp Scituate K. of C.

Just two days after their 401-200 defeat of Marshfield July 29, it was back to the starting blocks for the Cohasset Swim Team, and when their meet with Scituate K. of C. was completed, they had an impressive 374-251 victory. As usual the meet began with diving. In the midst of Olympic fever, how can we resist crowing about the fact that our diving squad is coached by Northeastern University diver Jane de Lima, who has been coached by Olympic Bronze Medalist, Mary Ellen Clark.

In diving Dawn Meehan was first and Jaime Kurtz was fourth in the 16-and-under age category. In 12-and under Sara Garland was second and Jordan Fiore was fourth.

In swimming events the results were as follows:

Hanover squeaks by Cohasset swimmers, 315-314

The good news was that after three, or was it four, seasons of being undefeated, Cohasset at last found itself again in a meet where the outcome depended on the finishes in the last relay race.

Their opponent was Hanover, which had years back been a formidable opponent. The bad news for a disappointed Cohasset squad was that when the final points were tallied, the score was Hanover 315, Cohasset, 314.

With Duxbury Aqua-Dux and Duxbury Yacht Club now coached by Gators coaches and the Scituate K of C coached by Brandeis University's varsity swim coach, the South Shore Summer League is once again providing exciting competition for a Cohasset team which had in recent years been forced to put off announcing its lopsided victory scores until opposing teams had departed.

This year's championships promises to be exciting.

In diving Emily Henderson was second and Amy Wojtasinski was third in the 16 and under age category. In 12 and under Sarah Garland was third and Kristin Osterborg was fourth.

In swimming events the results were as follows:

Rolling Shutters

Protect your home against hurricanes, intruders, cold & even summer heat

It's HURRICANE Season again
A more active hurricane cycle is likely this decade . . . "We think that within the next few years, this year, next year, we're going to come back into that cycle."
Bob Sheets, Chief of the National Hurricane Center, quoted in the Cape Cod Times

Storm Protection
"When last year's storms hit our beach, we were certainly glad we had them." — L. R., East Sandwich Rolling shutters are a unique exterior window treatment that can effectively protect your windows and doors against high winds and blowing sand and debris. We will help you choose the proper rolling shutters for all seasons, secure from hurricanes with windspeeds up to 130 miles per hour.
Security
"Excellent security and storm protection, and aesthetically agreeable." — B. B., Martha's Vineyard
Rolling shutters are strong, impenetrable, and designed to resist corrosion. You can rest assured that with our PVC or aluminum foam-filled curtain walls, your home is secure, even if you're asleep or away.
Versatility
Rolling shutters are not just for storm protection and security. Use them for daily sun control, energy conservation, privacy and noise elimination.
Convenience
"No more boarding up windows! Now weekend visits to our beach home are a pleasure." — A. A., Nantucket
Rolling shutters are easily operated from inside the house, by manual crank or weatherproof electric motors.

New school aid spending plan unveiled

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

There will be a lot more high-tech equipment in the schools next year thanks to the $112,000 due Cohasset from the state in education aid.

The money is made available to the town courtesy of a legislative override of Governor William Weld's state spending package several weeks ago.

In order to receive the money, which amounts to $100 per student, Cohasset must submit its spending proposal to the state Department of Education.

School Supt. Stephen Hart unveiled the spending proposal at Monday's school committee meeting, with the purchase of computers, software and related items topping the list.

Chief Kealey gives notice

Police Chief Joseph M. Kealey is stepping down.

Kealey notified selectmen in a memo dated August 12 that he does not wish to renew his contract which terminates in March.

The contract between the chief and the town states that either side must give six months notice not to extend the contract at the end of its term.

Selectmen Chairman Jane Goedecke said the six-month window is "standard procedure" with employees under contract.

Bates House is bid a fond farewell

More than 50 Rotarians, some from as far as Austria, crowded into the Bates House on Elm Street Monday night for a final meeting in the house which has been home to the local Rotary chapter for more than 40 years.

Following a majority vote by selectmen last year, the Bates House was sold to Habitat for Humanity, a non-profit affordable housing organization.

Habitat, founded by former President Jimmy Carter, plans to convert the building into two condominiums

'Bimbo eruption' spices up Nor./Ply. senate race

By Tom Henshaw
Mariner staff

The trendy political buzzword "bimbo" has erupted into the campaign for the State Senate in the Norfolk-Plymouth District.

Sen. Robert Hedlund is quoted by the Boston Sunday Globe as using the B-word to describe Silvia Pincov, a female volunteer in Brian McDonald's campaign organization.

The Globe also quoted Hedlund as saying: "I don't even know what a 'women's issue' is."

McDonald, of course, couldn't let that go by without taking a swing at it.

And while he was at it he took a cut at Sally Rizzo, president of the Massachusetts Coalition of Democratic Women, for supporting one of his primary opponents, Chartis Langmaid, because she is a woman.

"On the one hand," said McDonald, "we have a sitting state senator making very demeaning remarks about women and denying that women's issues even exist.

"On the other hand, we have a person stating that, no matter what their records or views on women's issues, men need not apply for elective office because, in her estimation, they never can measure up simply because they are male."

He called upon Hedlund to apologize for the "bimbo" remark, which he characterized as "extreme, divisive and counterproductive."

Hedlund said he would be "happy to say I regret using the term as soon as she (Pincov) makes a similar statement regretting that she deceived the readers of the Globe relative to my votes cast.

"Along with taxes and spending we should also reduce the level of deceit in Massachusetts politics, which is what her letter and Brian's press release is all about."

Committee wants kids safe at home

By Jeff Cutler
Mariner Correspondent

Although summer vacation has not yet drawn to a close, the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee was working Tuesday night to develop plans for the coming school year.

An issue that concerns the committee most is the presentation of the SAFE HOMES Program in town. The program is dedicated to keeping homes in the community "Safe from Drugs...safe from alcohol...safe for teenage parties."

Ellie Waal, committee chairperson, says that the program is really "a network for parents" and she would like more people in Cohasset to make use of it. And a recent SAFE HOMES Survey indicated that parents listed in the directory are positive in their expectations, but they see a problem with making the program known. To this end, the committee discussed picking a design for SAFE HOMES and decided to coordinate a logo contest with the Cohasset school system.

Raccoon raids home

A raccoon made his way into a Cedar Street home, August 5, frightening children and their baby-sitter.

Animal Control Officer William Quigley said the kids' parents were at a function a South Shore Country Club when the raccoon let himself in the screen door.

The baby-sitter called the parents who called the police, who contacted Quigley.

When Quigley, and officers Richard Yocum and Richard Abbadessa arrived a neighbor had managed to get the raccoon out of the house.

Quigley said he put the family in touch with a trapper who took six or seven raccoons out of the yard. He said none of the raccoons appeared to be sick with distemper.

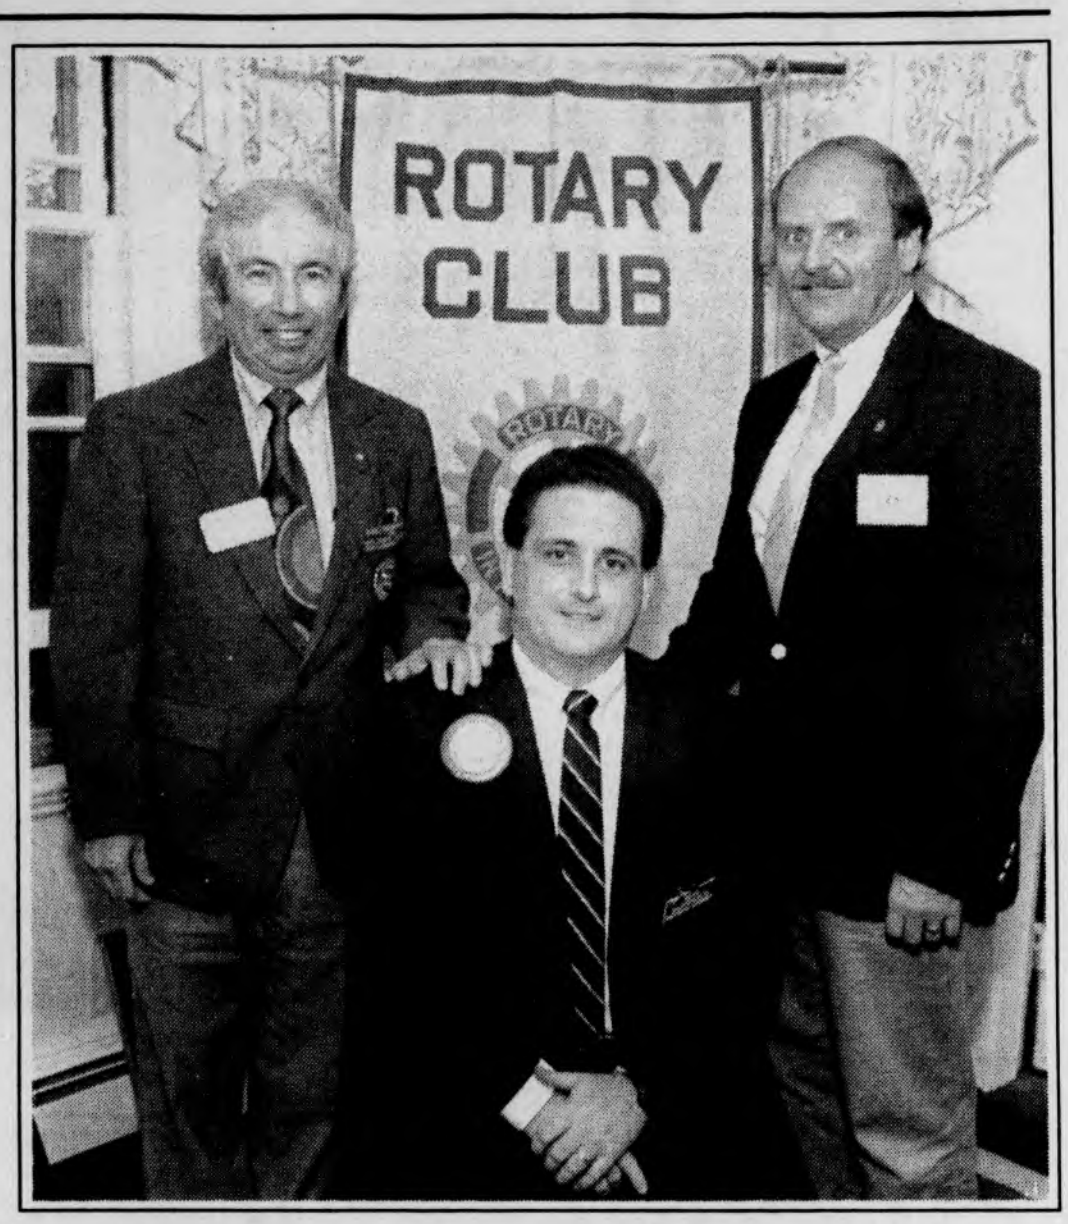
"Thank God no one was bitten," Quigley said.

Quigley said if a raccoon does get inside a home, the residents should not corner it.

"Try to confine it to a room and call the police department," he said.

The state department of public health has announced that an outbreak of wildlife rabies my reach Massachusetts this year.

This outbreak, which began in the mid-Atlantic states several years ago, was reported in Connecticut in early April when two raccoons were found to be infected.



According to the state department of public health, it is possible that the outbreak may continue to spread, so it is important that several steps be taken to minimize the risk of rabies among domestic animals, and consequently people:

• All domestic animals, particularly dogs and cats, should be immunized against rabies. By law, dogs must be vaccinated. Cats are hunters by nature and often come in contact with animals at high risk for rabies. In fact, more rabid cats than dogs are now identified each year in the United States.

• People should avoid wild, stray or unfamiliar animals. They should not handle sick, injured or dead animals.

• Raccoon populations have become dependent on humans and therefore, large numbers of these wild animals are living close to people. Keep all garbage cans securely closed, and clean up any garbage promptly. Raccoons are scavengers and can feed off of all sorts of trash.

Anyone bitten by an unfamiliar animal should immediately wash the wound with soap and water. Then call a doctor for assistance in deciding if treatment for rabies is needed. There is a vaccine. Six does are given over one month's time.

Rotary officials Morton Feinberg, district governor; John Price, president; and J. Thomas Smyth, area representative, pose for the Mariner during the Cohasset Rotary's last meeting at the Bates House, which the town recently sold to Habitat for Humanity for one dollar. Through volunteer help, Habitat will build two condominium units of affordable housing in the structure. Starting next spring, the Rotary will hold its meetings in the Minot Ledge lightkeepers' residence on Government Island.

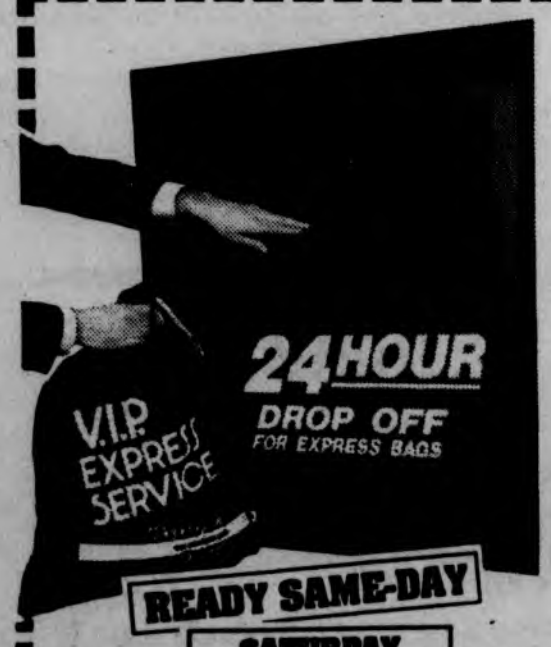
Connolly is appointed

Selectmen appointed Nancy Connolly, 68 Doane St., to the arts lottery council.

Connolly cited her experience as an artist and teacher as qualifications for the board.

"I am interested in helping develop arts lottery applications within the town via posters and speaking to local groups," she wrote on her application.



"Having received arts lottery funding from Cohasset, Weymouth and many South Shore towns for various teaching and theater-based groups, I feel it is time for me to 'give back' in terms of time and experience."

Connolly is a professional exhibiting artist and has taught at the South Shore Arts Center and Fuller Museum, and is education director of the Hull Arts Gallery.

Beechwood field repairs

The puddle on Beechwood ball field should soon be history.

Selectmen approved an emergency transfer of $970 Monday to correct drainage problems on the field.

Tree and Parks Supt. Peter Laugelle said the area didn't dry out this year until June 15 and Little League baseball starts April 15.

Laugelle said the wet spot could be dangerous to kids who might sink in the mud while playing ball.

Shellfish constable resigns

Selectmen accepted with regret the resignation of town shellfish constable David R. Marks, Jr., effective July 1, 1992.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle, who served as assistant shellfish warden for Scituate in Cohasset waters (Bassings Beach), agreed to take the position of temporary shellfish constable at no pay until the board appoints Marks' replacement.

The shellfish constable is paid an annual stipend of $500 and works as needed, Laugelle said.

Slow children signs

The state office of transportation and construction is asking cities and towns to change 'Slow Children' signs to ones with simply the ledger 'Children.'

The department discontinued the installation of 'Slow Children' signs ten years ago, state engineer Michael W. Swanson said.

But, he said, there still may be a small number of the outdated and inappropriate 'Slow Children' signs on various municipal roads.

Swanson said the signs were being changed on all state highways.

"We respectfully request you take some action on your municipal roads," he said.

Rep. Robert D. Hawke (R-Gardner) sent a letter and petition to the state questioning the appropriateness and sensitivity of the 'Slow Children' warning sign.

Reached by telephone Cohasset Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield said he would check to see if Cohasset had any of the outdated signs in place.

Bill payments approved

Selectmen approved payment of the following bills:

• $201.45 to labor counsel, McGowan, Engel, Tucker, Garrett & Schultz for professional services regarding the case Richard Conley v. the Town of Cohasset.

• $435 to Civil Designs, consulting engineers, for professional services related to beach and highway repairs.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

SHOULD I RENT WITH OPTION?

QUESTION: My home is for sale. One prospect offered to rent it with an option to buy. What is your advice on this situation?

ANSWER: The "Rent with option to buy" offer is usually made by someone who is not a serious buyer for ANY house. I'd suggest putting the offer aside and looking for a bonafide prospect who wants to BUY the house – not rent it. However, if you MUST rent your home under these circumstances, be sure that there is a consideration for the option over and above the rent. Remember, you are reducing your sales prospects down to one – and that one is quite dubious.

cohasset's week

Polly stayed home

Cohasset's Polly Logan is watching the Republican convention on television this year for the first time since 1968.

Logan, an alternate delegate, said some unexpected events kept her at home this time around.

But, Logan, who is Republican state committee woman, hasn't been silent. She was a recent guest on a cable-television talk show hosted by former state representative Marjorie Clapprood.

Lightkeeper's update

Joseph McElroy, president of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation (CLC), updated selectmen on the status of renovations and repairs to the 140-year-old structure.

He said although there "were no major surprises," the building will need "significant reconstructive surgery."

McElroy explained that there is some fire damage to the building and rotted wood. He said the sills (horizontal supports) need to be replaced. He noted that South Shore Vocational Technical School can replace the sills.

South Shore Vo-Tech has agreed to take on the renovations as a school project.

McElroy also said CLC would like to hold a fund-raiser from noon to 3 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 4 at the site.

"It's very important for the public to see the building and realize what we're trying to do," McElroy said.

Plans are to create two efficiency apartments upstairs and a meeting room downstairs, which will be available to community groups.

McElroy said the Cohasset Rotary Club and V.F.W. have already expressed interest in using the community room for their meetings.

McElroy said CLC has raised about $50,000 for the project and needs to raise about $100,000 more to finish the job.

The CLC will also check with the building inspector to see what regulations govern placement of a van to store office furnishings at the site. The furnishings are being donated by the rotary club, which held its last meeting at the Bates House on Elm Street Monday.

Student registration hours

Cohasset Public Schools will hold registration sessions for all new students from 9 a.m. to noon, Tuesday, Aug. 25 through Thursday, Aug. 27.

Parents are urged to phone for an appointment for registration. Phone numbers are K-3, Joseph Osgood School, 383-6117, Grades 4-6, Deer Hill School, 383-6115 and Grades 7-12, Jr.-Sr. High School, 383-6102.

August blood drive

The American Red Cross will hold a blood drive from 2 to 7 p.m., Friday August 21 at the Hingham Community (Mason Hall), 85 Central Street in Hingham. For more information, please call Helen Crowley, (617) 331-6999.

The south area of the American Red Cross offers courses in first aid, child care, and CPR at its facility, 15 Front Street, South Weymouth. For registration or more information about courses, please call (617)262-1234 ext. 221.

Appliance fee set

There is a $10 fee per appliance for all residents disposing appliances containing chlorofluorocarbons (CFC's) in their cooling units. Examples of such appliances are refrigerators, air-conditioners and dehumidifiers.

New regulations require removal of CFC's before they are sent to the scrap dealer.

Police Chief Kealey gives notice . . .

"I'm very sorry to hear he's leaving," Goedecke said.

Kealey, 58, said he is not retiring.

"I've enjoyed every day I've worked for the town," he said "But it's time to make a change."

Kealey did not comment on his future plans except to say he "is leaving his options open."

Kealey, who lives in Marshfield, has served with the Cohasset police department for 27 years, ten as chief.

He was appointed to replace former Police Chief John DeBassio in March 1983 after serving four months as acting chief following DeBassio's resignation.

Selectmen plan to discuss how to proceed in selecting Kealey's replacement at their August 31 board meeting. They are not sure if they will appoint a search committee.

Appointing the chief is not subject to the Civil Service Law and Rules. Under Civil Service regulations, selectmen must pick a chief from the top three scorers in the Civil Service exam. Cohasset decided in 1978 to eliminate the chief's position from Civil Service.

Kealey received $29,000 the first year of his contract as chief. In the 1991 town report, Kealey's earnings were reported as $67,340.

In another matter, selectmen appointed Kealey and Fire Chief John Nadeau to sit on the nine-member committee approved at town meeting to study the most effective and efficient means, locally or regionally by which town can provide public safety services. The committee is charged with reporting its findings to the 1993 Annual Town Meeting.

In an interview Tuesday, Kealey said he was looking forward to serving on the committee.

Models on display

The Bank of Boston, Rte. 3A, Cohasset, has on display two models depicting the Cohasset Lightkeeper Corporation's plan for the preservation and public use of the Minot Ledge Lightkeeper's Residence.

Grant applications sought by arts council

The Cohasset Arts Lottery Council accepts applications for Arts Lottery Grants and Performing Arts Student Series (PASS) program admissions. These programs are part of the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council's statewide grant-funding program, established to provide a vehicle for stimulating the arts at the "grassroots" level. The deadline for returning completed applications for both of these programs is Oct. 15.

Applicants for Massachusetts Arts Lottery grants (open to individual artists and organizations) must undertake a project of artistic or cultural benefit to the Cohasset community. This program is organized on a reimbursement basis, meaning that the grant applicant must first spend the funds "up-front" and submit invoices at a later date for reimbursement. There is a one-page application form that must be submitted in triplicate. All applications will be subject to review by the Cohasset Arts Council.

The PASS program offers all Massachusetts students grades K-12 in public, private and parochial schools, as well as those in special needs programs, an opportunity to discover and experience the performing arts.

Information and applications for both types of grants are available at the Town Hall Selectman's Office, 14 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, 02025, 383-9900, or call Allison Shutz Moskow, 383-9242.

Cohasset Rotary bids Bates House a fond farewell for affordable housing use.

Rotary President John Price said it was a bittersweet farewell.

"Although the move will be sad, we recognize that Habitat will be taking the building so neighbors can help neighbors. Their mission is the same as ours," he said.

"The strength of the Rotary was not in the building, but in the people who filled the space," he added.

Rotary's District Governor Morton Feinberg attended the chapter's last meeting in the Bates House.

"The club is going well, and has outstanding contributions to the local community," Feinberg noted.

The Cohasset Rotary was founded in 1941, he said.

Former president Edward Mulvey, whose been a Rotary member since 1963, lamented the loss of the building.

"We are one of the few clubs that had our own building," he said.

"We have all the Rotary flags around the room," Mulvey noted, pointing to Rotary flags from around the world, as well as those from other local chapters, which adorn the walls of the Bates House.

The flags are collected and traded by members who visit other chapters' meetings.

Price said Rotary requires members to attend a meeting once a week, regardless of where they are. Austrian Christian C. Folter, for instance, visited the Monday meeting because he was in town on business.

The location for next week's meeting is up in the air, Price said, but a permanent site has been found.

"Within 14 months we will happily take space in the Minot Lightkeeper's Building," Price said.

The space was offered free of charge by the Cohasset Lightkeepers Association President Joseph McElroy, Price said.

McElroy said he is happy the offer was accepted.

"We are very pleased that the Cohasset Rotary Club has decided to accept the Minot Ledge Lightkeeper's Residence as its new home," McElroy said.

He praised the Rotary Club's commitment to community services, and said that commitment contributed to the association's offer.

Rotarians pose in front of the Bates House on Elm Street, home to the local chapter for more than 40 years. They are: at front, president, John Price; district governor, Morton Feinberg; president-elect Cathy Dwyer; and secretary Doug Peck; at back, board of directors member Tom Gruber; treasurer Arne Gjesteby; and board of directors member, Austin Lyne.

In return for their new home, rotarians will donate their Bates House furniture to the lightkeeper's residence.

The lightkeeper's building is currently undergoing renovations, Price said.

Name: Ted Carroll

Occupation: Sports administrator at South Shore Sports Center in Hingham and summer recreation department playground director in Cohasset.

Best day of your life: The day my nephew Patrick was born, which made me a godfather.

Most embarassing moment: My picture for the Mariner with zinc oxide on my nose.

Goal: Getting my degree in sports management; and finishing up as summer playground director next year, which will be my tenth with the program.

Favorite season: Summer.

Best vacation: The Bahamas in 1988.

Favorite holiday: Memorial Day. I used to live on Sohier Street and watched the parade go by my house every year.

Pet Peeve: Parents who pick up their kids late.

Favorite book: "The Body" by Stephen King.

Favorite movie: "The Untouchables."

Biggest worry: That the playground program and staff won't get the recognition they deserve.

Favorite place: Georgia.

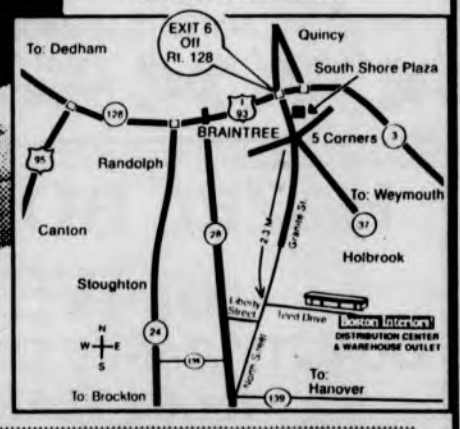
New Ideas



Jon Bryan "...is clearly capable of handling the demands on a Congressman. What's more, he comes to the voter with a fresh new approach to a lot of the old problems that incumbents in Congress, including our own, have failed to solve or even address. For example, Mr. Bryan would certainly be more determined to resolve the endless budget problems than Rep. Studds has been. "Mr. Bryan brings an enthusiasm, intelligence and broad range of interests and ideas to the table in his bid for office...(New Bedford Standard Times endorsement, 10/28/90).

❑ Joe Berkeley is back from Barcelona! Joe Berkeley, copywriter for McCann Erickson Ad Agency of Madison Ave., wrote the television commercials for Coca-Cola with Randy Travis and Natalie starring, and the ads were seen everywhere in the world!! Joe grew up on the South Shore and he has been writing for Coca-Cola for two years (of course he was a Cohasset resident for a while). His brother, Will, just returned from six months study in Argentina at the University of Buenos Aires, and will return to Brown University as a senior. Joe's parents, Jay and Mary Kakas, reside at Spinnaker Island.

❑ The Cohasset Recreation Department is holding their 1992 Summer Playground Cookout this Friday, Aug. 21, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Deer Hill School. The staff expects a record turnout, and they sure need parent volunteers. After the summer the kiddos have had, that's the least we can all do! Food donations would also be greatly appreciated, as the cookout will only cost the children $1 apiece. Call any member of the recreation commission or Ted Carroll if you can be of assistance. They would certainly appreciate anything you can do. And, it would help to show support for an outstanding program that so many of our youngsters have participated in.

❑ Allison Kornet, a Dartmouth College junior, has been cited for outstanding academic achievement during the summer term. Kornet, the daughter of Diana and John Kornet was cited for outstanding work in a course in music. Members of the Dartmouth faculty are invited to submit citation reports only when a student's work is sufficiently distinguished to merit special recognition. Such citations are rare; typically, only a few undergraduates receive citations each term.

Good work, Allison!

❑ We also must applaud Matthew Drinkwater this week. Matthew, son of Marifrances McIntosh of 609 Jerusalem Road, and Gary G. Drinkwater of Weymouth, received faculty honors for the spring semester at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn. Matthew, a psychology major, is entering his senior year at Trinity College.

❑ We understand that the class of 1972 held their reunion last weekend! What went on and who was there would be of great interest to lots of us. Please let me know what went on!

❑ Cohasset certainly left its mark at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst last Spring! Just take a look at our own who made the dean's list for the spring semester: Charlotte N. Begley of 455 Beechwood St., Anna C. Hurley of 17 Highland Ave., Peter I. Kasperowicz of 172 South Main St., Stephen V. Myers of 22 Atlantic Ave., and Amy L. Stoll of 169 Linden Drive.

Congrats to all of you, it's nice to see that your hard work paid off!

❑ I hate to mention it, because it means the summer is coming to a rapid end (summer?? what summer!!). Anyway, Thursday, Aug. 27, at 1 p.m., is when football physicals will be held at CHS; Friday, Aug. 28 is the date for soccer physicals, at 9 a.m. That's for the boys. Girls' soccer physicals will be held once fall is underway. We'll let you know the time and the date.

❑ What a great way to end a college career at the prestigious Bowdoin, but to make the dean's list for the final semester. Hats off to David R. Shultz for doing just that, and we sure want to wish him well in his new job, which starts shortly. An admirable guy who everyone loves, we are sure that he will do extremely well.

❑ Don't forget to support our latest, greatest local group, the Cohasset Education Foundation Group, and their fund-raising debut...that's on Aug. 29, with a Music Circus benefit starring Bill Cosby. Meeting the new directors will give you a chance to voice your opinions on our schools and you will get the chance to attend a festive party before the 9 p.m. show. To order tickets, call Supt. Steve Hart (383-6111) during the day, or Clark Chatterton (383-0560) at night, or send a check, payable to the Cohasset Education Foundation, to the Office of the Superintendent, 143 Pond Street, Cohasset. Tickets are $45 and $50, and it's guaranteed you'll enjoy the whole evening!

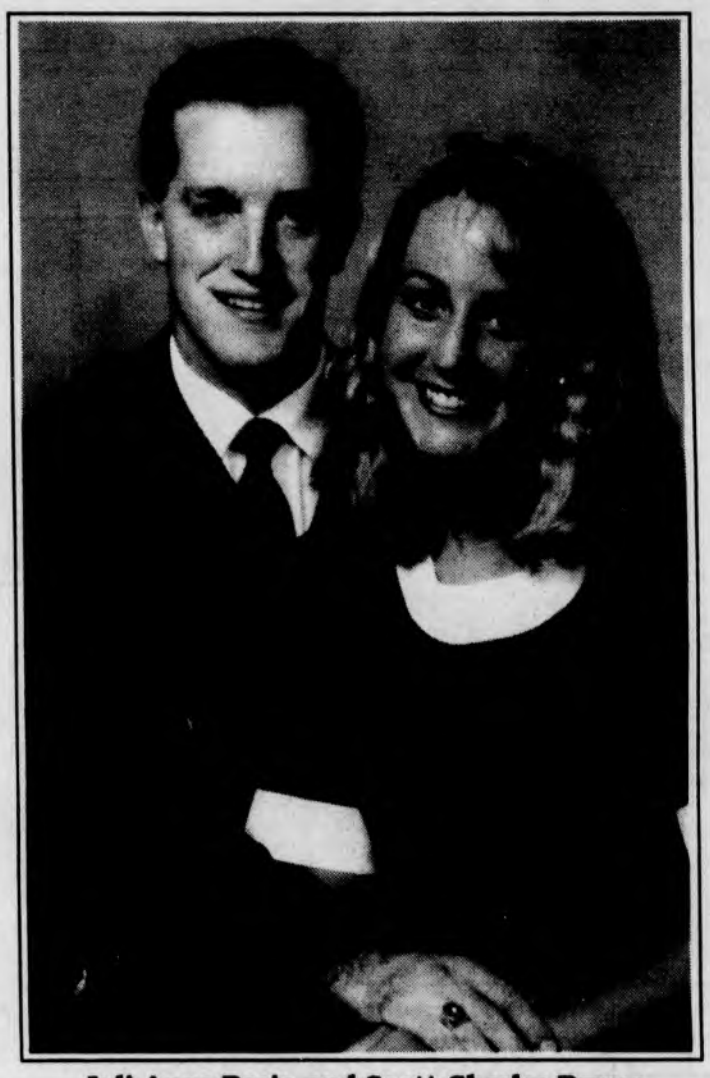
Mr. and Mrs. Elderfield Browne

Tolagian/Browne



Patricia Galligan-Morse of Cohasset and Ronald P. Tolagian of Richmond, Virginia, are pleased to announce the marriage of their daughter, Kathleen Mary Tolagian to Elderfield E. L. Browne of Antiqua, West Indies, son of Violet and Keithroy Browne of Antiqua, West Indies.

The sunrise ceremony took place May 10 in Bar Harbor, Maine, at The Inn at Canoe Point. A champagne breakfast followed.

Mr. and Mrs. Browne reside in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and are the owners of the Washington St. Eatery at Strawberry Banke in Portsmouth.

Mrs. Browne is a graduate of Notre Dame-Bishop Gibbons High School, Schenectady, New York, and Schenectady County Community College.

Mr. Browne attended primary school and West Indies Community College, and is in graduate studies at the University of New Hampshire.

Juli Anne Drain and Scott Charles Dwyer

Drain/Dwyer

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Drain of Ponca City, Oklahoma, announce the engagement of their daughter, Juli Anne Drain, to Scott Charles Dwyer.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo X. Dwyer, Jr. of Jerusalem Road.

Miss Drain is a graduate of Ponca City High School in Ponca City, Oklahoma, and received a bachelor of science degree in education from Oklahoma State University.

Mr. Dwyer is a graduate of the Noble and Greenough School in Dedham and the University of Oklahoma. He is employed as a sales representative at Reliability Ratings in Needham.

An August 22 wedding is planned.

Sartori/Conley

A May 15, 1993 wedding is being planned by Marsha L. Sartori and Richard M. Conley Jr. of Marshfield.

Their engagement is announced by her mother, Mrs. Carole E. Sartori of Marshfield. Mr. Conley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Conley of Cohasset.

Miss Sartori, daughter also of the late Neal J. Sartori, attended Salem State College and graduated from Quincy College. She is employed as a paralegal at the law offices of Peter L. Eleey in Quincy.

Mr. Conley is a graduate of Johnson and Wales College. He is employed as the head function chef by the John Carver Inn in Plymouth.

Carillonneur plays recital

George Matthew, Jr., Carillonneur of the First Presbyterian Church in Stamford, CT, will play the eighth in the series of nine summer recitals on the recently-renovated Cohasset Carillon in the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

The music begins at 6 p.m., and will last an hour, following which those interested may climb the 45 steps of the tower to view the unusual keyboard of the carillon.

For further information, call 383-1083 weekdays, or (508) 475-2599.

editorial

Take a bow

Our "Picture This" person of the week is Ted Carroll.

Ted is a familiar figure to hundreds of kids in town and their parents.

As director of the highly successful recreation department summer playground program, he's one of the cogs in the wheel that makes the program such a resounding success.

Despite an increase in fees, participation in the program is higher than ever.

Ted says that's a tribute to his staff — and we agree.

At $140 for seven weeks for the all-day playground, the program is still a bargain. But experience tells us that people won't pay no matter how great the bargain if there isn't value for money.

A quick stop by the organized chaos of a summer playground day in the rain and one is quickly impressed by the professionalism and caring attitude of the staff.

Ted's "pet peeve" is that the playground program and staff won't get the recognition they deserve.

So, this week we salute Ted and his staff of outstanding performers:

- Irene Volpe, who coordinates the three-and four-year old program.
- Pauline McDonald, a 1987 Cohasset High graduate currently attending Bridgewater State college where she is majoring in early childhood education. in her third year with the three-and-four year old program.
- Katie Ryan, a 1989 CHS grad who attends Notre Dame as a pre-med student, in her first full-time year with the three-and-four year old program.
- Chantalle Stone, a 1987 CHS grad, in her first year with the three-and-four year old program.
- Craig Carter, a 1990 CHS grad attending UMass Boston where he is majoring in physical education, in his first year with the three-and-four year old program.
- Ryan Cibelli, a 1992 CHS grad who will attend Ithaca College this fall, in his first year with the five-to-12 year old program.
- Brian Pompeo, 1991 graduate of Belmont Hill about to begin his sophomore year at Colby, is in his first year with the three-and-four year old program.
- Stephanie Endris, in her sixth year with the program, is a 1987 graduate of CHS and a 1991 graduate of Dickerson College where she received a degree in psychology.
- Liz O'Leary, in her fourth year with the program, is a 1988 graduate of CHS and 1992 graduate of Catholic University with a degree in early elementary education.
- Erin Monahagn, a 1989 CHS grad entering her senior year at Denison University where she is majoring in education and communication, is in her fourth year with the five-to-12 year old program.
- Torin Sweeney, a 1982 CHS grad and a 1991 UMass Boston graduate with a degree in physical education, is in her first year with the program.
- Rob Gavin, in his second year with the program, is a 1986 graduate of Randolph High School and 1991 graduate of UMass Boston with a degree in English. Rob is an assistant manager at the South Shore Sports Center.
- Chris Conley, a 1988 CHS grad who is attending Quincy College. This is Chris' second year with the five-to-12 year old program.
- Dave Daley, a 1992 Weymouth High grad who will attend Westfield State College this fall, is in his first year with the program.
- Sara Deveney, a 1991 CHS grad and pre-med student at Holy Cross, who is in her first year with the program.
- Playground substitutes helping out this summer are: Danny Pompeo, Jessica MacDonald, and Matt Pederson.

Congratulations on a job well done!

Festival coverage was terrific

letters

To the Editor:

On behalf of the South Shore Art Center, I want to thank you for your wonderful coverage of our 37th annual Art Festival and the Cohasset Harborfest. Our three-day event was a wonderful success, with well over 10,000 people attending!

I can't say enough about the value of receiving such excellent publicity. I know that your paper was one reason why our attendance was so great.

Your follow-up article and colorful pictures in the July 2 issue were terrific. I hope that you continue to find the South Shore Art Center a valuable source of interesting stories.

Again , thank you for all your support.

chamber chatter

by Paula Knowles

This summer, like so many others, conversations have often turned to what "projects" friends and neighbors are planning for the good weather ("the WHAT?????" she says as she tries to scrape the mildew off the walls.) Painting the house, adding to the garage, fixing the porch, etc. And those conversations invariably end with talk about what permits each project requires, and horror stories about going before town boards, or who knows someone who did everything themselves without getting any permits (these tales usually contain bits about growing 12-foot hedges around the area, working only after 3 a.m. or on weekends, and never letting your neighbors actually see you doing any work). And there is always a lot of "them against us" feeling about these conversations.

When did things get so out of control, I always wonder. When did a process that was really started to help the property owner, as much as protect the town and its people, become such an adversarial arrangement? When did permitting agencies – in all towns and cities – begin to believe that they had the right to control completely every property owner's rights and lives? The Democratic presidential nominee (who shall remain nameless, as politics really isn't the issue here) has spoken again and again these last weeks or months of the problem of government forgetting what it is like to be governed, and perhaps this is indeed the problem. But it is not, as some have maintained, an inevitable and incurable disease.

To whit: The Cohasset Board of Health and the Cushing Plaza Sewage Saga. I am not going to rehash the problem from the beginning. Suffice it to say that if the health board had really wanted to play power games and flex their municipal muscles, they could probably have shut the whole plaza down time and again. Instead, they have used an approach that blends legal action, negotiation and plain old common sense to keep the plaza open, and yet still enforce the rules and codes they are sworn to uphold. Last week, chairman Bill Baird and the board were seen working overtime to help the property owner come up with an acceptable site for a private treatment plant to solve the problem. They are also trying to address the concerns of abutters and do what is the best for the town.

It is easy for all of us armchair quarterbacks to say, "Well, isn't that what we elected them for?" But I wonder how many of us would have had the fortitude and equanimity to not only keep our cool through the years of problems, but also to effectively repel the very human compulsion to let power games overwhelm common sense.

We have obviously elected some real straight shooters. Score one for our side!

Don't forget to call Kimball's at 383-6650 or the Chamber at 383-1010 to make reservations for the breakfast Aug 26. Wayne Ayers, our guest speaker, is terrific, and his message is one we all need to hear as we go cautiously into the 90s. Aug. 26, 7:45 a.m. $5/pp for members and guests, $10/pp for non-members. Call now for reservations.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on one roll call and local representatives' votes on two roll calls from legislative sessions dealing with Governor Weld's budget vetoes. There were no roll calls in the House and Senate last week.

EMERGENCY AID (H 5800) — House 02-65 (Senate has not yet acted) sustained Governor Weld's veto of $4 million for Emergency Aid to the Elderly, Disabled and Children. Weld reduced the account from $108.7 million to $104.7 million and eliminated language which loosens strict disability review criteria instituted last year. Override supporters said the $4 million in funding will help hundreds of people and argued the current review process is unfair and has caused many disabled people to be arbitrarily disqualified from the program. Override opponents said the $4 million cut is necessary to help balance the budget and argued the program is too expensive and so loosely worded that it borders on bringing back the old General Relief program which the legislature fought so hard to successfully reform last year. (A "Yea" vote is for the $4 million. A "Nay" vote is against the $4 million).		N
DRUG PROGRAM (H 5800) — House 112-34 (Senate has not yet acted) overrode Governor Weld's veto of $500,000 earmarked for drug free ambulatory recovery counseling and case management treatment. Weld reduced the money earmarked for this purpose from $550,000 to $50,000. Override supporters said this money helps substance abusers and is especially important to Hispanic groups. Override opponents said the state cannot afford the $500,000 and argued the budget must be balanced. (A "Yea" vote is for the $500,000. A "Nay" vote is against the $500,000).		N
CONTINUE SESSION — Senate 20-15, refused to immediately consider a motion to bring to the Senate floor an order requiring the Senate to continue to meet in formal session and postpone any summer recess until the legislature has completed action on pending education and court reform proposals. Supporters said it is outrageous for the legislature to take several weeks off before acting on these crucial matters. Opponents said the legislature is still working on these matters and will act on them after the summer recess. (A "Yea" vote is for immediate consideration. A "nay" vote is against immediate consideration).	Y

New school aid spending plan unveiled . . .

Hart proposes to spend $50,000 on the development and implementation of a "technological plan" for the entire school system.

It is the single largest expenditure of the proposal.

Hart said $7,000 of the $50,000 will probably be paid to a consultant to determine what are the best, and most viable long-term investments the school can make to improve its technological edge.

"It will be a plan to guide the schools, to make the most beneficial use of technology for students, and to make sure the right purchases are made so the equipment won't become obsolete immediately," Hart explained.

The plan will also ensure that the technology compliments curriculum, Hart said.

"It is easy to get caught up with technology for technology's sake," he noted.

The $43,000 remainder will be used to purchase the equipment and provide training.

"Computers, software, networking (systems), CD Rom, things like that will be purchased," he said.

Another $30,000 is earmarked for the purchase of computers to be used exclusively in the math laboratory at the junior high and high schools.

Hart said a recent analysis of the lab's effectiveness determined that there was an insufficient number of computers.

Approximately $10,000 of the state education money will go toward improving the tools and methods of evaluating teachers.

School committee chairman Barbara Bliss said the current evaluation system yields "vanilla results."

She said the schools need a method and instrument which will reflect more specific, and varied, results.

With the $7,800 appropriated for science equipment, the high school will receive new microscopes and the elementary grades will receive science supplies.

Another Spanish class will be added to those offered at the high school as a result of the state education money.

Hart said $7,000 will go toward increasing the current spanish teacher position from a "40 percent" part-time job to a "60 percent" job, the difference being addition of another spanish class to the teacher's schedule.

Other proposed uses for the state education money will be to purchase a copy machine for Deerhill School, which Hart said would cost about $5,000.

The writing laboratory, which is slated to be eliminated next year because of lack of funding, will be reinstated.

Hart said the cost to maintain the lab for next year is $3,000.

School committee member Ralph Kidder noted that none of the state education money will be spent on hiring additional teachers.

Hart said the schools have a good student-teacher ratio, with some slight exceptions at the high school level.

The average student-teacher ratio at the elementary level is about 22 to 1, Hart said.

Moreover, he explained, the schools do not know whether the state education money will be ongoing.

If funds dry up next year, and teachers were hired this year, the unemployment costs could cripple the school budget.

"In Cohasset we carry the teachers' unemployment costs in the budget. And if they are not there next year, we start the year with $50,000 to $60,000 in unemployment costs if we had hired four teachers," Hart explained.

The Department of Education is expected to approve the town's spending proposal, he said.

None of the state education money will be used to extend the school year, as had been proposed by Kidder at an earlier meeting.

Kidder proposed that the school year be extended to compensate for teacher in-service days. Currently, there are 12 "half day" teacher in-service days.

Kidder's plan would eliminate the 12 half days be adding six days to the school calendar. Teachers and administrators would decide when the six "full-day" in-service days would occur.

Kidder said the committee would investigate the viability of his proposal this year.

'Bimbo eruption' spices up Nor./Ply. senate race . . .

The flap started when Pincov, who lives in Hingham, wrote a letter to the Globe criticizing the Women's Impact Network (WIN) for its endorsement of Langmaid over fellow Democrats McDonald and Tim White.

She added that "our current senator, Robert Hedlund, reflects the real threat that exists to the advancement of women's issues: freedom to choose, child care, health care, etc."

After reading the letter, Hedlund said, "I dug out the 1991 and 1992 roll calls in the Senate and looked for those that related to freedom of choice, child care and health care. There were three significant ones.

"I voted for the stalking bill, a Republican bill that permitted court officers to issue protective orders in the absence of a judge and another Republican bill to correct a shortfall of funds for the Office for Children."

Hedlund said the Globe quote that he did not know what a women's issue is was taken out of context.

"I told the reporter that I did not look at issues along gender lines but on the merits of the legislation," he said. "I don't see the votes I have to take on gender lines."

Hedlund called McDonald "a leftist candidate who wants to divide people by putting them in categories."

A Hedlund campaign worker also fired back at Pincov, faxing the Globe a note that Pincov wrote to Hedlund in January, thanking him for his help in restoring funds for a scholarship she was getting to attend Brown University.

She also thanked him for the Bruins' tickets he got for her and her boy friend, who is a State House aide to Hedlund.

The Globe called Hedlund to check the story and, said the Globe, the senator "went ballistic."

"If some bimbo is going to write bull . . . then I feel I have the right to respond," the newspaper quoted him as saying.

Pincov denied being a "bimbo," a word that has yet to appear in Webster's Dictionary but is thought to be a derogatory term for "woman."

Apparently, it derives from the Italian, "bambino," or baby and crept into English as a synonym for "babe," as in "Hey babe!"

Pincov said she was "very happy" with the story as it appeared in the Globe.

"Bob's comment reflects how he deals with women," she said. "He is insensitive to women's issues.

"I have nothing against Bob personally. I've only spoken to him once. But I don't like him as a government official.

"I don't agree when he points to himself as a rebel in the Senate. He has voted with Governor Weld most frequently as a senator."

Pincov said the funding that was restored to her scholarship was contained in a bill that also benefitted 25 other students in Massachusetts, two of them from Hedlund's district.

The funding for the Christian Herter Scholarships for students attending out of state schools had been cut by the Weld administration a week before the opening of schools last summer.

Hedlund was instrumental in getting the funds restored in a supplemental budget so that those students entering their final years in school could finish their undergraduate work and graduate.

"I just wrote a thank you note for the work he and his staff did in having our scholarships restored," Pincov said.

The Bruins tickets, she said, were given to Hedlund's aide, her boy friend.

Economist to speak

Wayne Ayers, Chief Economist for the First National Bank of Boston, and editor of their Economic Review, is the principal speaker at the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's breakfast meeting Aug. 26.

Mr. Ayers, formerly an economist for the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve system and an adjunct professor of economics at B.U.'s Graduate School of Management, is a member of the economic advisory committees of Associated Industries of Massachusetts and the American Bankers Association.

The meeting is at Kimball's Aug. 26, at 7:45 a.m.

Cost for members and their guests is $5 per person; and $10 per person for non-members.

For reservations please call the Chamber at 383-1010, or Kimball's at 383-6650.

Tickets may be purchased in advance from any chamber board member.

Committee wants kids safe at home . . .

Mary Mack, also on the committee, added that getting people involved was a step in the right direction. But along with funding, she indicated, "we are more anxious to have them participate." Other members agreed and an informal decision to get materials out sooner this year was made. Waal said that there was an eighth grade party in late 1991 that involved alcohol and it would be a good move to mail Safe Homes Directories before the holidays begin. Statistics released last month to the school committee back up Waal's claim that there is a need for involvement.

According to that report, 84% of seventh and eighth graders say that it is "very easy" to get alcohol in the household. Other figures point out that in Cohasset: 40% of juniors and seniors have passed out from alcohol use and 26% of freshmen and sophomores have experienced alcohol-induced "black-outs."

At one point the focus of the committee was brought into question. A member wondered if senior citizens were being neglected because of the strong message being prepared, and targeted towards adolescents. Mack said that perhaps a "blanket statement that the Drug and Alcohol Committee is for everybody," would help bridge this perceived gap. Sandra Kent agreed, but added that many seniors' issues, such as prescription drug use with alcohol, are covered in AARP and other similar publications.

A bill, introduced by Rep. Charles W. Mann (R-Hanson), requiring more stringent advertising guidelines for alcoholic beverages was introduced to the committee. The bill, already endorsed by the Duxbury selectmen, would prohibit any alcohol promotion targeted towards children or any deceitful promotions. It would also require the same warning statements in print and broadcast advertisements that currently appear on containers.

The committee had some doubts about becoming political in its actions but Keith Knowles said that this bill was "certainly our concern." A decision was made to explore the bill further and bring it to the next meeting.

The committee also discussed: an all-night party for the prom or graduation; finding a place to distribute Safe Homes and other drug and alcohol awareness literature; tentative Drug-Free/Alcohol-Free Weekend dates; and an upcoming Drug and Alcohol Awareness Fair at the Hanover Mall. The committee decided to let each of these issues rest until their next meeting at town hall, Wednesday, September 17 at 7:30 p.m.

Square applies for liquor license

Jonathan Livingston Seagull Square could have a convenience store soon but it won't be Roberts' Food Mart.

In a telephone interview Tuesday, Thomas J. Cummings, an attorney and an owner of shopping center, said owners broke the lease with food-mart owner William Roberts August 13 in Quincy District Court.

An April fire of suspicious origin caused an estimated $150,000 damage to Roberts Food Mart and neighboring businesses. No one was injured in the fire.

After tests on samples taken from the convenience store showed traces of gasoline, Cohasset police sought an indictment against Roberts.

Police Sgt. Brian Noonan said the department should receive word next week from the district attorney's office about the status of the case.

In a letter to selectmen Cummings, a beneficiary of Jonathan Livingston Realty Trust which owns the shopping center, formerly applied for a package store liquor license to sell beer and wine.

Cummings said plans are to open a convenience store at the former Roberts Food Mart site.

Cummings said the lack of a convenience store, which was a big draw, is a hardship to other tenants at the shopping center.

In a statement accompanying Cummings' application for a liquor license, he said "the store has become a very popular spot for local residents to gather for morning coffee and doughnuts, lottery tickets, milk, break, newspapers, and other convenience items."

Cummings said there is a "long demonstrated need for a package store selling beer and wine at that location. Roberts has effectively abandoned his license at that location by failing to use it, or to express any intention to use it in the near future."

Selectmen were not sure how to proceed Monday because two licenses cannot be issued to one location.

The board received two letters dated May 22 and June 24, one from Roberts and one from Roberts' attorney Michael Hayes stating Roberts intention to re-open the store.

Selectmen said Monday they didn't have confirmation that Roberts was no longer a tenant at the site.

In a telephone interview, Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson said selectmen must hold a hearing before revoking or terminating a liquor license. The board must also hold a public hearing before granting a new license.

No promise for Doane St. payment

Despite recent reports to the contrary, state payment for Doane Street bridge repairs may still up in the air, according to State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

But if Murray has anything to say about it, the state will ante up soon.

"I'll go right to the governor if I have to," Murray said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

"Someone in A & F (administration and finance) said the state may have reached its cap in spending money," she said. "I wish the governor wasn't in Houston (at the Republican convention)."

Murray, who hopes to have a definitive answer by Monday, said she is stressing to state officials that repairs to the bridge are a "matter of life and death."

Abutters have lobbied for a decade to get repairs made to the bridge, which spans the Aaron River.

Voters at special town meeting in June authorized the town to borrow up to $175,000 for the project with a guarantee of state reimbursement, which the town has yet to receive.

Selectmen Monday decided to put the project out to bid — a process which takes weeks — with an escape clause tying repairs to state reimbursement. Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said culverts are out of stock and would take up to six weeks to order.

Tuesday the town conservation commission extended the construction window March 15 for bridge repairs.

Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield put a metal plate anchored with blacktop cold patch on the bridge as a temporary measure to cover a new hole.

Litchfield said he suggested to selectmen that the highway department put new steel plates across the entire bridge surface. The cost of the plates would be $1,638.

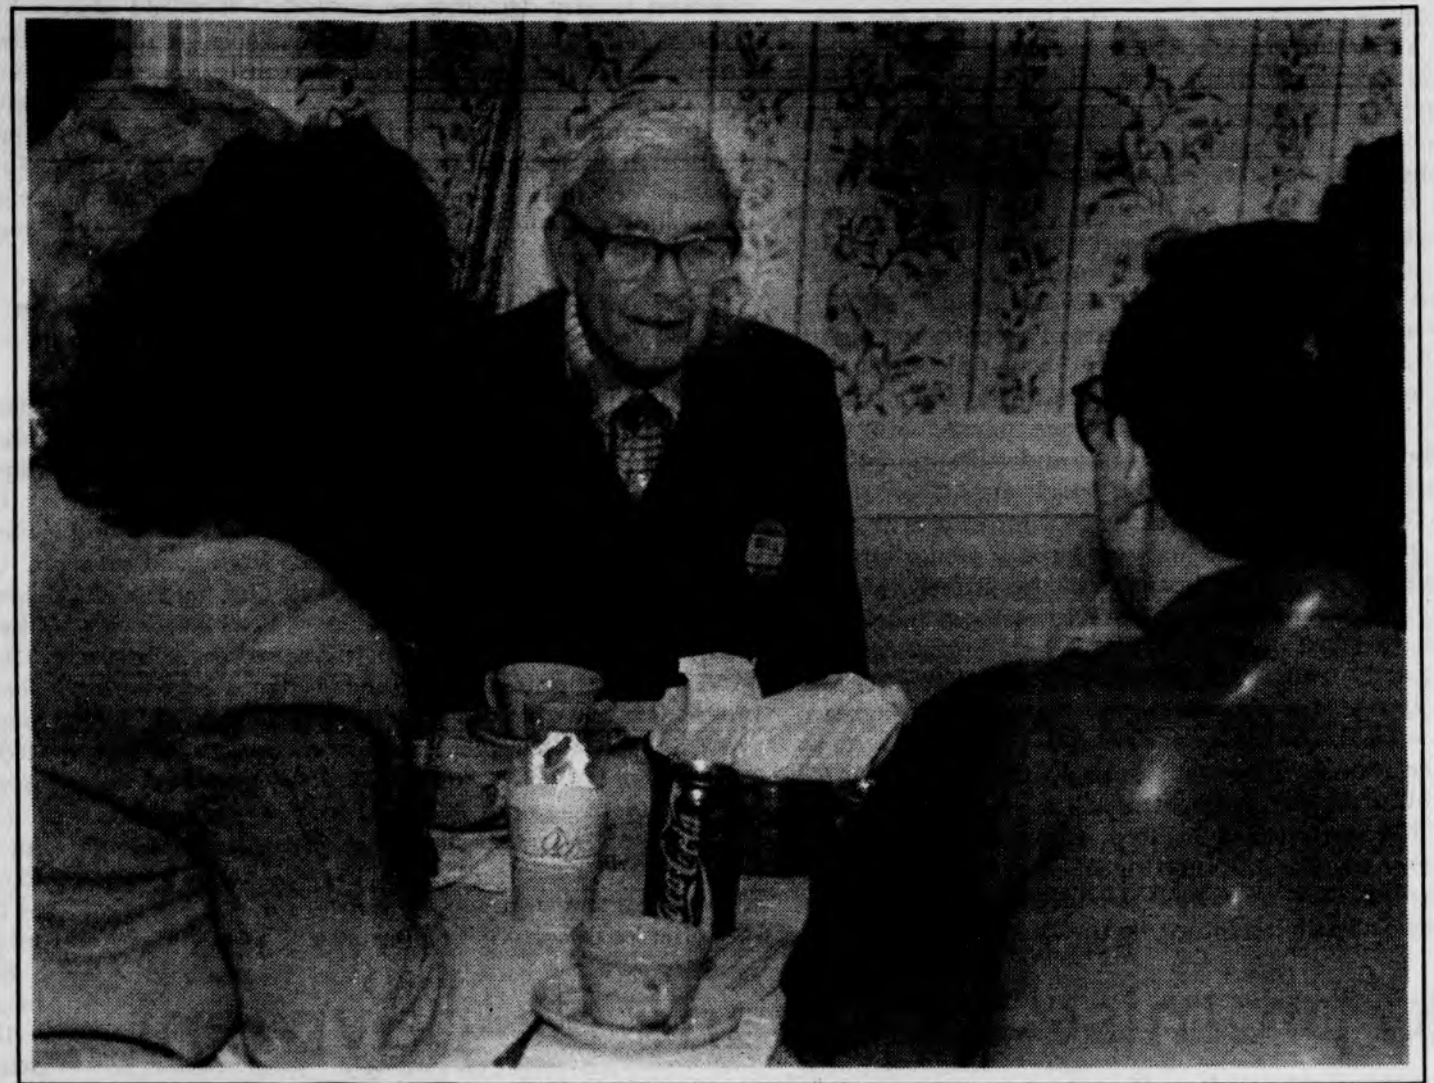
MEDEX UPDATE

By Kathy Glenzel, SHINE Coordinator

Congress passed legislation in 1990 that will effect your Medigap insurance. This is insurance designed to cover the deductibles and co-insurance associated with Medicare.

Effective Aug. 1, all health insurers that sell Medigap insurance in Massachusetts will be required to offer new benefits.



The new benefits include the following: coverage for the 20 percent coinsurance for all Medicare covered services under Part B. This includes the 20 percent coinsurance for Medicare covered office visits, outpatient services, ambulance, coverage for the first three pints of blood and the purchase/rental of durable medical equipment.

As a result of these changes, benefits will improve significantly, but premiums will also increase. Blue Cross and Blue Shields' Medex premiums will increase August 1st.

While these new benefits will improve coverage, Medigap insurance remains unaffordable for more and more elders. A Medigap Working Group (headed by the Division of Insurance) is working to identify and subsidy source that would assist low income elders with the purchase of Medigap insurance.

Legislation has also been filed to establish a subsidy program (Medigap Relief bill, House 5275). For those unable to afford Medigap insurance, they may qualify for assistance through the Qualified Medicare Beneficiary Program (QMB). The QMB Program will cover all the deductible and co-insurances associated with Medicare and will cover the monthly Part B premium (31.80-1992).

It will also cover the Part A monthly premium for those who do not qualify for Medicare. This program has income and asset limitations. For more information on the QMB Program and other health benefits information, please contact the SHINE Coordinator, Kathy Glenzel at 383-9116.

Cohasset senior citizen, Bill Ripley, who is 90-years-young, holds everyone's attention at his dinner table during the Cohasset Rotary's weekly meeting at the Bates House. Monday was the Rotary's final meeting at the Bates House, which will be transformed into two condominium units of affordable housing by Habitat for Humanity. The Rotary plans to hold its meetings at the Minot's Ledge Lightkeepers residence next spring.

SHINE answers insurance questions

The Cohasset Senior Center offers a program to assist elders with questions about their health insurance. SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders) is a program that is funded by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs.

The SHINE program is administered out of the Cohasset Senior Center and consists of a network of trained volunteers available at local Councils on Aging. The volunteers have undergone an extensive training program to learn about Medicare, Medigap insurance, Medicaid, long term care insurance and other health benefits.

The area of health insurance can be complex and is constantly changing. SHINE is designed to help people understand these changes, provide assistance when needed, and often times save an individual valuable time and money.

The communities served by the Cohasset Consortium include: Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Duxbury, Norwell, Hull, Hingham, Weymouth, Braintree, Quincy and Milton.

The SHINE program has been in existence since 1985 and has recently participated in a model project in the development of health benefit counseling programs nationwide.

A training may be held on the South Shore in the fall. If you are looking for an opportunity to help people, provide a valuable service and to learn a great deal, consider becoming a SHINE counselor.

If you need assistance with your health insurance matters or might be interested in volunteering, please contact Kathy Glenzel, SHINE Coordinator at the Cohasset Senior Center. The telephone number is 383-9116.

Senior pageant contestants sought

Len Kaplan, President of the Ms. Senior Sweetheart of America Pageants, recently announced plans for the fourth statewide Massachusetts Pageant. The Pageant will be held Nov. 1 in the Nagel Auditorium of B.M.C. Durfee High School in Fall River, Massachusetts.

Contestants must be 59 years of age or older and a resident of Massachusetts.

Ladies with a zest for life and with an outgoing personality make great contestants.

The winner is presented with flowers, a trophy and is crowned with a tiara. She also wins a trip for two plus the title of Ms. Senior Sweetheart of Massachusetts 1992-93.

Proceeds from the show will go to the Massachusetts Lions Eye Research Center.

Anyone interested and desiring more information can contact Jean Moffett, Ms. Senior Sweetheart of Greater Fall River 1987-88 and now Assistant to the President at 1-508-672-7746 or Len Kaplan, President at 1-508-675-0249.

Understanding talent is key to Derby summer program

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Imagine being a teacher whose principal complaint is that the children in your charge are anxious for more information than classroom time allows.

Imagine being a teacher at the summer arts program at Derby Academy.

Director of the program Thalia McMillion said the common teaching complaint of wasting class time to discipline students is practically non-existent at the summer arts program.

"Really the biggest problem is that we can't teach them fast enough. They are hungry for more," McMillion gushed.

"They are really motivated in the arts."

Structure is enforced at the summer arts program, which began four years ago with 80 students and has grown to its present class size of 131.

Talent is not a criteria for enrollment, according to McMillion, who added, however, that she expects to see several former and current students attain fame in artistic areas they have developed and exhibited at the program.

"Some are extremely gifted and talented, but regardless, all love what they are doing," she explained.

Eleven-year-old Kurt Kuechler of Foley Court attests to that.

"I really like 'newspaper.' I write about different subjects and draw cartoons," he said.

"I like this camp a lot."

Students at the program not only write for the paper, they actually produce one — daily.

They also hock the paper, The Weathervane, at different corners of the Derby campus every afternoon.

"They are encouraged to pursue what they do well. If they can't find it in one thing, they can find it in another," McMillion offered.

While a light-hearted approach prevails, McMillion said students conform to a daily schedule of six 50-minute classes.

The subject selection is overwhelming.

During the first period ten different classes are taught: drawing and painting, Yeah Clay!, showtune workshop, gymnastics, animation, creative writing, cooking, soccer, clowning and creative illustration.

Experiments in theater, newspaper, photography, improvisation, rock band and African drumming and percussion are just a sampling of the other classes offered at the summer arts program.

The background of the students is as varied as the classes, McMillion said.

"There is a blend of backgrounds. Eighteen communities are represented here — it ups the artistic quality," she said.

Those who seem least cognizant of the background differences are the students themselves.

While the student population is visibly varied by race, financial status and talent, the students who attended a recent mid-day performance festival displayed an unusually mature level of kindness and enthusiasm for each other's work.

Youths between the ages of eight and 14 are eligible for the program.

McMillion said the program is designed to instill a sense of unity among the students, and discourage them from being judgmental.

Derby campers, displaying their decorated shields are: Brie Cosman, Kate Wilkes, Sbengheuh Zimbabwe, Michelle Josh, Michael Knochin, My Nguyen, Sara Walcott, and Joelle Bird.

"That is an important part of the hiring process, because that type of attitude comes from the staff," she said.

McMillion conducts the interviews and said she looks for people who are not only multi-talented and have experience, but project exuberance and unqualified support for their protegees.

And there are plenty of role models. This year's class of 131 had a teacher-student ratio of four to one.

McMillion said it is important that the teachers don't just teach — during the non-summer months they actually do what they teach.

Like actress Lanie Zira, who instructs students in the performing arts. She is also a working actress in New York City, having made numerous commercials and belonging to an improvisational theater there.

Or the newspaper teacher who is a reporter during the winter months.

Because the teachers do more than teach for a living, McMillion said they don't suffer from teacher-burnout and provide the students with a fresh perspective.

Tuition for the five-week program runs approximately $1,000, and McMillion said 1/4 of the students receive financial assistance.

Cohasset swimmers win league trophy

The Cohasset Swimming and Diving Team finished its season by winning the South Shore League Trophy. The Championship meet at Hanover featured the teams from Hanover, Marshfield, Duxbury Aqua-Dux, Duxbury Harbor Yacht Club, Scituate K of C, Scituate Yacht Club and Cohasset. There were three heat swims for each event, with two swimmers representing each club in each event. To be chosen to represent a team in the championships is an honor and all the swimmers listed below are to be congratulated.

In diving, Dawn Meehan was first in 16 and under diving. Cere Osterborg was seventh in 12 and under diving, due to a missed dive, an unfortunate ending to a successful season for Cere.

In swimming events the results were as follows:

50 YARD FREESTYLE

Cosby tickets available

The Cohasset Education Foundation task force members and new directors welcome supporters at a pre-show party before Bill Cosby's performance at the South Shore Music Circus August 29. Tickets for the 9 p.m. show are available by calling (day) Supt. Stephen Hart's office, 383-6111 or (evening) Clark Chatterton, 383-0560.

The Cohasset Education Foundation is designed to augment presently existing organizations like the P.S.O., Cohasset school administrators and faculty and works closely with its members to identify needs and goals, so as not to be duplicating efforts.

This organization formed to offer professional businesses and organizations outside of the Cohasset community a conduit to channel support for larger capital projects within the Cohasset Public School System. The foundation also focuses on presently underutilized funding sources such as grant writing, private bequests, investors and corporate donations.

For health information

The Social Service League of Cohasset is a private, non-profit community agency servicing the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate. The Social Service League updated its public education resource library. New publications include: When a Family Member Has Cancer, When Cancer Reoccurs, Women and Hypertension, and many other brochures dealing with current health problems.

All resources are free and can be obtained during walk-in clinic hours 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. and 12:30 to 3 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday, at 16 Highland Avenue (rear St. Stephen's Church). For more information, call 383-0771, or 383-0821.

Mammography screening set

The Cohasset Social Service League sponsors a Mobile Mammography Service. This fully-equipped office van makes it easier for women to have mammograms. Most women who have not had one, give inconvenience and cost as the reasons. This service is more convenient, less expensive and is accredited by the American College of Radiology.

The best means of controlling breast cancer is through early detection.

Mammography screening is Saturday, Sept. 12, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The van will be near Town Hall, appointments needed.

WHO: American Cancer Society guidelines: 35 to 39 years of age – one baseline mammogram; 40 to 49 years of age – a mammogram every 1 to 2 years; over 50 years of age – a mammogram every year; under 35, a doctor's order required

HOW: Mobile Diagnostics, Inc. of Wellesley provides a fully-equipped coach which is comfortable, private and staffed by registered, female technologists. The equipment is a state-of-the-art low dose mammography unit. The x-rays are read by board-certified radiologists, and the results will be sent to you and your physician. MDI is accredited by the American College of Radiology.

COST: Recent Massachusetts legislation mandates that, with a few exceptions, insurance companies must provide coverage for mammograms. The average area cost for mammography is $120 to $200. The total cost with Mobile Diagnostics is $102 and they bill your insurance company for this amount. If you have no insurance or your insurance does not cover this test, you can take advantage of the $80 cash price, payable on the day of the exam only: by cash, check, MasterCard or Visa.

Some HMOs may require you to have mammography at their own facility and all HMOs require written permission or referral forms. Beginning January, 1991, Medicare covers the cost of a mammogram every other year after you have met any deductibles.

It is the woman's responsibility to find out what her coverage is. If they bill your insurance company and they do not pay, then your bill will be $102.

APPOINTMENTS: Call 383-0771 for more information and appointments.

Dog obedience classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department accepts telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate dog training classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Tuesday evenings, on Cohasset Town Common beginning Tuesday, Aug. 25.

Beginner classes are from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and a second beginner class is from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesday evenings.

The fee for the eight-week program will be $40. Checks made payable to the Town of Cohasset, may be brought to the first class. Participating dogs should be a minimum of three months old.

The purpose of the beginner classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc.

Hints on ownership and responsibility will also be included. The training will include those exercises beneficial to pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience.

The Intermediate-Advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department Beginner Class.

For the above classes, owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars will be allowed. It is also strongly suggested that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for this session.

For all classes: the fee is $40 per dog for the eight-week, one-hour-per-week program.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size, non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis.

SHARE bulletin

SHARE's August food distribution day will take place this Saturday at the Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., from 9 to 10 a.m.

Registration for the September SHARE program is during the same hours on Saturday. An additional registration session is Wednesday, Sept. 9, 10 a.m. to noon and Thursday, Sept. 10, from 7 to 8 p.m. at the Senior Center, 3 North Main Street.; distribution will be Sept. 26 at the Town Hall.

SHARE is a community-based food distribution program for families or individuals paying $13 and donating two hours of community service for a package of fresh and frozen food worth about $30. Cash or food stamps are accepted as payment when registering.

For more information on SHARE, please call John Kierce at 383-0578, or the Council on Aging, 383-9112.

Cub Scout swim party

All Pack 38 Cubs (Tigers, too!) are invited to the Cub Scout Pack 38 Annual Summer Swim Party tonight (Thursday, Aug. 20), from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Swim Center. Cubs participating in all summer pack activities are eligible for the summer activity award. Currently registered Cub Scouts may bring a friend who would like to join Pack 38.

Sign up to read

It's not too late for Cohasset children entering grades 1 to 8 to join the summer reading club at Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The theme of this year's program is "Go for it! Read!" Participants are each represented by a personalized depiction of a sneaker, to which are attached bronze, silver, and gold medals according to the number of books each child has read. The sneakers are on display in the library.

So far, 94 children have handed in reading cards and decorated their sneakers. Twenty-six children have reached their reading goal and have been awarded a free paperback book of their choice. The program runs through Aug. 24, and all participants are invited to a party at the conclusion of the summer. Children may join the program at any time during the remainder of the summer.

Those children who have earned their free book so far are: Courtney Anton, Scotty Faber, Jenna Fegreus, Caitlin Flint, Emma Gardner, Grace Gardner, Kate Grimm, Kate Henderson, Martha Henderson, Kaitlin Jackson, Ryan Johnson, Claire Kreycik, Philip Kreycik, Julia Lovallo, Brie McKenney, Maura McKenney, Sarah Pease, Nicole Plante, Cristina Sadler, Mike Sadler, Jeff Schneider, Ben Smoot, Andrew Sullivan, Corey Sullivan, Andrew Varallo, and Leigh-Anne Walsh.

Rolling Shutters

It's HURRICANE Season again

A more active hurricane cycle is likely this decade . . . 66We think that within the next few years, this year, next year, we're going to come back into that cycle.99

Bob Sheets, Chief of the National Hurricane Center, quoted in the Cape Cod Times

Protect your home against hurricanes, intruders, cold & even summer heat

Storm Protection

"When last year's storms hit our beach, we were certainly glad we had them." — L. R., East Sandwich

Rolling shutters are a unique exterior window treatment that can effectively protect your windows and doors against high winds and blowing sand and debris. We will help you choose the proper rolling shutters for all seasons, secure from hurricanes with windspeeds up to 130 miles per hour.

Security

"Excellent security and storm protection, and aesthetically agreeable." — B. B., Martha's Vineyard

Rolling shutters are strong, impenetrable, and designed to resist corrosion. You can rest assured that with our PVC or aluminum foam-filled curtain walls, your home is secure, even if you're asleep or away.

Versatility

Rolling shutters are not just for storm protection and security. Use them for daily sun control, energy conservation, privacy and noise elimination.

Convenience

"No more boarding up windows! Now weekend visits to our beach home are a pleasure." — A. A., Nantucket

Rolling shutters are easily operated from inside the house, by manual crank or weatherproof electric motors.

Town to conduct hazardous waste day

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Thanks to the taxpayers, Cohasset residents will have a household hazardous waste collection day for the first time in two years.

Voters approved a $15,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override in May to pay for the event.

The collection day is planned from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., Sept. 12, at Cohasset High School.

Town Health Agent Dr. Joseph R. Godzik said residents should come early.

"It runs until 2 p.m. or until the money runs out (whichever comes first)," he said.

Godzik explained the $15,000 will "all go to disposal." Any auxiliary costs, such as the rental of a dumpster for empty cans, will come out of the health department budget.

The health department contracts with a vendor for the hazardous waste collection day. The vendor consolidates the waste in drums each with a fixed price — that's how the town knows if the money is running out, Godzik said.

Paints are consolidated into a drum; pesticides in another drum; acids in another. Each drum might cost $300 for example, he said.

Residents should not bring empty cans to the collection.

"If the paint is solid then the solvents are gone and the only thing left is pigment," Godzik explained.

He said the solvents are the hazardous part.

Godzik said the collection day is for Cohasset residents

Busy storm season lies ahead

If a hurricane doesn't get you, a northeaster very well might, federal officials told about 50 coastal residents at last week's hurricane workshop.

The only way to protect yourself is to be prepared, they said.

The workshop at Furnace Brook School in Marshfield was the third of three workshops to assist the general public in preparing for hurricanes.

"You have two things to worry about living here," weatherman Bob Case said. He is in charge of the weather service forecast office in Boston and, for the past eight years has been a hurricane specialist for the National Hurricane Center.

"You've got to respect them both (hurricanes and northeasters) and listen to us," Case said.

Although people are more likely to take precautions for a hurricane, little attention is paid to northeasters and coastal flood warnings, he said.

Hurricanes are more glamorous than northeasters so are more likely to receive media coverage, Case said. Their wind speeds, which can reach 155 miles an hour and the names they are given help to draw more attention to them, he said.

"Only a hurricane's got a name, but a northeaster will Winter weather permitting, consolidation of the South Shore Vocational Technical High School should be completed by September, 1993.

Curtis Estate hearing

The Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals will hear and act upon an application for a variance and an appeal of the building inspector's decision to deny a building permit for a retaining wall in excess of five feet at 15 Black Rock Road. The public hearing is at 8 p.m., Sept 3.

The retaining wall is needed to construct a septic system at 15 Black Rock Road, which is part of the old Curtis Estate.

Democrats to debate

Wigmore Pierson, host of the cable-TV talk show "Pierson to Person", is moderating a debate among the democratic contenders for the Norfolk/Plymouth County senate seat held by Republican Robert Hedlund.

The two-hour debate will be shown live from 8 to 10 p.m., Sunday August 30 on Channel 53.

Candidates Chartis Langmaid of Cohasset, Brian McDonald of Weymouth, and Tim White of Hingham are vying for the democratic nomination to be decided in the state primary Sept. 15.

Each candidate will be allowed to make two-minute opening and closing statements.

"A wrinkle in this debate is that the candidates will sit around a table and will be able to ask two questions of each opponent," Pierson said.

The winner of the Democratic primary will be invited to debate incumbent state Senator Hedlund on "Pierson to Person" in October.

Accountant applicants soar

Cohasset Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said the selectmen's office has received 87 applications to fill the town accountant's position.

Doyon will narrow the field down to several finalists for selectmen to interview.

This will be the second go-round in recent months for selectmen.

In June, the board could not agree to hire any of the finalists interviewed because the applicants lacked municipal experience, they said. At that time 86 people applied and the board interviewed four.

Doyon said the overall quality of the applicants seemed better this time.

The salary for the position has been advertised as "negotiable."

The previous town accountant, who left to accept a position in Scituate, was paid an annual salary of $35,400.

As an interim measure, the board hired Donald Jensen, a Certified Public Accountant, as temporary town accountant at the rate of $35 an hour to close out the books for fiscal year 1992.

Absentee ballots ready

Absentee ballots are now available at the town clerk's office for the State Primary Tuesday, Sept. 15. You may apply for an absentee ballot if you will be out of town, have a physical disability or because of religious beliefs.

Absentee voting may be done in the office of the town clerk during regular business hours until noon Sept. 14.

A written signed request for a ballot may be sent to the town clerk and one will be mailed out. Included on the application should be your name as registered, which party's ballot you desire, your registration address, precinct, the address to which you wish the ballot sent and your signature. Applications may also be picked up at the office.

If you need further information, please call the Town Clerk's office at 383-9900 ext. 105, 106 or 107.

Revaluation underway

The town is currently undergoing its fiscal 1993 triennial revaluation of all real and personal property.

The new fiscal 1993 values will be available for public inspection at the Assessors office, 41 Highland Ave., during regular business hours, in November.

Due to staffing limitations, we will not be able to accept telephone inquiries for valuations. Any problems regarding valuation will be handled through the abatement process. Contact the staff at the assessors office for details, at 383-9900.

Tag sale, Sept. 26

Tag Sale on the Common. Crafters and Tag Salers welcome! Saturday, Sept. 26, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Cohasset Common.

This year marks the 5th Annual Tag Sale on the Common!

Tag Sale guidelines:

- Sale space fee is for a 6 x 10 area.
- Provide table(s), chair(s), etc. for display.
- Have cash box and change.
- Responsible for cleanup of sale area.

Setup on the Common begins at 7:30 a.m. Food is available at a Community Center concession stand on the Common or by local merchants in the downtown area. Rest rooms will be open in the Community Center building. The Community Center must receive a check in order to reserve a space. For further information, please call the Center at 383-0088.

Mailbox tampering is no laughing matter, ACO says

Two residents in the past two weeks have had a nasty surprise when they checked their mail.

Last week, a vandal placed a dead fish in the mailbox of a home on Doane Street.

And Monday, a King Street resident found a cat so badly decomposed in his mailbox that the animal control officer couldn't tell if the cat had been hit by a car.

Due to an existing immune system problem, the King Street resident went to the hospital for a check up after coming in contact with the dead animal, Animal Control Officer William Quigley said.

Quigley said the post master was notified so he could warn letter carriers.

Cohasset Police Det. Brian Cogill said police would investigate any further incidents.

He said the residents whose mail boxes were tampered with are not having any problems with neighbors and he guessed that the culprits are probably pranksters.

"But this (tampering) is not funny," he said.

"Residents should call the police department or myself for assistance in cases like this," Quigley said.

"They should not touch the animal and should leave the removal to us."

Quigley added that an animal decomposes quickly in hot weather.

He said this were the first incidents of this type in about three years.

The best way to clean a mailbox contaminated with parasites and maggots is with a 50/50 bleach water solution.

"That will kill anything," he said.

The door of the mailbox should be left open to be rid of the smell, he said.

U.S. Postal Inspector Dennis Kelleher, who is public information officer for the Boston office, said the post office refers these types of complaints to the local police.

"They patrol the roads and know the neighborhoods but we would assist the police in any way we can," he said.

He said usually these types of incidents are pranks or done to harass people.

"I hope this was an indiscriminate act and I hope the people responsible realize the serious consequences of doing something to harm someone," Kelleher said.

Bridge to be fixed

The state has good news for the 23 families who live on the far side of the dilapidated Doane Street bridge: the state will ante up for the repairs.

The assurance of payment for repairs ends a ten-year battle by abutters to get the bridge fixed. Adding to the safety concerns recently was a second hole which appeared in the bridge's surface.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said the Department of Administration and Finance signed off on the Doane Street project last Friday. The state department of public works has also given the go-ahead. Now all that's left is for the comptroller to issue the check, Murray said.

"It's all Ok'ed, everything's moving," she said.

Cohasset's Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said advertising for bids for the repair is underway.

Last week, the conservation commission extended the window of time for repair work to March 15.

Old Norman Todd Lane street light no longer burns

The old incandescent street light on Norman Todd Lane no longer burns.

And although abutters aren't particular about the type of light — they'd like their only street light back.

Cohasset Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said the town pays the electricity for about 550 lights across town at intersections, corners or bad curves. He said the cost of operating a street light averages about $100 per year.

Doyon said the light on Norman Todd Lane, which is a cul de sac, is not a priority because of its location.

Gordon Jezard, consumer services manager at Eastern Edison, said the utility would replace the incandescent bulb with a high-pressure sodium light but someone must agree to pay the electric bill.

"If a consumer wants one, they can all consumer services and we'd be happy to put one in," he said.

Jezard explained that in many cases neighbors share payment. But, he added, Eastern Edison would not sent out split bills. It would be up to the abutters to decide how to divvy the payment up, he said..

In an August 10 letter to selectmen, Dorothy DiTullio said the light had been there for 30 years.

She is concerned about safety.

"None of the residents were given written notice that the light would be removed and it really concerns us that this street will be left in darkness, especially during the winter months," DiTullio wrote.

DiTullio said she was concerned about slippery conditions in the winter and about potential burglaries.

"I realize the town must make cutbacks, but when it comes to safety, I believe we deserve the service," she said.

Doyon said Eastern Edison recently discovered that the town was not paying for the Norman Todd Lane street light.

He said the town turned off many street lights in the early 1980s because of budget constraints.

A Cohasseter's view of the 'new' Marshfield Fair

By Lee Todd Lacks

I can recall some very pleasant afternoons spent with my family at the Marshfield Fair. We would usually arrive at the fairgrounds by 12:30 p.m., just in time to get good seats in the grandstand before the running of the first race. Upon our arrival, we would buy enough programs to go around and then pick up a few tip cards from the clockers. I remember how excited I was when I finally looked old enough to place my own bets. My grandfather taught me the arithmetic behind oddsmaking and so I learned that betting on a 2:1 favorite yielded a meager payoff. If this story sounds like the autobiography of the flamingo kid, bear with me. These were the good old days.

We were thrilled to bet two dollars on horses that looked like mules ridden by jockeys that looked like...well, you get the idea. Most of the time, I would pick the horse that ran second to last and while I bemoaned the fact that my winnings didn't really cover all the money I spent on French fries and shish kebab, my grandfather would just laugh and say, "Any day you break even at the track is a good day!"

We never went to the fair at night. The last race was usually over by 6:30 p.m. and by that time we were ready to go home.

That's why this year is so different. There is no horse racing at the Marshfield Fair this year. In spite of this disappointing circumstance, my family decided to go to the fair last Saturday night and catch the evening show, which featured "The Mama's and Papa's." Now I didn't really know quite what to expect this particular night. I mean, after all, we're talking about a band that enjoyed considerable popularity during the late sixties until the death of their charismatic leading lady, Cass Elliot. Now that there is only one remaining member of the original group, I had some serious doubts about this show.

Then they started to sing. The group performed a fine set of songs from their original repertoire including such favorites as "Monday Monday" and "California Dreamin" along with a number of other sixties classics. In between songs, the performers were witty and charming, poking fun at themselves and their sixties mystique. By the end of the night, the audience was caught up in the good vibrations that seemed to emanate from the music.

Immediately following the show, there was a fireworks display, which also exceeded my expectations. By now, it's 9:30 p.m. and I'm feeling pretty good. My brothers and I walked around the midway for awhile, checking out the food and games. I got shafted at the billiard tables, but it really wasn't my fault, see. I had an awful break and...uh, the French fries were excellent!

All else aside however, the best things we saw at this year's Marshfield Field were the barnyard animals! My family and I had a marvelous time staring at huge cows, pulling the wool of annoyed sheep, yelling at sleeping pigs, and cracking sick jokes about turkeys that appeared to be almost ready for Thanksgiving dinner.

This year's edition of the Marshfield Fair, which runs until August 30th, still has a lot to offer in terms of family entertainment. But, Marshfield could still do itself a big favor by petitioning the Massachusetts Racing Commission to permit racing at next summer's fair!

"Recognition does not come in possessing honors, but in deserving them."

The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO) evaluates the quality of a health care organization's staff performance, patient outcomes, and working environment. It is the accepted national accrediting body of hospitals. In January 1991, JCAHO introduced its most distinguished level of recognition -- accreditation with commendation. Of the 2,400 hospitals it has surveyed since then, only five percent have been awarded accreditation with commendation.

South Shore Hospital is among them, and we are one of only two Massachusetts hospitals to have earned this coveted distinction.

Receiving accreditation with commendation is a great and rare recognition. Our mission is to continue to lead the way in creating access to excellent and efficient health care for the communities we serve.

South Shore Hospital

South Shore Hospital is a not-for-profit, tax-exempt, regional acute care medical center serving 470,000 residents in Southeastern Massachusetts. South Shore Hospital is an equal opportunity employer.

An Open Letter from the Board of Directors of South Shore Hospital

We are delighted to announce that South Shore Hospital has not only earned the maximum three-year accreditation from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO), but has received the highest recognition -- accreditation with commendation.

The Board of Directors extends its heartfelt thanks to the more than 2,700 physicians, employees, and volunteers whose commitment to quality health care for the people of Southeastern Massachusetts has made this achievement possible.

Congratulations to you all!

It's one thing to talk about quality care and it's another to win independent recognition for having demonstrated it.

The communities served by our hospital can take great comfort in knowing that South Shore Hospital, and its staff, earn this recognition every day of the year.

Sincerely,

James E. Bristol, Jr.

Hurricanes and nor'easters deserve respect

just as possibly destroy your home and kill you," Case said.

"Although 99.4 percent of northeasters won't have hurricane force winds, they will hurt and hurt you badly on the coast because the water and surge will hurt you," Case said.

The October "no name" storm, which caused such devastation along the coast, was a northeaster.

"The October storm had tremendous swells. That's what hurt you badly. That's what comes over your seawall and knocks your house down," Case said.

The Blizzard of '78 came up over Cape Cod during the highest point of the tide and the winds decreased somewhat, but in the October storm the strongest winds and highest part of the tide occurred at the same spot, he said.

HEED THE WARNINGS

Because forecasting is not perfect, people tend to disregard storm warnings, Case said. But each warning should be taken seriously, officials said.

In 1938, when a major hurricane hit New England, the people on the beach didn't know it was coming, meteorologist Bob Thompson said. He is in charge of the National Weather Service Office at Logan Airport.

"Over 600 people died and there was $400 million in property damage. The New England landscape was changed forever," he said.

The 1938 hurricane, a Category Three storm, is listed as the 20th most devastating hurricane on record to affect the United States. That damage occurred to a much less developed coastline — now the damage would be much higher, Thompson said.

A Category One storm has sustained winds ranging 74- to 95-miles-per-hour; Category Two, 96 to 110 mph; Three, 111-130 mph; Four, 131-155 mph; and Five, above 155 mph. The Category Five hurricanes are referred to as catastrophic.

On Aug. 19, 1991, Hurricane Bob killed 16 people and caused $1.5 billion in damages. Bob did not make the list of devastating storms.

The strongest hurricane to hit New England lately was a Category Three, Case said.

"We're long overdue for a Category Two, or probably Three, hurricane, Thompson said. "We're putting people at a great deal of risk by wanting houses on the beach. We must deal with barrier island and coastal development."

"Hurricane Bob was something of a wakeup call and the October storm was a stark reminder of what a northeaster could do," he said.

Hurricane season is June 1 through Nov. 30.

The incidence of hurricanes in the Atlantic have been linked to rainfall in West Africa, Case said.

"When West Africa is dry there are few major hurricanes. When it's wet there are major hurricanes," he said. "The '90's into the first decade of the 2000's will be a wet period in West Africa."

Forecasting relies on three tools — satellites, the first line of defense; airplanes to get a cross-section of the storm; and coastal radar when the storm is close enough to the shore.

But those tools are not as precise as they would like, Case said.

MISSING BY MILES

"On an average, we miss the eye of the center by 140 miles," he said. That distance can impact a great many people, he added.

When a hurricane is 36 hours away, the weather service calls for a hurricane watch.

"That says it's out there and it may affect you. It's time to break out your plan," Case said.

When the storm is 24 hours away, the service issues a hurricane warning.

"We're telling you we expect the eye to pass within 65 miles of you," Case said. "The overall average warning time is 19 hours.

"You're usually lucky if you get a 12-hour warning. When we put out a warning, we're asking you to act."

Because, on an average people will see actual hurricane conditions just once out of two or three warnings, people may disregard them, he said.

"If a northeaster comes along, you won't hear a watch or warning," Case said. "You'll hear a coastal flood watch, which means possible flooding within the next 12 to 36 hours."

When a coastal flood warning is issued, that means flooding within the next 12 hours, he said. Because northeasters tend to "stick around longer than a hurricane," Massachusetts coastal residents also have to deal with tides, Case said.

"We're not perfect in our forecasting, but we'll do a good job," he said. "When you're asked to evacuate, evacuate. If it doesn't hit, you'll be around to complain about the forecast."

The answer is to prepare, said Beth Lewis, of the Federal Emergency Management Agency disaster assistance for hazard mitigation.

The agency handles disaster response and emergency preparedness. Part of its mandate is funding and assistance to rebuild and implement preventative maintenance so loss and hardship is reduced, she said.

People should have plans in place to deal with disasters, she said. The agency has developed brochures to help develop plans.

Coastal residents can help to reduce damage by hazard mitigation measures, such as anchoring fuel tanks, elevating heating systems and installing septic backflow valves.

Joan Francis, of Scituate's Cedar Point Association, echoed the need to be prepared. After the Blizzard of 78, when two people were killed in Scituate, she and other neighbors began to focus the association on disaster planning.

WHEN TO GET OUT

One of the most important things to know is when to leave, Francis said.

"During the '78 storm the only thing I did right was evacuate, right at high tide" she said. "I panicked and hitched the first ride I could get. I had four children with me. I took no valuables and didn't even lock the front door.

"During this storm (the October storm) I did most things right. I left at flooding time."

The association uses a buddy system to ensure everyone is aware of the developing storm and gets out safely.

Every resident is issued a copy of the emergency plan, which even contains maps showing the location of all gas shutoffs so residents can assist crews after the storm has subsided.

After '78 Francis did some hazard mitigation, moving her utilities from the basement to the first floor. She also makes sure everything is kept in good repair.

"The plan really worked for us this time in that we didn't lose anyone on the point (Cedar Point)."

Residents must know if they are in a flood plain and buy flood insurance if they are, make preparations and heed warnings, Dan Kaplan of FEMA stressed.

The agency is developing hurricane evacuation studies for this area now, he said. To date the studies are completed from Brownsville, Texas up the coast to Narragansett Bay up to Chatham, Mass, Kaplan said.

Boston Bay studies are scheduled for the next year. The agency will hold hearings and hopes for residents' involvement, Kaplan said.

Murray receives Legislator of the Year Award

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R) of Cohasset is the first woman recipient of the Legislator of the Year Award from the Massachusetts Legislators' Association.

The Association's membership is limited to only those who have served or are presently serving in the Massachusetts Legislature.

Among past recipients of this award are: Henry Cabot Lodge, John W. McCormack, Leverett Saltonstall, Silvio O. Conte, Thomas P. "Tip" O'Niell, Jr., James A. Burke, Robert H. Quinn, William L. Saltonstall, Joseph Grossman, Herbert B. Hollis and John Davoren.

Rep. Murray is the first father-daughter to serve in the Massachusetts House of Representatives and is the only woman to serve as president of the association.

Rep. M. Joseph Manning of Milton presented Murray with her outstanding plaque and said, "Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray is truly deserving to be the recipient of the Legislator of the Year Award for her untiring efforts on behalf of her constituents."

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

THE GREAT INFLATION HEDGE

QUESTION: Why does everyone say that home ownership is one of the great hedges against inflation?

ANSWER: For one thing, your monthly installment payments never change (unless you have an adjustable rate mortgage). Also, your investment grows as the value of your home increases with rising prices. On top of that, you enjoy some fine tax advantages, especially the property tax and mortgage interest deduction.

There is no better inflation hedge than the ownership of a home. And, most importantly, real estate values have always increased faster than the cost of lviing.

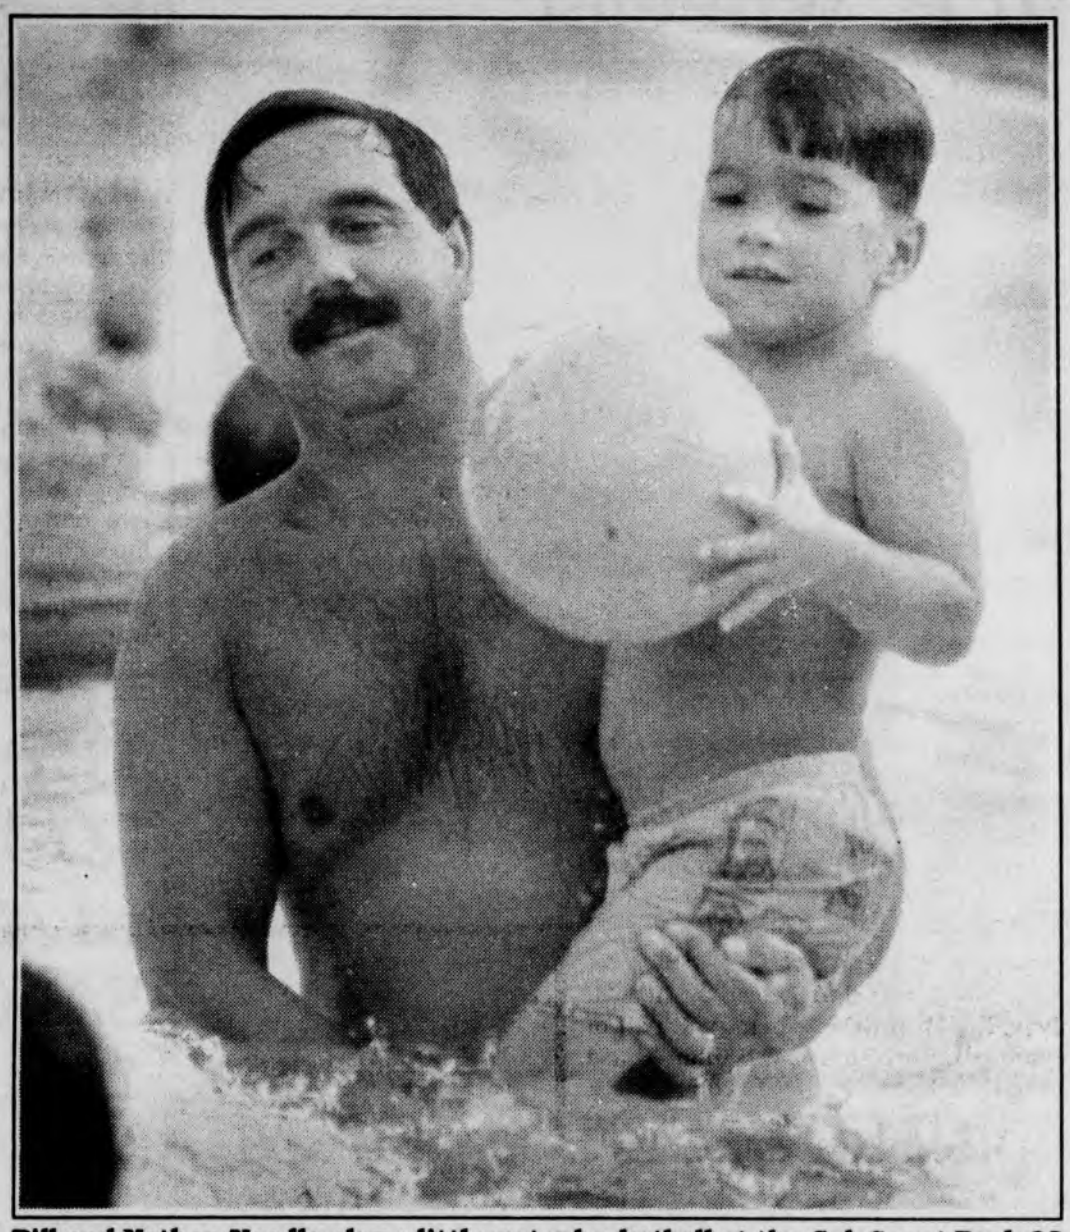
❑ Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Edmonds have just returned from a trip to San Antonio, Texas where they attended the wedding of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Ritter's oldest son. The wedding and the reception were held at the Randolph Air Force Base.

The groom, is a graduate of Texas A & M Maritime Academy and is an officer in the Merchant Marine. The bride is also a graduate of Texas A & M and is a teacher in the San Antonio school system. After a wedding trip to England and Scotland they will make their home in San Antonio.

We are sure that Bruce and Mary cannot wait 'til they make their first visit to Cohasset!!

❑ Matthew Collins, son of Francis and Gail Collins of So. Main St. and grandson of Eleanor Collins and Dan and Mary Kearney, competed in the World Rowing Championships held August 12 to 16 in Montreal.



Matthew, a four-year rower for the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, had been training to make the U.S. Team this past spring. His team placed fourth in international competition in Lucerne, Switzerland in May and medaled in national competition in Indianapolis in July of '91 and 92. In Montreal, Matt's Lightweight Rowing Team, with Matt as the "stroke", broke the U.S. record for the "straight four". His team was the fastest and highest placed team the U.S. has ever fielded in the World Championships. Matt's team of "four oarsmen without coxen" placed fifth in intense competition against teams representing 12 countries with medals being won by Great Britain, Italy and France. Matthew arrived home August 12; said goodbye to family and friends and his co-workers in the genetics lab at the Brigham and Women's Hospital; and left for Washington, D.C. to start his first year in medical school at Howard University.

❑ Don't forget that the Cohasset Education Foundation's task force members and new directors want to be sure you are there for the Bill Cosby performance at the Music Circus Saturday, Aug. 29. Tickets for the 9 pm show are available by calling Supt. Stephen Hart's office during the day and Clark Chatterton at night at 383-0560.

Before the show there will be a party to introduce you to everyone who is supporting the Cohasset School system and funding sources for various important things within, they are trying hard to help us all!!

There are also high hopes that they might get you to meet Bill Cosby there, as you know he is always doing what he can to educate our youth. Be there!

❑ We wish Daniel R. DeMichelle, son of Donald and Susan DeMichelle of 264 Jerusalem Rd., the best as he enters Bates College as a first-year student. Daniel graduated from CHS and was a member of the soccer, tennis, basketball, hockey and skiing teams and the student council.

❑ Congrats go to Joe Menis, who at age 15 has qualified to compete at the US Sailing/Rolex Junior Championships in Newport, Rhode Island, which was held last week. He is one of 10 "single handed" sailors from across the country who qualified for the finals of the national junior ladder sailing championships, which is organized annually by US Sailing, the sport's national governing body.

The ten-race, round-robin competition for the Smythe Trophy will be sailed in Lasers, a 14' high-performance dinghy. Menis reached the final event through elimination trials, where he met tough competition from all over the region.

Let us know how you do, Joe, we'll sure be cheering you on from here!!

❑ Happy birthday to Norman Swain!!

❑ We welcome Haley Rose Steele, daughter of Andrea and Randall Steele who was born August 5, at 7:42 and weighed 7 lbs. 8 ozs. Haley's grandparents are Donald and Joyce Steele of Cohasset and Andrew and Annette Kiddie of Arlington. Haley's great-grandmother is Vi Tuthill.

❑ Dean Volungis was chosen as a semi-finalist in the 1992 American Open Poetry Contest. His poem will be entered in the final competition this fall. Dean, a sophomore at CHS, will have his poem published in the poetry anthology A Question of Balance which is scheduled for publication this fall.

Dean also recently completed a five-week summer performance program at Berkelee College of Music in Boston. He attended classes in musicianship, song writing, and performance perspectives along with instrumental laboratories, ensembles and private lessons . The program culminated with a performance at Berklee. Participants in the program came from all over the U.S. and from 20 foreign countries. Dean, a drummer, was the youngest participant in the program.

Charles Donovan Sr.

Charles V. Donovan Sr., 79, of Cohasset, a machinist for Kinney Manufacturing Co. for 20 years died Aug. 1 in Robin House Nursing Home, Quincy, after a brief illness.

Mr. Donovan retired in 1975.

He was a member of the 60 Plus Club and St. Vincent dePaul Society and a communicant of St. Anthony's Church.

A native of Boston, he lived in Dorchester before moving to Cohasset in 1947.

Mr. Donovan attended St. John's School in Cambridge.

He leaves his wife, Mary K. (Cusick) Donovan; a son, Charles V. Donovan Jr. of Fairfield, Conn.; two daughters, Kathleen M. DeFeo of Norwich, N.Y. and Cynthia A. Murphy of Lakeville; two sisters, Mary O'Donnell of Dorchester and Sister Ann Donovan of Kansas; and nine grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Aug. 4 at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Holyhood Cemetery, Brookline.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to charity.

Beatrice Heavern

Beatrice (Sullivan) Heavern, 97, of Cohasset, a native of Ireland, died August 1 at Quincy Hospital after a brief illness.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Heavern Sr. lived in Belmont 30 years before moving to Cohasset. She and her husband made the move to be closer to their only son, John J. Heavern Jr., and their grandchildren. Both her husband and her son predeceased her.

She leaves her daughter-in-law Eleanor Heavern-Petrocelli of Hull; three sisters, Eileen O'Connor of Dedham; Margaret Brosnan of New Hampshire; and Joan McEleney of West Roxbury; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated August 5 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was at Hull Village Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer Street, handled the arrangements.

W.T. 'Sonny' Barnes

William T. "Sonny" Barnes, 70, of Cohasset, a landscaper who ran his own firm, W.T. Barnes Landscape Co., for 50 years, died Aug. 21 in South Shore Hospital, South Weymouth.

An Army veteran of World War II, Mr. Barnes was a charter member of All-State Veterans of Foreign Wars Post in Cohasset and a member of the Cohasset American Legion.

He leaves his companion, Elaine Chase of Cohasset; four daughters, Judith M. Salvaggi of Braintree; Alicia A. Eicoff of Weymouth; and Vicky M. Williams and Dama E. Chase, both of Cohasset; a brother, John T. Barnes of Cohasset; three sisters, Velma L. LaFlamme, Helen Babbs and Virginia M. Barnes, all of Cohasset, and five grandchildren.

A funeral service was conducted Aug. 25 at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer Street, by the Rev. Gary Ritts of Second Congregational Church.

Donations may be made to the All-State Veterans of Foreign Wars Post, Cohasset 02025.

Dr. S. Charles Kasdon

Dr. S. Charles Kasdon, 79, of Boston and Cohasset, professor emeritus of obstetrics and gynecology at Tufts University Medical School and a former staff member at several Boston hospitals, died August 20 at New England Medical Center.

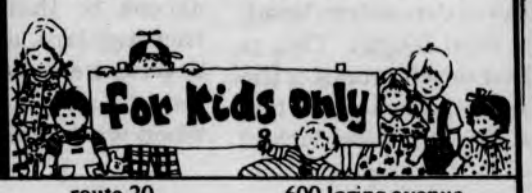
Born in New York, Dr. Kasdon graduated from Yale College in 1933 and Yale Medical School in 1938.

After serving in World War II as a flight surgeon, Dr. Kasdon established the cytology lab at New England Medical Center and wrote and edited an atlas on cytology.

He was a staff member at New England Medical Center, Beth Israel Hospital and Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

He was a member of the St. Botolph Club, the Harvard Club, Cohasset Yacht Club, Waltham-Weston Racquet and Tennis Club and the Fulton and George W. Mitchell Societies.

Dr. Kasdon leaves his wife, Muriel (Cohen) Kasdon; two daughters, Madeline Kasdon of Boston and Louisa Kasdon-Sidell of Cambridge; a daughter-in-law, Jenifer Kasdon of Weston; two sisters, Anne Binen of Brookline and Miriam Smith of Fairfield, Conn., and five grandchildren. He was the father of the late Dr. David "Deel" L. Kasdon.



A service was conducted Aug. 24 in Stanetsky Memorial Chapel, 1668 Beacon Street, Brookline. Burial was in Mishkan Tefila Memorial Park, West Roxbury.

Donations may be made to the Dr. David L. Kasdon Fund, Atty. Peter Fink, 101 Federal Street, 22nd Floor, Boston 02110.

Sergeant

For 15 years we were a family of 10.
We are now a family of nine.
Our dog Sergeant died last night.
He was the best dog who ever lived.

Fifteen years ago the nine of us packed ourselves into our old station wagon and drove to Salem where a newspaper ad said dogs could be adopted free.We picked out a white fluffy purebred something-or-other, brought it to the desk to sign papers and the woman said — "That will be $50."It seems the dogs are free. But the adoption has a $50 fee. We had no money with us.We returned home empty-handed.

Those old enough to be in a fury were in a fury. Those young enough to cry cried.

When we arrived home our oldest daughter grabbed the classifieds. She found that a mongrel on the next street over had a litter and the owners were giving away the puppies free.She, a sister and a brother marched over to the house and found only the runt of the litter was left.They brought it home, plunked this tiny puppy that looked like Benji in the center of the living room and said — "there! There's the family dog."

We called him Sergeant because it was the antithesis of what he looked like he should be called.

Years passed. Little Sarge became Sergie-Boy and finally The Old Sergeant.

All the time, he watched out for his family. His only job was to bark when a stranger came to the house.All he wanted from us was a pat on the head, dinner at six and an open door when he stood by it.

His most phenomenal ability was to sense when a family member was coming home.

In those dark hours before midnight when the mother of the family waited for a teenager to come home in that anxiety that only another waiting parent knows, he would sleep by her on the couch.

She didn't have to watch out the window. She watched his tail. Seconds before the headlights would turn up the long driveway, his head would lift, his ears would prick up and his tail would wag.She knew her son or daughter was home.

The children have grown up now.There is an ebb and flow in the house. Most have left home. And most, when sick, broke or lonely, have returned for short or long stays.

And most have a dog of their own.They have chosen purebreds with pedigrees — a pit bull, a Doberman, a beagle, a Great Pyrenee.And when these purebreds would visit for an afternoon, or a year, Sergeant was polite.

After all, over these 15 years, he has had to put up with four cats, gerbils, white mice, parakeets and hamsters. What's another dog?He knew he would be patted by the owner of the new dog. No one ever passed Sergeant without patting him.

The pedigrees came with training books, rawhide bones, studded leather collars and retractable steel leashes.Sergeant never had any of these things.He never had a dog house. He never had a dog dish. He never had a dog bed.He never had a collar. He never had a leash. And especially, he never had a knitted sweater with a hat to match.

Except for his shots, he never went to the vet.He never had his fur clipped. He never had a tick dip. He never even had a bath.He never rolled over. He never begged. He never gave us his paw. (We never asked.)

He also never left the backyard. Except once.Once when he was about 10 years old he was missing. We were in a frenzy.It seems the dog across the street had gone into heat and Old Sarge was laying on her front porch like, as the old saying goes, a lovesick dog.This was the only time he didn't come when called.It took two of us to wrest him from the porch and carry him home.

He wailed by the back door so loudly we had to put him down cellar.That night he scratched at the wall in the basement with such frenzy that he went through the drywall, the insulation and broke open a small hole in the plywood.The weird part of it was the next day, he was our old Sarge again.

He never looked old. Just picture Benji looking old.

But for the past few weeks we knew he was on his last legs. In dog years he was 105 years old.He wanted to stay on the couch on the back porch and we would just sit and pat him.

Last night the daughter who picked him out sat by him, patted him, called his name and his tail wagged.The mother sat by him, patted him, called his name and his tail wagged.The father sat by him, patted him, called his name and his tail wagged.

But when the youngest son came home a little later, patted him and called his name, his tail didn't wag.

In a difficult rite of passage on a very dark night, by himself the youngest son buried Sergeant in the backyard.

He brought us so much joy He brought us no grief. Except for last night.

SAFE: gravity is at work

(Editor's note: the following statement is from SAFE (Stop Any Further Expansion), a grass-roots environmental group opposed to the expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill. LThe August 13 Cohasset Mariner reported that water samples drawn in May suggest one of the CHL monitoring wells may be contaminated. Results from August testing should be available soon).

The test results of the monitoring wells at Cohasset Heights Ltd. (CHL) were reviewed at the August 11 Board of Health meeting. The deep, bedrock, monitoring well (MW-8) closest to Lily Pond was found to be contaminated with its highest levels of iron and chlorides. The water was at its most acidic, while the neighboring surface water monitoring wells were at their lowest readings. CHL is sited one-mile uphill from Cohasset's primary water supply, Lily Pond.

commentary

"Gravity is at work here," said Alix White, SAFE president. "The dump owners have always told us that only 10 percent of the leachate travels toward Lily Pond. These test results don't show that. We have always said that sooner or later the leachate will reach Lily Pond."

Jim Kinch of SAFE said, "It would be extremely prudent to monitor this situation more closely with the more intensive effort of monthly sampling of a limited set of wells along the southern edge of the site.

"If there is indeed a consistent ominous shift in the quality of groundwater along the souther edge of the site, then an immediate program must be designed and implemented to eliminate this threat to the primary drinking water source for the town," Kinch said.

America needs less government

To the Editor:

For months now I have listened to presidential aspirants put words in my mouth and tell me what Americans want. Well, let me tell you what I want.

What I want is less intrusion from federal & state government in my community, work and wallet. If what Thomas Jefferson said was true -"All government is evil" - what America needs least of all is more government.

It's not that I don't believe in the redistribution of income. In fact, nothing gives me more pleasure than to freely give my time, talents and money to those in need. It's just that I don't trust the government to redistribute my income. Their track record of abuse, mismanagement and corruption makes me sick. So, don't compel me by law to give my money, don't rob me of the joy that I receive by giving freely, and don't numb me to the needs around me by continually squandering my money on pork barrel programs.

Let me do it. Let me be compelled by my own morality. Have faith that I am a functional human being, that I can make rational decisions, that I can perceive others' burdens and respond to them. Government doesn't have a monopoly on compassion.

Give the American people a chance. Give us our money back for four years and see if the needs of the "least of our brothers" are met.

As for a job, I am fortunate enough to have one. But, I don't rely on government to secure it. My job is secured and others created when I serve my customer as I myself would want to be served. Jobs are secured and created by innovative programs, services, and technology. Technology that is financed with the money that we save if you would simply give it back.

What I want is for federal & state government: to give us responsibility for America; to have faith in the people who elected them and they say they are honored to represent; and to give us our money back. Try us for four years. If you are not totally satisfied, I offer you a money back guarantee.

Mariner gave 'wrong' impression

To the Editor:

I object to both the tone and the content of your article on Black Rock Road that appeared in the August 13 edition of the Mariner. It created the impression that Jerusalem Road Limited Partnership is going to repave the entire length of Black Rock Road out of community spirit, and that the homeowners along the road are jumping for joy.

In fact, the partnership is required to repair only that portion of the road from 17 Adams to Jerusalem Road; a very small part of the road's total length. This is required by the town as part of their development of the property, and it certainly is not the major issue that has held up occupancy of the houses. The developer lacked a plan for a workable septic system for the properties, and there is still doubt in my mind that what they have proposed is adequate. The buyers of the houses knew this when they offered to buy the properties, and any delays that the planning and health boards have asked for have been for the good of the community. It is the boards' responsibility to see that minimum standards are adhered to. In this case they have granted more than a dozen variances, and there are many concerned neighbors who are worried that the peaceful neighborhood we have enjoyed will be changed forever by this development.

Your article said that Black Rock Road will now be a "real" street. It is already a real street, one that serves the purpose of allowing the families that live along it access to their homes. It is not meant to be a thoroughfare, a highway or an access road to a large development. We like our street just fine, thanks. Your reporter should speak to neighbors as well as developers when writing articles like this one.

Relief is needed

(Editors note: The following letter was sent to the selectmen's office.)

Dear Merle:

As we discussed at the, now infamous, Title 5 meeting, I am in need of some coordinated town relief, and hope I can share my problem with you and the other selectmen.

For years we have had insufficient drainage and inadequate protection from rainwater damage due to the lack of any town catch basins near my driveway.

Two catch basins that appear near the end of my driveway (my side of Schofield and directly on the other side) were privately installed and are ineffective for the volume of water created during a moderate rainstorm. This has caused, and I believe still causes, damage to my property.

I have given a videotape of rainstorm activity to Harold Litchfield to show him the problem, and it appears that I should go through the selectmen's office to discuss any relief I may possibly get. I have a second copy of my boring, probably over-explained, epic for review if such a forum is acceptable.

Every rainstorm gives reason for the need to change the existing situation. Please help.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) 722-1646 Room 416B	Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) 722-2800 ext.7957 Room 134

QUESTIONS

VOTE

"Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on four roll calls from legislative sessions dealing with Governor Weld's budget vetoes. There were no roll calls in the House and Senate last week. The Senate has not yet acted on these vetoes and may consider them in September.

This week, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" also includes details of additional vetoes by Weld which have not yet been acted upon by either branch and may be considered in September.

(House) HEALTH CENTERS (H 5800) — House 116-33, overrode Governor Weld's reduction of $1 million (from $1.627 million to $627,000) in funding for community health center grants. Override supporters said this $1 million is necessary to adequately fund these centers which help thousands of people. Opponents said the state cannot afford the $1 million and argued the budget must be balanced. (A "Yea" vote is for the $1 million funding. A "Nay" vote is against it).		Y
(House) LIBRARY (H 5800) — House 114-32, overrode Governor Weld's veto of $186,000 for state reimbursement of a library construction project in West Bridgewater. Override supporters said these types of projects are valuable to local communities. Opponents said the state has limited spending resources and argued the project is more appropriately funded through the Capital Budget. (A "Yea" vote is for the $186,000 funding. A "Nay" vote is against it).		Y

The following are four vetoes by Governor Weld which may be acted upon by the House and Senate in September. In his veto message, Weld said these reductions make spending on these items equal to what he originally recommended and will limit spending to the projected state revenues available.

Reduction of $36,094 (from $724,097 to $688,003) for the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind.

Reduction of $253,997 (from $1,353,997 to $1,100,000) for assistance to homeless veterans.

Reduction of $1,780,423 (from $34,468,823 to $32,688,400) for assistance to families and individuals who are homeless or in danger of becoming homeless.

Reduction of $92,168 (from $2,069,168 to $1,977,000) for support and implementation of community teenage pregnancy programs. Weld argued the state will save the $92,168 by the transferring of this program from the Office of Children to the Department of Public Health.

Steps taken to create regional waste district

By Mary Calandrella
Mariner staff

Cohasset voters, along with others in the 10-town South Shore coalition, will be asked to create a regional solid waste disposal district at next year's annual town meeting.

Also, they will be asked to choose among several options in dealing with solid waste.

If voters approve its creation, the district would be a separate legal entity with its own budget, staff and contracts.

Tellus Institute of Boston has presented the 10-town coalition — Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth — with several options which are part of a regional solid waste management plan:

- establishing permanent household hazardous waste facilities;
- constructing a material recovery facility (MRF);
- designating leaf and yard waste composting sites;
- mixing solid waste (MSW) composting;
- handling recyclables and
- determining how to manage the remaining material.

The state Department of Environmental Protection paid for the plan which has been accepted by the coalition and its subcommittees.

"The state wants something like this to work, so I think we'll get more assistance," said Ken Pelletier, chairman of the agreement subcommittee. Pelletier, Marshfield's environmental engineer, previously created a disposal district in New Hampshire.

He is applying for a $55,000 state grant to hire legal counsel to oversee the writing of the district agreement.

The draft will be ready for scrutiny first by the planning subcommittees next month and the full planning committee and coalition representatives by late October. The final draft should be ready by February.

In the meantime, subcommittees are studying how to organize programs for joint purchasing, for collecting household hazardous waste, for addressing finance and budget issues and for educating the public.

The district agreement would contain a clause for towns that do not join initially to pay to join later, he said.

The Tellus report strongly advocates formation of a disposal district to reduce environmental risks, make the most of existing disposal capacity and spread out disposal costs.

Tellus recommended that existing coalition landfills should be budgeting on average $26 a ton more than their current rates to fully cover closure, post-closure and environmental remediation costs.

The state solid waste master plan calls for initiatives to reduce the state's waste generation by at least 10 percent by the year 2000.

Regionalization would be a cost-effective, environmentally sound approach for the coalition communities to meet state mandates, the report says.

Brian Sullivan of Hingham, joint purchasing subcommittee chairman, said the success of the program will "depend on what towns are interested in."

The subcommittee has sent a questionnaire to towns seeking information about the landfill cover, recycling services and haulers used.

"We want to find out exactly what they'll be interested in," Sullivan said. "We're not going to go through the process if no one's interested. It will be a long process."

Paul Scott of Scituate, chairman of host community issues, is working on determining proper sites and benefits for towns that accept a facility.

"There's always a problem siting these things," he said. "This is where we need the education committee's expertise.

"I'm committed to regionalization, not just for solid waste but for other services," Scott said. "We want to get some positive results out of this now.

"Household hazardous waste is a problem for each town. Everybody has hazardous waste. In Scituate, the one-day-a-year collection got cut out of the budget."

The recommended plan includes establishing three to five permanent household hazardous waste collection facilities for storage and consolidating household hazardous waste.

The facilities could reduce hazardous waste contractor costs because the sponsor would not have to send partially full drums or partially full truckloads offsite.

Because they are designed to mitigate the impact of spills, they will provide more environmental protection and worker safety than a one-day collection, the report says.

The location and operational plans of each collection center must be approved by DEP.

Household hazardous waste includes paints, batteries, pesticides, cleaner and fuels and automotive supplies.

The annual cost of the proposed program is approximately $316,000. But, the report says, it is relatively cost-effective compared to other household hazardous waste options.

If disposed of improperly, household hazardous waste can cause significant and costly environmental harm, notably contamination of water supplies.

If collected and disposed of along with ordinary residential solid waste, household hazardous waste may be dangerous to employees involved in collection and processing.

In addition, household hazardous waste can damage wastewater treatment equipment or, if incinerated, may upset conditions at waste-to-energy facilities.

Finally, the potential impact of improper disposal may result in significant liability on towns.

Pelletier believes siting the household hazardous waste program would not be problematic. The sites would likely be established on existing town landfills.

The education aspect will be vital, Pelletier added. He hopes to hire a couple of graduate students to work with schools and the compost operation.

He plans to bring engineering budgets for the remaining components of the district plan — the MRF, MSW compost facility, leaf and yardwaste programs and residual management— to town meetings.

only. If residents don't have a beach or dump sticker then they'll be asked to show a driver's license, vehicle registration, or some kind of identification that shows a Cohasset address, he said.

Items accepted at the collection site are:

- From the house: drain cleaners, oven cleaners, furniture polish, metal polish, disinfectants, pharmaceuticals, arts & crafts supplies, photo chemicals, floor cleaners, window cleaners, dry cleaning fluids, radiator cleaners, mothballs; rug & upholstery cleaners; batteries containing mercury, zinc, silver, lithium, cadmium.
- From the garage: gasoline, anti-freeze, brake fluid, wax polish, engine & radiator flushes, and transmission fluid.
- From the workbench: rust preservatives, wood preservatives, wood strippers, oil-based paint, paint thinner, solvents de-greasers, sealants, asbestos, and stains/finishes.
- From the yard/garden: pesticides, herbicides (except dioxin), insect sprays, rodent killers, pool chemicals, muriatic acid, no-pest strips, cesspool cleaners, and fungicides.

The following items will not be accepted at the collection: latex paint (throw in trash); explosive chemicals, water-reactive chemicals, biologically active materials, radioactive materials, old car batteries (recycle at RTF); tires (recycle at RTF); ammunition, dioxin, septage, garbage; or used motor oil (recycle at RTF).

VoTech gets new school addition

$5 million, 35,000 square foot addition with a 75.46-percent reimbursement rate. Estimated construction and interest costs add up to $8,675,000, with the state paying $6,546,155 altogether.

The interest, at seven percent over 20 years and an estimated $3,675,000, is included in the reimbursement as well.

The state has committed to paying $327,308 annually to reimburse the project, beginning in FY94. The member towns will be responsible for the remaining 25 percent.

The towns will pick up the tab for $2,128,845 over the 20-year life of the bond. According to VoTech Secretary-Treasurer Robert Kelley, the assessment could change annually if there is a big swing in the town's student enrollment at the school. Each year the bond assessment will be determined by a "moving" past-three-year average of the student count.

The towns' annual payment share is around $100,000, Kelley said, and payments will begin with the upcoming FY94 budgets.

Estimating first-time assessments, Abington could pay around $20,000; Cohasset, a little over $1,000; Hanover, over $9,000; Hanson, around $17,500; Norwell, some $2,000; Rockland, around $20,000; Scituate, close to $5,000; and Whitman, some $21,000. The numbers can change, depending on the October 1 enrollments, and will be closely calculated in time for budgeting purposes.

The addition quest began with a 1988 $14 million request that did not receive the needed unanimous support from member towns. The project was pared to $12 million without success and then reduced to $5 million, this time receiving unanimous member town approval in 1990.

A schedule leading up to ground breaking was explained to the regional school committee last week by HKT Architects, Inc. partner Eric Kluz, who has been the architect for the project since its inception.

The bid documents will go out Sept. 15, Kluz said, and advertising will begin in the central register and local newspapers on Sept. 7. Subcontracting awards will take place October 16 and the general bids opened on October 30. The construction contract award is slated for November 11. When talking about the December 1 groundbreaking, Kluz said that weather could hamper completion by two months. "It's going to be a very, very tight schedule," he said.

The plans have been before the Hanover conservation commission, board of health and planning board, but need final approval, Kluz said.

"Any chance we can start the construction date up a month? It's risky and costly to wait until December," Hanover representative Louis Crescenzi said. "My only recommendation is to move up the starting date at least two to three weeks, if not a month. I notice you have three weeks to finalize the plans. Can you speed that?"

Kluz said that the plans had been sitting in the drawer for a year and will require time to bring up to code, but added that he would "make every effort to move up the date."

The new addition, set at an angle from the front administration offices, will provide easy access and parking for the school's restaurant and cosmetology shop, both open to the public. The drafting and graphic arts shops are also placed for accessibility. Electrical, electronics, auto body, related classrooms, storage and a lecture/demonstration room are included in the addition plans. In the present building there will be an addition to the cafeteria and some internal movement of classrooms.

The lease of the former Abington junior high school has been extended for the upcoming school year, and school officials will have to seek another extension if construction appears to be running behind.

"I picked up the (commitment) letter last night," said John Kosko while the school committee met behind closed doors for a bargaining executive session. "It was voted a week ago Monday, but as of Wednesday they still hadn't released the award letters."

During the meeting, Kosko was appointed assistant superintendent on a temporary basis to replace Warren Anderson. With Kosko the chairman of the self-study steering committee in preparation for the New England Association of Schools and Colleges November 1993 evaluation, and between the addition construction and the running of the school, Superintendent James Hager recommended Kosko come to the Hanover campus.

Anderson had submitted his retirement from his assistant superintendent post, which was accepted with deep regret. He was given a round of applause for his years of service to the school. Then he was appointed to a .6 special needs coordinator position. Guidance Director Pam Titus was temporarily appointed to the Abington director's position until the job can be filled for the upcoming year. Titus was also appointed permanent special needs administrator beginning Sept. 1, a job Anderson had fulfilled as assistant superintendent.

Anderson has been at the VoTech since the doors opened 30 years ago. "I've been in education for 40 years and I've been here since the school opened 30 years ago. I'm not going to make any statements (about my retirement). I just couldn't see myself after so many years of experience just sitting down and leaving the school. This comes at a time when, as you can see, they need help," Anderson said after the meeting.

Cohasset Yacht Club sails to great season

It was a great year for Cohasset Yacht Club sailors.

Back in July, CYC won the Finley Cup at the South Shore Championships with Faye Menis skipper and Dave Nothnagle and Ben Chittick as crew. It was held at Community Boating on the Charles River in Boston.

At the same event, Tyler Studds and Matt Larson finished fourth for the Charles Trophy at the Mass Bay doublehanded championship.

At the Hingham Bay Jr. Regatta, July 15-16, Wiley Wakeman and Charlie Dean came in second in turnabouts with Neely Wakeman finishing seventh. CYC sent five sailors in Lasers, with Joe Menis finishing second.

CYC also had sailors in the Lipton Cup. One of the CYC instructors, Cara Harries, finished first in 420's, while Mike Welch and Tyler Studds came in commendably as well.

For August, Faye Menis won the Wakeman Trophy at Hingham in Lasers, which is the Mass Bay women's singlehanded championship. Faye then went on to Chicago, competing in the Leiter Cup, the national junior women's singlehanded championship. She finished in the twenties out of sixty boats, a great accomplishment for such a young sailor.

The 420 racing team broke even beating Manchester and Annisquam and losing close matches to Pleon and Edgartown.

Closer to home, at the Scituate Yacht Club Regatta, finishes were:

Beginners class: A clean sweep with Elliot Noon, Lydia Guild and Melissa Pyfrom with first, second and third place finishes.

Advanced class: Charlie Dean placed third and Wiley Wakeman fourth, while Jamie Simons and Neely Wakeman also placed well.

Closing the season in late August at the MIT sailing symposium, Matt Larson won the A fleet championship for the second year in a row. In the B fleet, Sam Goedecke finished second and Spencer Railsback came in fourth.

Melissa Pyfrom, Elliot Noon, and Lydia Guild sweep the medals for the Cohasset Yacht Club sailors at the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club recently.

Competing this week for the Jack Wood Trophy (for Mass Bay sailors under 14) are Matt Verrochi and Colin Pyfrom.

This has been a great season for Cohasset sailors and an impressive showing for all CYC juniors.

Camp Dresser & McKee Inc. (CDM), the international environmental consulting engineering firm, announces that Richard C. Drake has been named an honorary member of the American Water Works Association (AWWA), the non-profit scientific and educational organization whose membership exceeds 54,000 drinking water professionals worldwide. Drake, a vice president of CDM, serves as a business development coordinator for the firm's Northeast Division.

Drake accepted the honor in June at the association's annual conference in Vancouver, B.C. He was cited for his dedication to AWWA across a broad spectrum of regional and national activities, and specifically for his leadership and contributions to the association's annual conference while serving as chair of the Conference Management Committee.

Drake previously served as an international director of AWWA and is a past recipient of the association's prestigious George Warren Fuller Award, which recognizes distinguished service in the water supply field.

Drake is also active in the American Public Works Association, the National Association of Water Companies and the Water Environment Federation.

He is a resident of Cohasset.

Joseph A. DeAngelis, M.Ed. of Cohasset, has recently opened a private counseling practice focused on career services, life transitions and conflict resolution. His new offices are located at 160 Old Derby Street in Hingham.

Mr. DeAngelis graduated cum laude from Springfield College in Springfield, Massachusetts with a Bachelor's Degree in Behavioral Psychology and a Master's Degree in Guidance and Psychological Services. He has over 14 years of experience working with individuals, groups of individuals and organizations in the areas of personal and professional transition issues.

In his practice, Mr. DeAngelis offers services in modular form — on an individual, small group or seminar basis — allowing a participant to choose the most cost effective approach to his or her individual counseling needs.

"We work with a client on the most fundamental of transition issues, whether it is a divorce, a separation or a career change. Our goal is to offer genuine support within a client's budget. Much of our success is dealing directly and compassionately with the economic anxieties of our clients," DeAngelis said.

'Miss Shelli' of the Cohasset Dance Shoppe takes a break with dancers (clockwise from Shelly Harvey, director): Kimberly McIver, Erika Jesse, Allison Kostka, Heather Wheble, Rachel Galanek, Jordan Skelly, Mylee Monks and Elaina Gianatassio. The dance shoppe recently moved from Duxbury to Jonathan Livingston Square.

Cub Scout swim party tops season!

Cub Scout Pack 38 knows how to top off the summer season. Twenty-six Cubs along with 20-plus family members enjoyed the annual swim party at the Cohasset Swim Center off Sohier Street last week. This was the third summer event for the Cubs following the bike rodeo in June and annual family picnic in July. Cubs that made it to all three events earned a National Summertime Award — a pin featuring a smiling sun! Six kids qualified for the award.

Ticket raffle at library

The Paul Pratt Library has two tickets for the Eastern States Exposition, which will be raffled off to interested participants in this summer's reading program in the children's room.

The "Big E" is New England's Great State Fair. It will run from September 16 through September 27 at the Eastern States Exposition in West Springfield. Featured at the fair will be the Everly Brothers, Little Anthony, Ronnie Milsap, the Coasters, the Hofbrau Alpine Festival, Circus World Museum Exhibit and Circus Parade, juggling, a petting zoo, horse show, foods of the New England States, and much, much more.

To be eligible for the drawing, a member of your family must be a participant in the summer reading program at Paul Pratt Library, "Reach for it! Read!" If you are interested in the tickets, call the Library at 383-1348 and leave your name. The winners will be drawn on September 11.

Carillon in Cohasset

Sunday, Aug. 30 will mark the end of the 68th annual Summer Series of carillon recitals from the tower of St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset.

The program begins at 6 p.m., and will be played by Sally Slade Warner, Carillonneur of St. Stephen's Church and also of Phillips Academy in Andover. Warner will play a varied program including requests received from listeners at the previous concerts this summer.

The recital will take place regardless of weather conditions; in case of rain, listen from parked cars. Printed programs will be distributed on the Common and also will be available in the courtyard behind the church on Highland Avenue. There is no charge, and picnic suppers, lawn chairs and blankets are welcome on the Common and at other listening places in the area.

After the concert, those who wish to climb the 45 steps to the tower's playing cabin may do so for a brief visit to the keyboard.

Daly fund-raiser tonight

Eleanor Bleakie sponsors a cocktail party for Congressional Candidate, Dan Daly, from 6 to 8 p.m., tonight Thursday, August 27, at her home, Lion's Head Farm, 135 Border St., North Scituate.

The cocktail reception is catered by the Borrowed Butler of Scituate.

Tickets are $50 per person and may be obtained by calling Polly Logan at 383-0031 or July Volungis, 383-0752 or 262-2800.

Shop in Cohasset

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce recently introduced their new shop-locally campaign, headlined "Shop Right...Here in Cohasset." Through store decals, advertising, and special promotions, the Chamber seeks to emphasize the benefits of shopping in Cohasset. As the program develops, discount days will be added to seasonal promotions.

Piano lessons resume

Priscilla D. Daniels, professional pianist and teacher of pianoforte, resumes her lesson-schedule at her Beach Street home in Cohasset.

Her personalized instruction has attracted students who have had careers in music, while others play just for pleasure.

Daniels is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music of Boston, magna cum laude. She is a member and past president of Alpha Chi Omega, national sorority, and Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary professional society.

As part of each lesson she incorporates music theory, harmony and rhythm study and through the medium of the piano she strives to communicate a love and appreciation for the fine arts.

For more information please call 383-1487.

Cosby Show benefit

The Cohasset Education Foundation task force members and new directors welcome supporters at a garden reception before the 9 p.m. Bill Cosby Music Circus show, Saturday, Aug. 29.

To order last minute tickets for the Cosby show, please call Stephen Hart's office (383-6111) during the day, or Clark Chatterton (383-0560) at night. Tickets are $50 and $45, and checks are payable to the Cohasset Education Foundation.

Everyone who orders one of the 200 reserved tickets through the foundation receives an invitation to the pre-show party. Foundation President Brian McKenney hopes that invited guests Bill and Camille Cosby will come to show their personal support for public education.

The Cohasset Education Foundation plans to apply for grants from myriad sources beyond Cohasset, including individuals, businesses, the government, and other foundations. The new board of directors includes Attorney Judithann (Ojerholm) Murphy, who will assist in grantwriting. Judithann, an administrative law magistrate, is also a partner in Associated Grantwriters of Massachusetts, Inc., a tax-exempt, nonprofit, organization.

Directors will also explore opportunities for business partnerships similar to that between the Springfield Public Schools and Mitre Corp. (Boston Globe, Sunday, August 16, 1992) Mitre is a high-tech, private, nonprofit company that is providing technical assistance to teachers in order to aid in their classroom instruction and to develop standards that will make technological innovations affordable to school systems.

Afternoon enrichment

The Cohasset Aftershool Enrichment Program, which runs daily from 2:30 to 6 p.m. is enrolling for the 1992-93 school year. Enrollment is open to children Grades K through 6. The program offers a variety of arts and crafts, organized games and sports, cooking activities and a quiet homework time.

Located at the Deer Hill School, transportation is provided by school bus from the Osgood School. Children may enroll for two to five days, and a drop-off program is available.

Registration forms may be picked up at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools, and must be returned with a $15 registration fee before September 4 for children attending the first week of school. For more information and tuition schedules, please call Director, Melissa Walker at 508-759-4994.

Library summer hours

Summer hours at the Paul Pratt Library, 106 South Main St., are: Monday and Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; closed Wednesday; Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Mood is upbeat as new school year starts

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

As 1,150 Cohasset kids savor their final week of summer vacation — school officials look forward to the sounds of hundreds of pairs of sneakers pounding the hall floors again.

"We're enthusiastic about school opening," says Supt. Stephen Hart.

The mood among administrators is definitely upbeat — and a little monetary help from the state doesn't hurt.

"There's a positive atmosphere in general this year with the added monies available," Hart says. "It's recognized that education is important and should be supported."

Hart is referring to the $100 per student in new state aid to education (about $110,000 for Cohasset) being made available to qualifying cities and towns throughout the Commonwealth this school year.

Cohasset kids in grades one through 12 start school Thursday, Sept. 10

Seventh graders should report to the junior/senior high school at 9 a.m. Wednesday, Sept. 9 for a special orientation program.

Kindergarten kids have a staggered start with half going Thursday and and the other half Friday. Letters explaining who goes on which day were sent home to parents. For the first time in Cohasset, this year students entering kindergarten must by five years old by Sept. 1.

Lunch on Thursday is grilled hamburger on a bun or chicken salad sandwich on wheat with lettuce and tomato, fruit cup, chocolate pudding with topping, and milk. A la carte choices include pizza or nachos.

Friday's menu includes cheese pizza or tuna salad on Search is on for new police chief

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Despite demands from Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle to look in-house for a replacement for the police chief, selectmen will extend their search to the New England area.

At Monday's selectmen's meeting, Laugelle objected to any search which extended past the town's borders.

"I don't want us to consider using anyone from the outside," he said.

"We haven't had too good luck using anyone from the outside so far."

Efforts to reach Laugelle Tuesday to explain his comments were unsuccessful.

Police Chief Joseph M. Kealey notified selectmen Aug. 12 that he would be leaving the department.

Laugelle added that by not promoting from within the ranks, the town was discouraging employees who hope

Committee on hold until cesspools are defined

When is a cesspool a cesspool?

The lack of a concrete answer to that question caused selectmen to postpone the appointment of an ad hoc committee to upgrade cesspools Monday.

In response to increased pressure from the state to upgrade cesspools to modern standards, health agent Joseph R. Godzik asked selectmen to appoint a committee to oversee the charge.

The possibility of having to upgrade has drawn criticism from several cesspool owners, some who would face replacement costs of up to $40,000.

However, it is still unclear which cesspools would be affected.

The problem, according to Godzik, is that communities have been given little guidance by the state in determining which cesspools must be upgraded.

"There are 800 to 900 in town using the broadest definition of what a cesspool is," Godzik said.

Selectman Merle S. Brown asked Godzik which criteria would be used.

"Is it a cesspool if it has a holding tank and a (leaching) field?" Brown asked.

Godzik said some towns have chosen one definition while others have chosen another.

Generally speaking, a cesspool is a below-ground pit for holding and dispersing wastewater.

Selectmen Chairman Jane O. Goedecke said the health board should decide what a cesspool is and avoid putting the burden to define that term on the ad

Media bashed at Republican gala

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset's Polly Logan was back in her element Sunday.

The Republican state committee woman hosted party faithful in a post-convention celebration at the Beach House, Herring Run, in Scituate.

After attending Republican conventions since 1968, Logan stayed home this year.

But despite giving the Grand Old Party a piece of her mind — as Logan appeared to have in a recent report in the local daily paper — she was decidedly upbeat Sunday about the party and its chances in November.

Special guest at the event was Nancy Bush Ellis, President George Bush's sister.

Logan said her comments about the crowd at the convention — whose make up she described in a Patriot Ledger article as predominantly white, male, and old — was meant to depict those cheering for Republican presidential nomination contender Pat Buchanan, a man whose views are too far right for her.

There was no convention bashing Sunday.

This time, it was the ears of the media that were burning.

Several speakers including Ellis; Leon J. Lombardi, chairman of the Massachusetts Republican State Committee; and Rep. Peter Forman, House minority leader, lashed out at the press and television coverage of the Recreation meeting: not all fun and games

By Jeff Cutler
Mariner Correspondent

On Tuesday, the Cohasset recreation commission held a meeting inside town hall to report the status of summer programs, like the dog obedience class going on outside on the village green.

The commission agreed that during this summer they had accomplished a great deal which had been a benefit to the community. Park and recreation director, John Worley, said that $33,671 was raised through the playground alone, and the tennis and other sports

Open meeting request

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle was an outspoken critic of his peers' use of executive session Monday.

"The residents of this town should know everything," he said.

"A lot of times we go into executive session when we don't have to," he told the board.

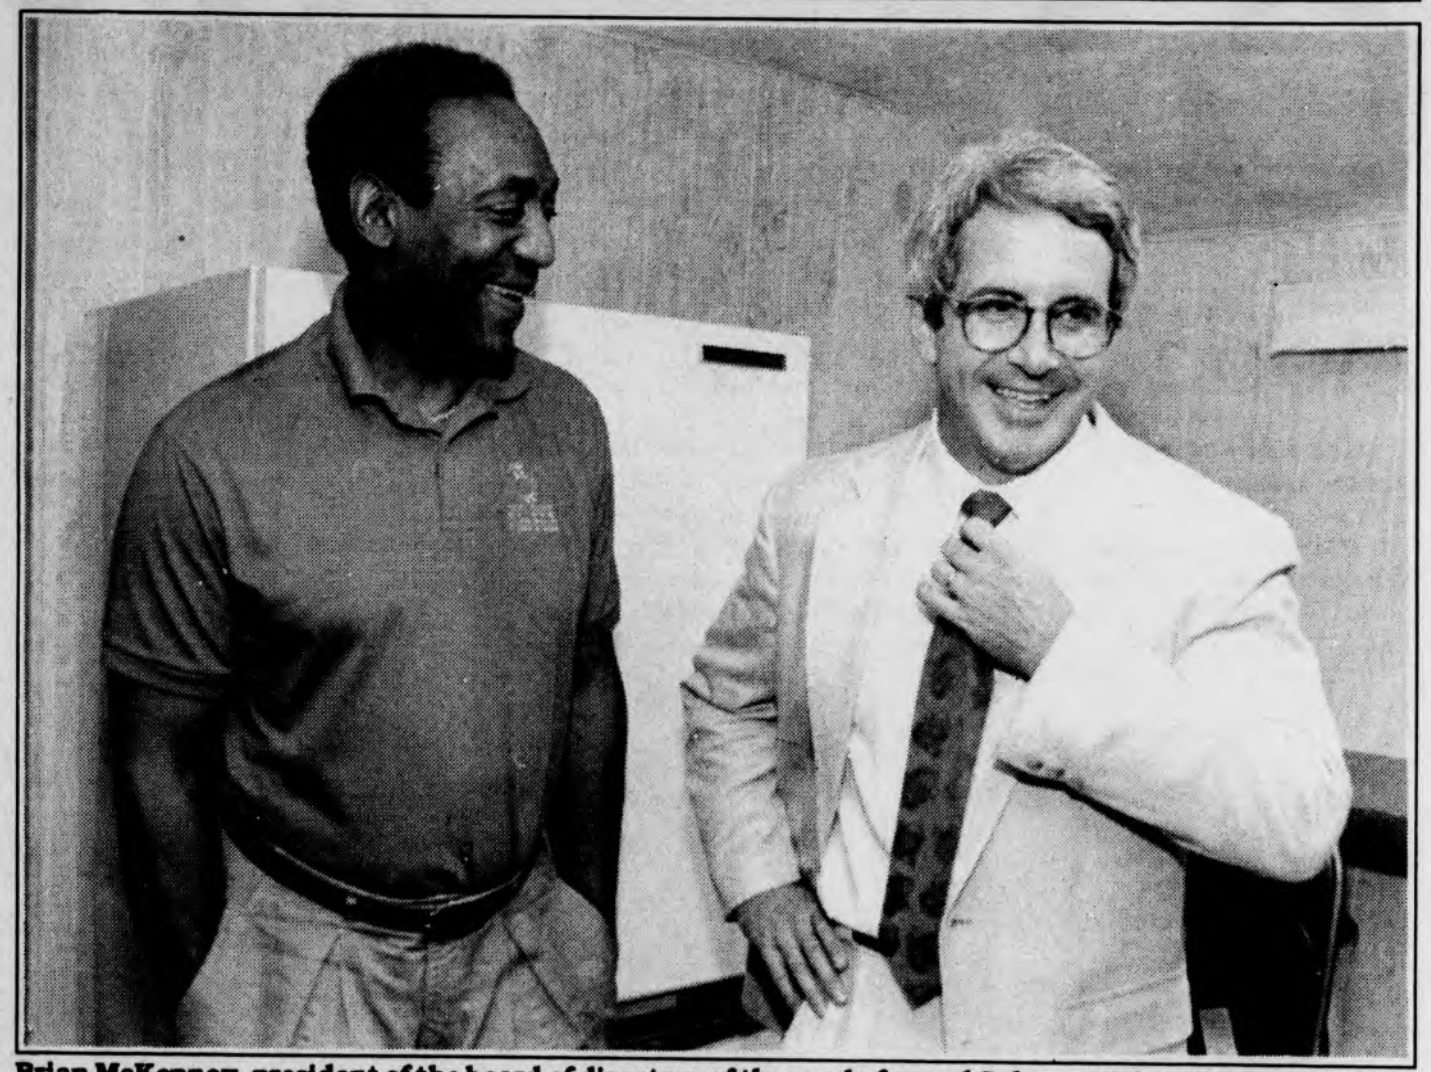
Laugelle's remarks were prompted by the board's refusal to publicly address town employees' concern regarding a "health and safety" issue in the work-place.

Carol Oteri-Puffer, president of the Konohasset Clerical and Custodial Union, sent selectmen a letter listing several employee concerns. Selectmen did not read the letter aloud or divulge its contents, except to say it regarded, among other things, a "health issue."

Oteri-Puffer, who was present for the meeting, asked selectmen to respond to the letter.

Selectmen Chairman Jane O. Goedecke said Oteri-Puffer's use of union stationery, and inclusion of union rules in the letter, precluded any discussion of the issue in open session.

Oteri-Puffer said the letter represents the concerns of union and non-union personnel in town hall. She said she was unaware that her use of union stationery would prevent discussion of the issues raised in her letter that evening.



Goedecke said because of the union tone of the letter, the issues would have to be discussed in executive session with the board's labor attorney.

"You are union and we are management. We don't just sit down and chat informally in front of the cameras," she said.

Laugelle objected.

"It's a health issue, not a union issue," he said.

Goedecke said selectmen would discuss the contents of the letter immediately following the selectmen's meeting in executive session.

Brian McKenney, president of the board of directors of the newly formed Cohasset Education Foundation, chats with Bill Cosby before Cosby's second performance at the Music Circus Saturday. Part of the proceeds from about 180 tickets for the show (about $2,800) benefitted the foundation which plans to raise enough money for a computer lab at the Osgood School. Equipment grant for dump

The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) awarded Cohasset a free roll-off container for the dump.

The container is valued at $3,385.

In a letter from DEP Commissioner Daniel Greenbaum to selectmen, Greenbaum said Cohasset received the equipment grant award because the town "demonstrates both the commitment and ability to enhance recycling in your community."

Main St. crosswalk

There will be a new crosswalk painted on North Main Street between the duck pond and the Community Center.

Selectmen agreed to put a crosswalk between the two areas after receiving a letter by Paula Buick of 3 Highland Avenue.

Buick said the crosswalk would help ensure the safety of area children who cross North Main Street on their way to school.

Selectmen were unable to grant Buick's other request: that the crosswalk be painted green because of the high cost of green paint.

Fire district grant

Cohasset is one of five neighboring communities which have banded together and applied for a $50,000 grant for a possible regional fire district.

The other communities in the district are Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate.

State Senator Robert L. Hedlund wrote a letter to Mary Padula, Secretary of Communities and Development for the state, supporting the grant request.

The money would help the towns hire a consultant to study a regional fire district further.

Blood drive planned

The next Cohasset Community Red Cross Blood Drive is Tuesday, Sept. 15. The drive takes place at The First Parish House on Cohasset Common from 2 to 7 p.m.

Past donors will receive a scheduling call from their group promoter.

New donors are invited to call the Cohasset Blood Drive chairpersons, Shirley and Jack Cibelli, at 383-2974.

Absentee ballots set

Absentee ballots are now available at the town clerk's office for the State Primary Tuesday, Sept. 15. You may apply for an absentee ballot if you will be out of town, have a physical disability or because of religious beliefs.

Absentee voting may be done in the office of the town clerk during regular business hours until noon Sept. 14.

A written signed request for a ballot may be sent to the town clerk and one will be mailed out. Included on the application should be your name as registered, which party's ballot you desire, your registration address, precinct, the address to which you wish the ballot sent and your signature. Applications may also be picked up at the office.

If you need further information, please call the Town Clerk's office at 383-9900 ext. 105, 106 or 107.

The ratio law

Police Chief Joseph M. Kealey's annual salary is $56,000.

The 1991 Cohasset town report shows the Kealey's earnings as $67,340.

Cohasset Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said the $11,000 discrepancy represents a payment the town made to the chief because it was bound by the "ratio law."

The ratio law is a state law in which police and fire chiefs' pay is determined through a formula in which their salaries are based on the salaries of the people who report to them, Doyon explained.

A former town by-law referenced the ratio law and selectmen felt bound to make up the difference between what the chiefs were earning and what they would earn under the ratio law.

Town meeting has since changed the by-laws. But a settlement was reached with the police chief and (former) fire chief for the intervening years while the ratio law was in effect for Cohasset, Doyon said.

He said the $11,000 settlement for Kealey who is stepping down in March is not figured into the chief's retirement benefit.

No leads on heist

Cohasset police still have no leads on the Aug. 18 early-morning burglary at the Radio Shack in Cushing Plaza.

"It's hard with the smash and grabs," Police Sgt. Brian Noonan said. "We had a cruiser there in four-to-five minutes."

Police said burglars threw a rock through the front door and escaped with cellular telephones and police scanners.

Teens injured in fiery crash; charges filed

Three South Shore teenagers were fighting for their lives in separate hospitals Wednesday following a fiery one-car crash on Gannett Road, North Scituate, shortly after 10:30 p.m. Monday night.

Jeffrey J. Bowen, 17, of 45 Pope's Lane, Hingham, identified as the driver of a 1989 Lincoln Town Car, was flown to Boston City Hospital by a New England Life Flight helicopter that responded from Worcester, police and fire officials said.

He sustained multiple trauma and remains in stable condition, a hospital spokesman said.

Cosmo C. DeVellis Jr., 18, of 107 Sedgewick Dr., Scituate, was listed in good condition at South Shore Hospital in South Weymouth, Wednesday morning. He underwent surgery for shoulder injuries Tuesday.

Sarah Kirk, 16, of 254 South Main St., Cohasset, was transferred Tuesday from South Shore Hospital to Brigham and Women's Hospital's intensive care unit in Boston where she is receiving care for chest and internal injuries.

As of Wednesday morning she was listed in critical, but stable, condition.

Norwell and Cohasset ambulances transported the two passengers to South Shore Hospital.

Scituate police officer W. Michael Stewart, the investigating officer, said the car was traveling in excess of 65 miles an hour, heading toward North Scituate Village, when it apparently went out of control, braking for some 173 feet before crashing into a boulder and flipping over.

The speed limit in the residential area is posted at 40 miles an hour.

When Stewart arrived at the scene of the accident, the two passengers were outside the car, and Bowen was lying on the ceiling of the car, trying to climb out the passenger side window of the smoke-filled vehicle as flames from the engine were licking the dashboard and carpeting.

Stewart pulled Bowen out of the car as two other officers, Sgt. Brian Stewart and Patrolman Michael O'Hara extinguished the flames.

Before they could remove Bowen from the car, however, civilians assisted the police in moving Kirk away from the car. She was found lying on the ground between the car and the huge rock, police said.

Police immediately summoned a medical helicopter and ambulances from neighboring towns. A Scituate fire engine and the town ambulance responded, along with the advanced life support paramedic unit from South Shore Hospital.

The helicopter originally was expected to land at Scituate High School, but with just one car in the North Scituate Village parking lot, next to the post office, the 'copter landed there.

That site was just a short distance away from the accident.

About the same time that night Sgt. Stewart said police and firefighters were summoned to two other calls — a gas grill fire on a house deck and a medical emergency where an eight-month-old baby tumbled down some stairs.

Police said they believed the car was owned by a Carlisle woman.

A woman motorist, traveling with her two children, told police she swerved out of the way of the Lincoln Town Car before it smashed into the boulder west of Kathy's Path and Gannett Road.

Police said the accident was still under investigation. Police are charging Bowen with driving under the influence of alcohol, driving so as to endanger, speeding and failing to travel within marked lanes.

RTF regulations set

The Board of Health amended the Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) Regulations for resident/hauler use, a summary of which follows:

The regulation defines various types of wastes to include recyclables, garbage, rubbish, refuse, special wastes, bulky waste, commercial waste and household waste.

The RTF may be used by residents who have a current sticker purchased at the board of health or the RTF for waste generated at their residence only. Persons who recycle must also purchase a sticker by August 1, to be admitted to the RTF. Certain businesses may also purchase a permit. Landscapers may deposit leaf and yard waste from Cohasset without a permit. Violators may be fined $25.

The RTF is open Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Wastes or recyclables must be placed in their appropriate area. Refuse must not be allowed to spill from a vehicle carrying litter. Certain items are prohibited: demolition waste from contractors, stumps, automobiles, toxic and/or special wastes, large animals and septage. Brush, including Christmas trees, is accepted.

Search for chief is on . . .

to work their way up the departmental ladder.

Fire Captain Robert D. Silvia, who was at Monday's meeting, echoed Laugelle's sentiments.

"You have quite a few individuals in the department who would do a good job," he said.

Selectmen Chairman Jane O. Goedecke said the town was not excluding members of Cohasset Police from applying for the chief 's position.

Rather, she said, selectmen wanted others to be included in the search so the town finds the best qualified candidate.

A search sub-committee consisting of selectmen Martha Gjesteby and Michael Sullivan will review resumes with Executive Secretary Gregory J. Doyon and decide which applicants will be granted an interview.

Gjesteby said local candidates will have at least one advantage over outsiders.

"All applicants for the town will be interviewed," and avoid the sub-committee's screening process, she said.

"It's a courtesy they should be accorded," she added.

Advertisements for the position will run shortly in The Boston Globe and the Massachusetts Municipal Association Beacon, a trade publication sent to community officials across the state, according to Doyon.

The advertisement for the police chief position says the "salary is negotiable." Initially, the draft for the ad read that the position would pay approximately $56,000 — Kealey's annual salary.

Selectmen said they would have a better bargaining position if a dollar amount was not stated. Sullivan added that the amount was too high for someone new to the job.

"We shouldn't give the impression we want to pay $56,000 because I don't think we want to pay that," he said.

Doyon said he did not know what salary range would be used for the next police chief.

Another language change to the draft of the advertisement was prompted by Sullivan.

"We want someone for whom an important part of the job is a strong community relationship," he said.

Applicants must also have an Associate's Degree in Criminal Justice or the equivalent in experience.

Selectmen said they hope to fill the vacancy by March 17, Kealey's last day.

Kealey notified selectmen in August in accordance with his contract that states either side must give six months notice not to extend the contract at the end of its term.

In the event a suitable applicant is not found by March 17, Doyon said an acting chief will be appointed.

Cesspools . . .

hoc committee to upgrade cesspools.

She also asked her peers to invite more people to apply for membership on the ad hoc committee so it reflected both people with cesspools and those without.

Selectmen Michael H. Sullivan objected to the creation of the committee altogether, calling it premature.

"The bottom line is we have 'X' number of systems not up to code and we have to decide if we are going to enforce (the upgrading) or not," Sullivan said.

He said the town should decide whether or not they are going to enforce the state's mandate before appointing a committee.

Godzik wasn't sure how immediate the need to upgrade is.

He said the letter he received from the state "reminded" boards of health that cesspools are not grand-fathered and should be brought up to modern standards.

"However, they did not specify a date it should be done by," he added.

Health board member Robert V. Davenport attended the selectmen's meeting roll with lettuce, cole slaw, apple, jello with topping and milk. A la carte items are chicken fillets and french fries.

The price for students for a standard lunch is $1.35. Milk bought separately is 35 cents.

Teachers report to school on Sept. 8 and 9 for two days of meetings. At noon Wednesday, the guest speaker for a staff luncheon is state Associate Commissoner of Special Education Mary Beth Fafard, Hart says.

OSGOOD SCHOOL

Principal Linda Whitney says the enrollment at Osgood is hovering around 378.

The final phase of carpeting at the school is completed so all classrooms now have carpet.

New faces at Osgood include third-grade teachers Barbara Myers and Debbie Webster and physical education teacher Michael Weydt who returns to Cohasset after teaching a couple of years in Hanover.

Whitney says the Osgood staff is just about ready.

"We're excited. The new teachers have been in to set up their rooms. We're getting there," she says.

DEER HILL

Deer Hill kids will be treated to a newly resurfaced and refinished gym floor when they return to school Thursday.

Incorporated into the fourth grade curriculum is a new emphasis on activities that integrate math and science, says Principal Kenneth Ekberg.

A new face at Deer Hill is art teacher Ann Berman, who taught in Marshfield. And Susan Horrigan, who filled in last year as a long-term substitute, is teaching fourth grade.

Counting the special needs classes for the South Shore Collaborative, the total enrollment at Deer Hill is about 300, Ekberg says.

The Deer Hill day gets underway at 8:25 a.m.; school lets out at 2:25 p.m.

JUNIOR/SENIOR HIGH

The junior/senior high school welcomes Melissa Barry who will teach Spanish part-time.

Double sessions of sports practices started this week, says Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher.

"Kids and staff have been stopping in," she says.

Enrollment at the junior/senior high is about 500. The school begins at 7:45 a.m.; dismissal is at 2 p.m.

Gallagher says she's looking forward to the new school year.

"We're ready to go!" she says.

and said there was a question as to whether the upgrading was required or not.

He said he represented the minority opinion of the board of health and did not believe the cesspools should be upgraded.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle agreed with Davenport.

"The board of health should let sleeping dogs lie," he said.

"For years this (upgrading regulation) has been on the books, I understand, and it has never been enforced," Laugelle said.

A representative of the selectmen will attend the next board of health meeting, and discuss their concerns with the board before further action is taken, Goedecke said.

TIM WHITE IS A PRO-BUSINESS DEMOCRAT.

(ISN'T THAT A CONTRADICTION IN TERMS?)

Tim White is not your typical Democrat running for State Senate. First of all, he's not a career politician. He's a small business owner. He knows what it takes to meet a payroll.

He also knows that a lot of Democrats are anti-business ... an easy target for taxation. The result: businesses leave the state, or worse, go under.

Tim knows businesses are not in business simply to pay taxes. Rather, he believes they should be encouraged to grow and prosper. And as they grow, they create jobs.

So when Massachusetts has more people working, Massachusetts has more people paying taxes. (Which is not to be confused with people paying more taxes.)

Hence, towns have more revenue they need for schools, fire and police departments, libraries, and public works.

That's why Tim White wants to take a strong, Pro-Business from the Democrat side of the aisle for a change. message to Beacon Hill ...

If you're ready for change and want to see businesses grow and more jobs come to the South Shore, vote for the Pro-Business Democrat. Vote Tim White for State Senate in the primary on September 15.

You're mad. You're right.

Vote Tim White
The Pro-Business Democrat for State Senate.

around town

❑ Two Cohasset residents have recently been named to the dean's list at Boston University. Hats off to Douglas W. Moe and Tara P. Volungis!

And that's not all.! Tara Volungis not only made the dean's list at Boston University but she completed two years of college in one year and will be entering her Junior Year at BU in September! Tara attends the School of Management at BU.

We sure congratulate you Tara!!

❑ We begin by sending hearty congratulations to former selectman Henry Ainslie and his bride of 50 years! Henry and Winifred recently celebrated the fiftieth event with their family (four children, eight grandchildren) at a wonderful dinner party.

What a nifty way to celebrate your Golden Anniversary folks; here's to many more!

❑ Here's some happy news...Millard MacNeil is well on the road to recovery after his recent heart attack. Just keep following the doctor's orders, you'll be as good as new in no time!

❑ The class of 1942, Cohasset High School of course! Plans are under way for their 50th reunion, which will be held Sept. 18 at the Golden Rooster. There were 29 graduates, 21 of which are still living, and they are coming from as far away as California for the event.

There is one class member that they cannot locate, George Gelinas. If you know of his whereabouts, please call Gordon Flint at 383-1837 or one of the following committee members: Mary Brennock, Ralph Perroncello, Nancy Snowdale, Ruth White, or Connie Jones.

Here's hoping we get a full report afterwards. It should be interesting and FUN!

❑ Two hundred sixty-one undergraduates have been named to the faculty honors list for the fall semester at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn. To earn this honor, a student must achieve a semester grade point average of A-minus or better, and Matthew Drinkwater did just that! Matthew, son of Marifrances McIntosh of 609 Jerusalem Rd., and Gary G. Drinkwater of Weymouth, received this honor for the spring semester. He is a psychology major and he is entering his senior year at Trinity.

❑ Congratulations go to Torin Sweeney, a former physical education teacher at the Joseph Osgood school! Torin has been hired by the Carver School system, and will be teaching at the Gov. John Carver School.

As everyone whose son or daughter had Torin for a teacher knows, he is full of innovative ideas and enthusiasm, the kiddos love him! Our loss is certainly Carver's gain. Torin, you will be missed and loved by all. Good luck and know we love you.

❑ A salute to Kathleen M. O'Sullivan of 51 Forest Avenue who was awarded the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute Medal. That's great!

❑ Ta-Dah!...a new South Shore theater company, Stetson Underground Repertory Theater, has been formed and Cohasset's own Sherry Campbell is one of those at the helm. Stetson Underground will be based at Wilding Memorial Hall in Hingham and its first production, "Inherit the Wind," will be staged there Sept. 18-27.

Good luck, "Break a Leg."

❑ Hats off to Betsy Detwiler, the owner of Cohasset's Buttonwood Books and Toys, for having Anne Rivers Siddons at her store to sign her new book, Colony.

We heard lots of great things about the event; there were a lot of happy people from all over the South Shore.

❑ Jean MacDonald Wichert is a GRANDMOTHER! Abigail Elizabeth Douglas was born Aug. 24, a happy, healthy little girl who you can be sure will be loved long and well by all!

Enjoy that baby girl!

❑ A standing ovation goes to Lester Hiltz who won the Hatherly Cup Golf Tournament. Lester has pulmonary fibrosis disease, heart problems, diabetes and cataracts, has to carry an oxygen tank wherever he goes, and should be bedridden.

He played 45 holes of golf in 90-degree weather and used special equipment to play, but he did it, and he won...between Lester and Massachusetts Respiratory Hospital and the TPN he did it and we are so proud of you and your efforts! Bob Mullin, his friend, also helped make the whole thing possible.

❑ Be sure to stop by the Bank of Boston on Rte. 3A and see the display of two models depicting the Cohasset Lightkeeper Corporation's plan for the preservation and public use of the Minot Ledge Lightkeepers Residence.

❑ It's hard to believe that Sharon Becker isn't a Cohasset resident anymore, she did so much for Cohasset! All of the recycling, lots of new health rules, lots of time on various committees, she did it all! We shall certainly miss her and her expertise, and wish her well in her retirement. (Can a busy gal like that ever truly retire? We don't think so!)

scout news

Troop 28 news

Six boys from Troop 28, Cohasset, spent the week of July 19-26 at Camp Squanto, Plymouth. At a recent Court of Honor, they were recognized for their achievements at this Old Colony Council camp. The boys earned the following merit badges:

- Lodovico Sestito — Fingerprinting, Pioneering, Orienteering, Small-Boat Sailing.
- Dave Christoffel — Fingerprinting, Lifesaving, Pioneering.
- Chris Laas — Pioneering, Camp Cooking Certificate.
- Mark Whitman — Pioneering, Camp Cooking Certificate.
- Chad Whitman — Pioneering, Orienteering, Small-Boat Sailing.
- Jay Nothnagle — Communications, award for Eagle Week participation.

Two boys, Dave Christoffel and Mark Whitman, were nominated for Order of the Arrow, an honorary camping organization. When inducted, they will join Lodovice Sestito, an Ordeal member, and Jay Nothnagle, a Brotherhood member, in OA.

New Scouts Kevin DeVito, Greg Boyne, John Paul Laugelle, and Justin Maitland, all recently crossed over from Webelos, received their Scout rank and mother's pins. Tony Bramblett earned his First Class rank and the Aviation merit badge. Tony has been a Boy Scout only a little more than a year and has worked hard to progress so rapidly to First Class.

Howie Motenko presented his coveted Scoutmaster Awards for 1992:

- Most Scout Spirit — Buck Hubbell.
- Best Attendance — Chad Whitman.
- Best Camper — Mark Whitman.
- Most Improved Scout — Chris Laas.

The Big Dig

You can't get there from here.

And it sure is tough to get here from there.

So, let's face it — transportation the way Henry Ford designed it — can be a big headache.

A solution to easing automotive gridlock is restoration of train service to the South Shore.

But until last week, that idea was stalled at the "Entering Hingham" sign.

Now a new wrinkle in the Old Colony Railroad restoration saga adds a glimmer of hope not only for those Hingham folk who aren't against rail transportation — but for Hingham's neighbors to the north and south.

Engineers, contracted by the MBTA, say a tunnel is a "feasible" alternative to the surface rail through downtown Hingham.

It would be expensive — adding 20 percent to the cost of the Old Colony Railroad restoration project. But nevertheless — it is still a possibility worth considering.

As Charles Chittick, Hingham MBTA Advisory Board Representative said in a telephone interview:

"In terms of the next century or two, it's not very expensive."

And the tunnel could solve the potential problems of routing the train above ground along the existing right-of-way which goes right through the fragile Lincoln National Register Historic District.

The deep bore tunnel would start at New Bridge Street near the South Shore Country Club and run in a straight line for about two miles surfacing again on Route 3A west of the rotary, authorities say.

We are not engineers and don't profess to know about the technology involved in constructing a deep tunnel under Hingham.

But the tunnel could be the compromise needed among Hingham rail proponents and opponents to get the project back on track.

As we get ready to embark on a new century — the restoration of train service should be part of an overall transportation picture for the South Shore.

A federally-ordered new study to examine alternatives to building the Greenbush line through Hingham Square will take up to 18 months to complete.

Only after public hearings — where all of us can provide input — will a preferred alternative be selected.

So maybe this time if we opt for the tunnel — the restoration of the Old Colony Line to Greenbush will become a reality and bring Hingham into the 21st century while at the same time preserving the town's precious past.

chamber chatter

by Paula Knowles

The emergence months ago of Ross Perot as a possible third party candidate for President was, to me, more than just an interesting phenomenon. The more I heard of Mr. Perot's philosophies, the more I became aware of how long it had been since I had been really excited by a state or national election, how long it had been since I had actually cast my vote for a candidate, not just against a person or ideology.

The "Perot Phenomenon," as the networks and newsprint came to call it, was not about the probability of massive change as much as it was about the possibility of the people effecting that or any other change in our country. By the time it became apparent that Mr. Perot could not come up with any feasible ways to implement his ideas and then dropped out of the race entirely, he had already accomplished his purpose. He had done his job quite well, for his candidacy had mobilized both the so-called "Vietnam Era" voters and the "Baby Boomers" and he had gotten millions of disaffected and disgusted 40, 50, and 60-something voters back into the fray.

I was in the early stages of redecorating a bedroom — turning it into a den, sewing room, escape hatch — during this time, and because the TV was hooked up to cable, I began channel hopping to find programs that I could listen to without having to follow a pictorial plot line. So, I eventually found both CNN and C-SPAN, and within a week became not just a devotee, but a junkie. I also became very angry.

You see, what I was hearing and seeing on live interviews and full length coverage of events, speeches, call-in shows and town meetings had little or nothing to do with what I saw reported on the network news or daily tabloids.

The USA Today interviews of the President and Mr. Clinton were interesting when excerpts were published; but the full interviews, taped and aired by C-SPAN, were far different and much more detailed and compelling. In other words, I became personally aware of how the media was manipulating me. My anger and disgust expanded.

Cable TV, with stations like CNN and C-SPAN, is offering the public an invaluable tool during this election season. It is offering us the opportunity to hear what each candidate is really saying, in total, not just the 60-second sound bite of the day. And this is very important. If we, as voters, take our duty to vote seriously, we need to be able to make our voting decision based on factual information.

Group is grateful for support

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Education Foundation thanks all its supporters who gathered at a garden reception before the Bill Cosby performance Saturday, Aug. 29, to welcome the new board of directors.

Thanks to Gina and Rustam DeVitre, our gracious hosts, whose home is the former Bancroft estate teahouse.

We appreciated Jane Bancroft Cook's childhood memories of this historic piece of Cohasset.

With the skillful help of the Music Circus and friends, who secured the tickets, set up the tent and tables, and arranged a photo opportunity with Bill Cosby, our debut was a resounding success.

We thank the members of the board of selectmen, the advisory committee, the school committee, and the PSO who came to show their support.

Finally, thanks to the task force members who have worked since January to develop the foundation, and who prepared a bountiful buffet for Saturday's opening.

As we begin a new academic year, the founding directors of the Cohasset Education Foundation are committed to a goal of educational excellence, with the support of innovative private resources.

We will work in partnership with the teachers, the administration and School Committee, the PSO, and other local organizations, and we believe our efforts will benefit the town of Cohasset as well as the schools.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS

	Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) 722-1646 Room 416B	Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) 722-2800 ext.7957 Room 134
	VOTE
THE HOUSE AND SENATE. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on five roll calls from the July 28 legislative session dealing with Governor Weld's budget vetoes. There were no roll calls in the House and Senate last week. The Senate has not yet acted on these vetoes and may consider them in September.
AFDC (H 5800)—House 116-35, overrode Governor Weld's veto reduction of $385,000 (from $700.3 million to $699.9 million) in funding for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC). Weld also vetoed a section requiring the state to apply for a federal waiver to allow AFDC recipients who get jobs to keep earnings of up to 33 percent more than their grant. Override supporters said this "fill the gap" provision is positive welfare reform and will encourage these recipients to find work and will eventually reduce welfare expenditures. They also noted the $385,000 is necessary to properly fund the account. Override opponents said the account can be cut $385,000 based on current caseloads. They argued the "fill the gap" provision is well-intentioned but poorly drafted and noted Weld will soon file the proper language in his Welfare Reform Bill. (A "Yea" vote is for the $385,000 and for allowing recipients to keep more of their earnings. A "Nay" vote is against the $385,000 and against allowing recipients to keep more of their earnings).		1. N 2. N
PERSONAL CARE ATTENDANTS (H 5800)—House 112-32 and 114-30, overrode Governor Weld's vetoes of Medicaid budget language freezing standards for determining eligibility for personal care attendant services at those in effect in January. Override supporters said this will prevent the Weld administration from unfairly changing and tightening eligibility standards for those who need these services. Override opponents said this freeze allows the legislature to interfere with Executive Branch management decisions and will hinder the administration's attempts to get the Medicaid budget under control (A "Yea" vote is for the freeze in eligibility standards. A "Nay" vote is against it. Both roll calls are listed).		Y
PATROLS (H 5000)—House 78-69, favored but failed to gain the necessary two-thirds vote to override Governor Weld's veto of $55,000 of funding for MDC mounted patrols at Lynn Beach, King's Beach and Nahant Beach. Override supporters argued these patrols are important to prevent crime in these areas. Opponents argued this is one in a series of necessary cuts to ensure the budget is balanced. (A "Yea" vote is for the $55,000. A "Nay" vote is against the $55,000).		N
LIBRARY (H 5800)—House 111-34, overrode Governor Weld's veto of state reimbursement of $144,530 to Peabody for library construction. Override supporters argued this is another example of a small sum of money which is important to a particular city and yet was vetoed. Opponents said costs for library construction will be reimbursed for all eligible cities and towns in 1995 and argued this piecemeal approach is inappropriate. (A "Yea" vote is for the $144,530. A "Nay" vote is against it).		Y

"Y" means the Senator or Representative voted "Yes."
"N" means the Senator or Representative voted "No."
"NV" means the Senator or Representative did not vote.
"Present" means the Senator or Representative was present, but for one reason or another preferred not to be recorded on the issue. Many times a Legislator will vote "Present" because voting on the issue may be a conflict of interest because of outside occupation or interests. There are also other reasons, and readers are urged to contact their official directly.

Recreation department meeting . . .

programs also went well. According to Worley, "It was a successful summer, sports-camp wise."

Additionally, the group addressed the success of the Recreation Department Day Camp. Vice chairman Thomas Wigmore said, "I thought the program was well-run this year." Other members agreed and even though some minor problems with traffic signal did arise during the summer, camp was deemed a success.

A survey, given to both parents and children, was introduced and it showed a diverse reaction to the camp. Some comments ranged from Wonderful as usual to the exclamation that it was Too cheap! with a request for additional entertainment.

An event that the commission oversees is various band concerts during the summer. This year, the second concert wasn't held until Sept. 1, because of rain-outs, and the commission discussed the possibility of having the third concert after this summer. The options were to have the concert next June, or to schedule it in conjunction with an upcoming groundbreaking ceremony on Oct. 4, at the Minot Ledge Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island. Mary Muncey, a commission member, said she thought the idea was "nifty" and the group voted unanimously to try to schedule the concert for early next month.

Worley then explained to the commission that a large piece of equipment had not been ordered yet for Beachwood Playground because the contractor could not install it until October. He said, "It's a lot of equipment and rather than risk getting it here and having no place to store it" the commission would wait to place the order.

Renovations at the Deer Hill field were discussed and Peter Laugelle pointed out that to date, over $7000 had been invested by the town and other parties for repairs and improvements. He added, "The field is half done, it benefits nobody what-so-ever." Laugelle voiced his opinion that the field work shouldn't have started without funding put aside specifically for the project. And, he said, that some groups like the little league have "gone beyond" any expectations by raising funds for the field. "'Til the money comes in..." he said with a shrug.

Another agenda topic was the response to a recent request from the board of selectmen. They had been asked to list the work performed for the commission by the wire department. The answer was "fairly extensive," according to Worley, and mentioned more than half a dozen instances when the wire department helped an emergency situation or a planned development. He said, "We don't realize how much we depend on other departments to help us out." And added that most people in the general population think local boards don't work together. "I don't know where that comes from, there's a lot."

Worley also brought up the possibility of the recreation commission taking on a new responsibility. Last June, Worley received a call from the community center asking if an SAT preparation course could be administered by the commission. The duties, said Worley, "on our part, would be registrations primarily." He continued, "They would do the teaching and, like any other program....we would get ten percent of the gross revenues." All six members present agreed to go forward with seeing what this responsibility would entail.

The recreation commission briefly covered upcoming programs and wanted to make sure that soccer registration dates and times were noted The next time for registration is Thursday, Sept. 10, from 5 - 7 p.m. at town hall. A registration session is also planned for Saturday, Sept. 9, from 9 - 11 a.m., at town hall.

presidential race.

But Ellis did have some kind words for local weeklies.

"I'm crazy about local papers," she said. "They are so much fairer. I like local papers rather than the ghastly Boston papers."

Forman said the party shouldn't let the media run the show.

"Don't let the media dictate what happens in this state and this country," he said. Forman said the party has a record of positive change; he singled out the Boston Globe, and networks ABC, NBC, and CBS for biased reporting.

"Don't let us be undermined by the media," he told the group of about 65 people in attendance. The event attracted incumbent Republican state Senator Robert Hedlund — and Dan Daly and Michael Crossen who are vying for the Republican congressional nomination for the seat currently held by Democrat Gerry Studds — among other party officials and candidates.

Logan, who is pro-choice, says there is a place in the party for those whose views clash with the anti-abortion Republican platform.

She listed several notable Republican women in office or in the president's cabinet who share her views. Women, whose advice, Logan feels, the president if re-elected will listen to before making another appointment to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Ellis, who is also pro-choice, said she agrees with First Lady Barbara Bush that abortion shouldn't be a political issue but a private one.

Meet the democratic candidates for Ply/Nor State Senate

Chartis Langmaid

Democratic Party state Senate candidate Chartis Langmaid ranks job security and health care affordability as the primary concerns facing the state this campaign year.

She believes she is the people's choice to represent the Norfolk and Plymouth district because she has endured the hardships many voters are facing in today's economy.

"There's just a feeling right now that people are not in control of their lives, and I don't see government as an institution or an agency doing anything to help them," she said.

A 26-year resident of Cohasset and Scituate, Langmaid is a Wellesley College graduate and has served as a member of Cohasset's town government structure committee and as president of the league of women voters.

She has sat as an appointed member on the Cohasset housing partnership, the household hazardous waste disposal and citizen sewer advisory committees and on the First Parish Church committee.

She also has served on the Democratic town committee, the South Shore Coalition affordable housing task force and on the South Weymouth Naval Air Station study committee.

Langmaid is the mother of two recent college graduates, Bill and Jamie.

A widow, Langmaid cared for her husband Jack, who was disabled with rheumatoid arthritis, from 1974 until his death in 1987.

This experience has given her a working knowledge of the state's health care system which is in need of reform, she said.

If elected, Langmaid will push for a single payer health care system financed through taxation, and she doesn't believe employment should dictate health care eligibility.

"We should look at health care as a basic human right and need like we do with education," she said. "When you look at other countries that are thriving, they are countries that invest in their people, in their education and in their health care systems."

The economy needs of the state must also be addressed, she said.

"One of the responsibilities of the state is to facilitate people who want to open small businesses and free them from government over-regulation. . .

"In a more global sense, we should be helping restore industry and the economic areas which Massachusetts already has. By using our existing resources, we could greatly expand our ability to interact with the rest of the world."

She called for more equitable per pupil education spending to be included as part of the legislature's education reform package but stopped short of endorsing the elimination of teacher tenure.

"Education reform should primarily address what is the product of education.

"Is the system teaching young people how to handle the challenges they will face as adults?

"We need some reform. We need change in a positive way to compete in a global economy."

Langmaid supports environmental initiatives and is concerned with the potentially high cost to Hingham and Weymouth ratepayers of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

"There is concern about the environment particularly among women," she said. "They realize that we have some serious environmental problems, and they're concerned about how the next generation is going to deal with them, particularly because we are not investing in education."

Langmaid said Congress is not "tuned into the current economic desperation" and said she will fight to secure federal dollars for the MWRA plant.

She is a proponent of abortion rights coupled with increased health education and medical research to develop advanced birth control.

She says she will seek to empower women by enacting social policies to create a stronger, more independent economic force.

"I don't believe Mr. Hedlund really understands family issues and women's issues because he has had no experience with them. I have dealt with these issues directly."

Langmaid supports the Old Colony Commuter Rail restoration project, provided the money is used in a fashion that will guarantee ridership.

"The South Shore is the step-child of the state," she said. "We are the only Greater Boston community that does not have a commuter rail system.

"I totally support restoring all three lines to the South Shore but I want to make sure that it is going to be used. . . takes people where they want to go, get's them there on time and is affordable."

Brian McDonald

Getting people back to work is a central concern of State Senate candidate Brian McDonald.

McDonald, one of three democrats in the race for the Norfolk-Plymouth County District, said thousands of unemployed people could be working if the governor would release millions of dollars in federal transportation money to rebuild the state's bridges, roads, highways and other related infrastructure projects.

"I'd use the $363.5 million dollars in the federal transportation fund on road work," McDonald, a former welder at the Quincy Shipyard, said.

He added that recent studies put the number of unemployed laborers in the metro-Boston area at 50 percent.

"And many of those people live on the South Shore."

McDonald, who was a selectmen in Weymouth between 1985 to 1991, said he understands the needs and concerns of those on the South Shore.

He was a co-founder of the South Shore Coalition — an organization that helps communities find solutions to regional problems.

The release of the federal transportation money would be multiple and felt by communities across the South Shore and the state, McDonald said.

"The spin-off when we put thousands of the unemployed back to work is that we save on their unemployment costs.

"And they will begin buying items with the money they earn," he said.

McDonald is technically in those unemployment lines now. In what he called an unprecedented and political move, McDonald's employer — the state Department of Revenue (DOR)— did not grant McDonald an unpaid leave of absence to run for office, as has been past practice.

"Essentially, I'm on a voluntary layoff," he explained.

McDonald interprets the DOR's refusal to grant him an unpaid leave of absence as almost heartening.

"I think it is because they perceive me to be the strongest democrat.

"They tried to pressure me into staying," he said.

Chartis Langmaid of Cohasset and Timothy White of Hingham are the other democratic contenders for the State Senate seat.

Helping small businesses stay in business is another focal point of the McDonald campaign.

"I'd like to work with the banking commissioner to loosen restrictions for successful businesses which are meeting payroll," he said.

McDonald said the rise and subsequent fall in real estate values in the area has left many businesses holding notes worth more than today's market price for the property.

And many banks are calling in the notes, he said.

"Because of the false real estate values of the 80s, many businesses have notes that exceed 80 percent of the fair market value," he explained.

"I'd like to work with the banking commissioner (to loosen the call restrictions)," he said.

Another change McDonald said would help the economy is a single payer health care system.

Recent studies show the state can save over $2 billion annually in insurance costs if it used a universal health care system, according to McDonald.

"It would save duplicate costs, for blood tests, for instance, and processing," he said.

McDonald wants a private company to run the system.

"It would be put out to bid with a yearly performance review," he said.

"I'd propose a special commission to conduct the yearly review."

If the state switched to a single payer system, McDonald said, small businesses would feel the effects immediately and be freed of the "crushing" weight they currently assume in insurance costs.

Within the health care debate, improving women's health care is priority of McDonald.

"There is a lack of attention to breast cancer issues — and people should go to jail for those silicone breasts implants."

Regarding abortion, McDonald supports a woman's right to choose.

Proper schools are also integral to a thriving, well-staffed economy, McDonald said.

He advocates lengthening the school year and increasing state funding as part of an overall reform package.

McDonald, a product of Weymouth High School and University of Massachusetts, said he is deeply committed to public education.

McDonald said he supports restoration of the Old Colony Railroad, most importantly the Greenbush Line.

His interest in Old Colony is not new — McDonald said he organized the first South Shore meeting on the Greenbush Line in December, 1985.

Tim White

If you talk to Tim White long enough the distinction between Democrat and Republican becomes blurred.

And that's all right with White, the 38-year-old Hingham attorney who is seeking the Democratic nomination for state senator from the Norfolk-Plymouth District.

"I've been a lifelong Democrat," he said, "but it's time for a change, especially in Massachusetts. I'm a pro-business Democrat, a strong supporter of Paul Tsongas."

White said he sees nothing contradictory in a Democrat willing to go the extra yard to give business a break.

"Democrats have been tremendous at offering services to those who can't help themselves," he said. "But to do that you have to have the revenues.

"The best way to have the revenues is to have a healthy economy. It ties in perfectly. In Massachusetts it's challenging the status quo but I'm not afraid to do that."

White, ex-Walpole and a South Shore resident for 13 years in Scituate and Hingham, said there are "things you do and things you don't do" to help local businesses.

"Things to do are to promote tax incentives and the investment tax credit and a capital gains tax sculptured specifically to benefit Massachusetts business," he said.

"In this day and age, a wise thing would be a waiver of the corporate excise tax to start-up businesses on a temporary basis to see if we can generate some new companies out there.

"A lot of people who are out of work and can't find a job are saying, 'I've got nothing else to do. I'm going out and start my own business.' Those are the folks who need help.

"There are things we don't want to do. We don't want any more regulations on these poor businesses. We don't want more taxes on these businesses."

White's favorite horror story involves

(See page 15)

Meet the candidates . . .

White . . .

the fate of a Hingham catalogue company.

"It was a wonderful member of our community for 15 years," he said . "It had 50 employees. This spring, they moved out to Arizona. I called the president to find out why he left.

"'I'm a Massachusetts native,' he said. 'I still have property in Marshfield. But the business climate in Massachusetts is terrible. It's much better out here. I pay half the rent, half the insurance costs, half the taxes.'

"More than that, he took 10 families with him. He took part of our community to Arizona. We can't afford that."

White described himself as "pro-choice under the Roe vs. Wade standards" which permit abortion through the second trimester.

"The abortion issue has certainly haunted the Republican party," he said. "But it is also haunting the Democrats, too.

"I am pro-choice but I was extremely disappointed that the governor of Pennsylvania, Bob Casey, was prohibited from speaking at the convention.

"I always thought the Democratic party was the inclusionary party, that it was okay to have different ideas. I hope we can change that."

White said he is familiar with child care issues since he and his wife, Betsy, who has a fulltime job in marketing with Ocean Spray, the cranberry company, have needed help in caring for their three children, Allison 12, Christopher 10 and Katy 4.

"We have been very fortunate," he said. "Right now my sister-in-law takes care of the kids but we had outside child care when we started out so I certainly recognize the difficulties that are involved.

"We are not Ozzie and Harriet anymore. We are a product of the '90s. We have different needs in the '90s than we did in the '60s."

White said he would like to see the MWRA taken out of the authority business and placed under control of the state government.

"This business of authorities has outlived its usefulness," he said. "When you don't have anybody to answer to, that's not what democracy is about. It's time for a change there also."

White said his experience campaigning in the seven towns that make up the district has taught him that "people are mad; their primary concern is for jobs; and they are looking for change, fresh faces."

"It's time for a change," he said. "The Democratic party needs to become more pro-economic growth. If there is no growth, there can be not golden eggs."

Results inaccurate

After a review of all report documents associated with the May 14 sampling of the monitoring wells near the Cohasset Heights Landfill, the engineering firm conducting the testing realized it mislabelled the samples.

The corrected data indicates that no significant changes have occurred in groundwater quality in samples from the five monitoring wells.

In a letter to the board of health SAIC, the engineering firm, apologized for the error.

"We deeply regret that our client has suffered undue and adverse public exposure due to inaccurate reporting rather than any actual changes in water quality," project manager, A. Raymond Quinn wrote.

Bill Weld and Joe Malone agree...

"I can think of no one better to represent the interests of the taxpayers on Capitol Hill."

Governor Bill Weld

"Everything Dan Daly does is first-rate. He knows what it takes to create jobs, which he's done in both the public and private sector. And Dan has the character to go down to Washington and take on the system."

Treasurer Joe Malone

Dan Daly is a decorated Vietnam veteran, dedicated family man, and successful businessman whose #1 priority in Congress will be to create jobs and make America competitive again. On September 15th, vote for a stronger Massachusetts and a stronger America.

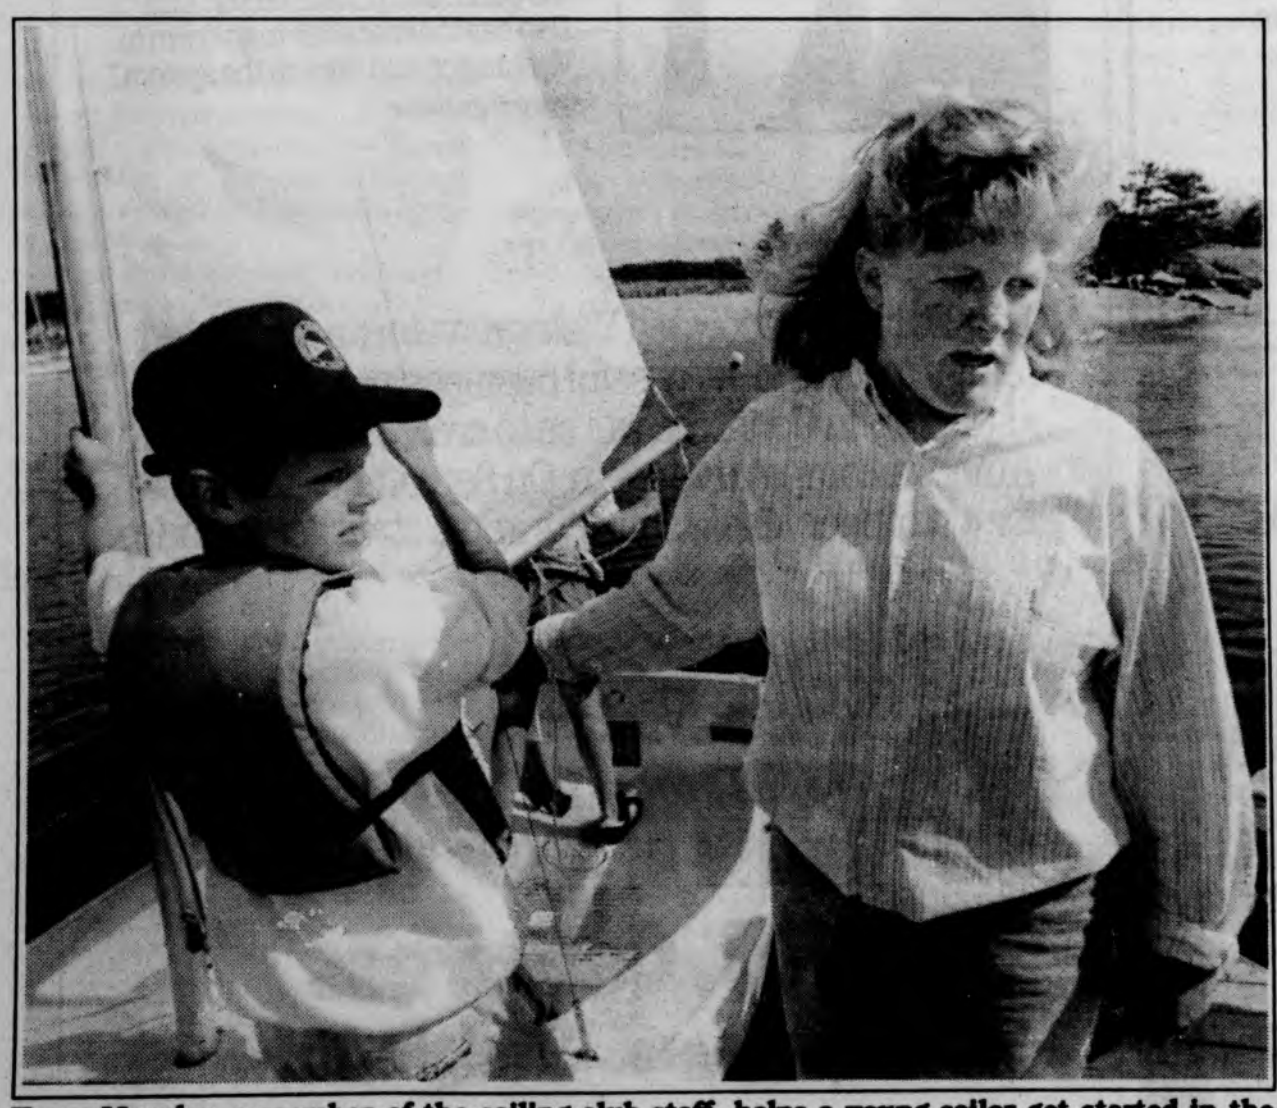
Cohasset sailors breeze through turnabout races in season finale

Michael O'Hart and Ben Littauer race toward the dock.



There's a lot of excitement on the water during the Cohasset Sailing Club's turnabout racing — the grand finale to the club's 33rd season.

Sailing club winds up season

By Robert M. Davenport
Special to the Mariner

On a "gem" of a day, the Cohasset Sailing Club wound up its 33rd season with turnabout racing in a good breeze, dogs and soda, awards and certificates, and the final, usual, pulling of boats. Awards, by class, were as follows:

Sailor I: Excellence Awards to Greg Bilton, Tucker Gledhill, and Jackie Kahn. Most Improved Awards to Matt Lewis and Alyssa Distasi.

Sailor II: Excellence Awards to Benny Peterson and Caitlin Starsell with Most Improved Awards to Petey Minnar and Liz Myers.

Mate I: Excellence Awards to Ben Littauer and Susanah Candia. Most Improved Awards to Mark Equi and Megan Waal.

Mate II: Excellence Awards to Andy Curran and Kyralea Cogill and Most Improved Awards to Jamie DeMichle and Lydia Crafts.

Skipper: Excellence Awards to Andy Hamilton, Katy Kramers, and Kristin Reynolds with Most Improved Awards to Bonnie Kreuger, Kyle Whitley, and Leigh Atherton.

Captain: A Most Improved Award to Jamie Kondrat.

Sailing Master: An Excellence Award to Jon Crafts and Most Improved to Bob Meehan.

Racing Trophies in the Mate Classes went to Ben Littauer, Susanah Candia and Megan Waal, and to Janet Hoyler, Katie Whitehouse and Jill Magner in the Mate I Class. In the Mate II Class they were won by Lydia Crafts and Angela Parisi and by Jamie DeMichle and John O'Sullivan.

The "Charlie" Waaser Cup was won by Jon Crafts with Ted Noon crewing. Runner-up was Tim Brister. Danielle and Sarah Nohe picked up third.

The annual Match Racing was also won by Jon Crafts. Second was Ted Noon and third, Katy Kramers.

While finishing third in the Waaser Racing, Danielle and Sarah Nohe plucked off first place in the long races for the Congdon Cup. Tim Brister and Nicole Peterson picked up second and Tammy Maitland with Bonnie Kreuger finished third.

The prestigious Towle Award for outstanding contribution to the Sailing Club by a student was won by Nicole Peterson. Nicole, or Nikki, also was awarded a special Excellence Award for her participation on the Cohasset High School sailing team that finished second in the State Championships this spring.

Sue DeMichle, mother of Instructor Dan DeMichle, received a special Excellence Award for getting a successful "Fun Day" going at the Sailing Club this season.

The Peter H. Greenman Award for long and dedicated service to the Cohasset Sailing Club by an adult was won this year by Ray Kasperowicz.

Now it's off to college with Head Instructor Bill Walsh heading back to Wheaton, Assistant Head Instructor Andrew Rossi returning to Colby, Instructor Jamus Driscoll going back to Haverford, Kerry Murphy back to Stonehill, Amy Crafts starting at Williams, Dan DeMichle going up north to Bates, Matt Kramers already starting at Stonehill, and Sarah Kramers into her junior year at Fontbonne H.S.

Little League tryouts

Tryouts for the 1993 Major League Division of the Cohasset Little League are Sunday, Oct. 4, from 1 to 4 p.m. All youngsters whose tenth birthday takes place before Aug. 1, 1993, and who do not have their 13th birthday before that date are eligible to try out. Players already on a major league roster are not required to attend the tryouts.

The tryouts will take place, as follows:

Ten year old – 1 to 2 p.m.; 11 year old – 2 to 3 p.m.; and 12 year old – 3 to 4 p.m.

All players are required to register prior to that date. In the event of cancellation due to inclement weather, the tryouts are Monday, Oct. 12, (Columbus Day) from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

ARC Golf Outing

South Shore ARC will host its fifth annual "Lou Bailey Golf Outing" at the Cohasset Golf Club Thursday, Sept. 10 beginning at 12:30 p.m.

Each golfer will have the chance to win the 1992 Mercedes sports sedan for sinking a hole-in-one. Tickets for the event are $175 and include 18 holes of golf, use of cart and locker room facilities, greens fees, boxed lunch prior to tee-off, cocktail reception and awards dinner following play, and free gifts and prizes.

Tickets are available by mail at South Shore ARC Golf, P.O. Box 58, 371 River Street, North Weymouth, MA 02191. Make checks payable to South Shore ARC.

Contact Glenn Paré or Lisa Lapointe at 335-3023 for additional information.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

WHICH OPINION IS RIGHT?

QUESTION: I think my home is worth a certain amount. My neighbor says it should sell for more, but a prospect claims it's worth less. Whose opinion is correct?

ANSWER: The value of your home is not what YOU think it should be, or your neighbor or even a casual prospect. It is determined chiefly by the location, the neighborhood and the current market.

Nobody, but nobody, is more acutely aware of the current housing market than an experienced local real estate firm like ours. Put your faith in our hands and we'll recommend the best possible selling price.

Area skaters roll at Wompatuck Park Bay Skate race

Skaters as young as 11 and as old as 52 took part in the Bay Skate Summer Sizzlin' In-Line Skating Race Saturday at Wompatuck State Park.

Race director Michelle Bernard was very pleased with the turnout of more than 43 skaters.

"It was very rewarding and encouraging for me to see such a large number of people, many of whom hadn't raced before, taking part in this relatively new competitive sport," she said.

Two events were held on Saturday, a 6.3-mile race for experienced skaters and a 2.6-mile race for beginners and younger competitors.

Prizes were given to the top five finishers in each race, with separate divisions for racing and conventional skates.

Age group prizes were also awarded.

In total, more than $400 worth of prizes were donated by the HYPER Corporation, Bauer, Laughing Alley and the Golden Goose.

In the longer race, The Bay State Speed Skating Club's Pat Wentland outsprinted the Bay Skate Speed Team's Mark Kondola to win in 19:51.

Wentland skated 3:09 per mile or about 19 miles an hour in picking up the win.

His time was 22 seconds shy of the course record set by Phil Tahmindjis of the Australian Olympic Ice Speed Skating Team earlier this summer.

Bay Skate Speed Team members Ted Roland and Tom Keane were third and fourth with races of 19:55 and 19:56.

US Olympic Team ice speedskater Chris Shelley was fifth in 20:47.

In the conventional, or street skate, division, David Kaye edged Kirk Couch to win in 23:40.

The finish among the women wasn't as close, but that's because Bernadette Lombardo, also of the Bay State Speed Skating Club, smashed the previous women's course record by a full two minutes, completing the circuit in 23:05.

Laurie Ruddy of Hingham also broke the record, previously held by Dawn Olsson, in capturing the conventional skate division in 25:05.

Trevor Byrne, Mike Byrne, Mike Shea, and Matt Watkins give each other tips on stretching before the Summer Sizzlin' In-Line Skating Race at Wompatuck State Park Saturday.

(Staff photo/Laura Gilpatric)

The Club reigned supreme in the 2.6-mile event as well, as 11-year old Daniel Weinstein took the tape in 9:51.

Hingham's own Mike Byrne and Mike Shea claimed second and third.

Continuing Hingham's strong showing, Sara Henesy and Jen McKennzie grabbed the first and second slots among the women.

Cohasset artists wanted

Registration for the 25th Annual Plymouth Juried Art Show is Friday, Sept. 11 from 12 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, Sept. 12 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Main Street Gallery, 46 Main Street, Plymouth. For more information call 747-6668.

Artist registration forms may be picked up at the Main Street Gallery, Golden Gull Studios, or Priscilla and Bob's or write to Plymouth Guild, Inc., Box 3152, Plymouth, MA 02361.

Judging is Sunday, Sept. 13. Jurors: Janet C. Blagdon, award-winning expressionistic acrylic and watercolor painter, and art educator; Andree Desiree Wilson, published photographer; and Jose Beltran, sculptor and painter who originates from Saville, Spain.

Cash awards total $1,500 including First Place and Honorable Mention ribbons for representational and abstract work.

Categories: Drawing, Oil and Acrylic Painting, Watercolor, Sculpture, Functional Crafts, Nonfunctional Crafts, Mixed Media, Color Photography, Black and White Photography, Printmaking, Best in Show, and Popular Choice.

SS NOW to meet

The South Shore Chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW) holds its next meeting Sept. 8 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the New North Church, Lincoln Street, Hingham.

In addition to regular business meeting, sign-making for September 12 vote rally will be available. For more information, call Suzanne, 749-3342, or Jeannette, 337-6725.

Gina, Andrew, Adrina and Rustan Devitre host the pre-show party before the Bill Cosby performance Saturday at the Music Circus. Ticket sales for the event raised $2,800 for the new Cohasset Education Foundation, a charitable organization whose first project is to help pay for a new computer lab at the Osgood School. Mammography screening

The Cohasset Social Service League sponsors a Mobile Mammography Service. This fully-equipped office van makes it easier for women to have mammograms. Most women who have not had one, give inconvenience and cost as the reasons. This service is more convenient, less expensive and is accredited by the American College of Radiology.

The best means of controlling breast cancer is through early detection.

Mammography screening is Saturday, Sept. 12, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The van will be near Town Hall, appointments needed.

Call 383-0771 for more information and appointments.

Grant proposal workshop

As part of National Arts Week (Sept. 20-26), the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, offers a free workshop on grant proposals, Thursday, Sept. 24, at 7:30 p.m.

Advance registration is required; please call (617)383-9548.

The "Gag" Rule

In the last election, national Democrat and Republican bosses got together and withheld funds from any candidate who talked about the 41% Congressional payraise. The Standard Times called this "despicable and anti-democratic."

Jon Bryan stood up to the party bosses, despite losing $60,000 in funding. Jon Bryan stood with the people - and that's the kind of Congressman we need. On Nov. 3rd, vote for integrity and reform - vote Jon Bryan.

Discontent could boost turnout for primary

By Tom Henshaw
Mariner staff

Voters will be faced with one of the most active ballots in years when they go to the polls Tuesday, Sept. 15 in the state primary election.

The size of the turnout may well depend upon how much discontent persisted among the voters since 1990 when incumbents and those perceived to be "insiders" were ousted in wholesale numbers.

However, Town Clerk Marion Douglas predicts the turnout will be low — "a lot less" than 50 percent, she says.

The presidential primary election in March attracted just 35 percent of Cohasset's 4,920 registered voters. The annual town election attracted just over 40 percent; and the special election – with five overrides on the ballot — brought 43 percent of the town's registered voters to the polls.

The polls are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday, at town hall.

Teachers teach themselves for in-service days

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Who better to teach teachers, than teachers?

It is precisely that type of thinking that led the move to have teachers direct their own in-service days — days where workshops and training for teachers is incorporated into the school day.

There are five in-service days in the school calendar this year, and for the second year in a row, teachers will be conducting the sessions themselves.

In-service days for teachers result in early-release days for students.

The sessions will last up to three hours, staff assistant

More female voices are joining the political choir

By Dori Dwyer

Elizabeth Sherman is more nervous this year, as the summer ends, than she usually is.

Sherman, who taught classes for the Program for Women in Politics and Government for the past nine years, takes over as director this fall.

She takes the reigns at a time of transition: the program recently moved to the University of Massachusetts in Boston from Boston College, where it had been for the past 18 years.

Unprecedented growth coincides with the move.

"There has been the most overwhelming response to the program this year," Sherman gushed.

"It's astonishing."

In 1983, when Sherman, a Hingham resident joined the staff as assistant director, there were just eight women enrolled in the program.

The 1993 class will have approximately 25, with many more waiting in the wings, according to Sherman.

"We had hundreds of calls," she said. "We just had to turn them away."

Sherman attributes the surge in interest to a culmination of recent political events, most notably the confirmation hearing of Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas.

"I think the Clarence Thomas-Anita Hill hearing riveted the country's attention to a delicate issue: the

No bones about All Paws' mission

By Jeff Cutler
Mariner Correspondent

While imitation milk was fed to a pair of two-week-old kittens, the first formal meeting of 'All Paws Rescue' came to order.

The organization, a non-profit animal shelter and placement service based in Hingham — and serves Cohasset — was formed in May and has definite plans for the future.

The kittens — from a litter of four whose mother was killed a few hours prior to the meeting, squirmed across the table — almost as if they knew what was going on.

"We've been overwhelmed with animals that need help," said Judy Troiano, the president of 'All Paws.'

"All the other shelters are just bursting with animals and that's why we decided to form this society," she added.

And Troiano stressed that the progress since this spring has been "unbelievable."

"I think we're doing very, very well, very quickly," she said.

Since May, said Troiano, the group has placed 21 cats and over 80 dogs in local homes. This placement is a large part of 'All Paws' approach.

Absentee ballots ready

Absentee ballots are now available at the town clerk's office for the State Primary Tuesday, Sept. 15. You may apply for an absentee ballot if you will be out of town, have a physical disability or because of religious beliefs.

Absentee voting may be done in the office of the town clerk during regular business hours until noon Sept. 14.

A written signed request for a ballot may be sent to the town clerk and one will be mailed out. Included on the application should be your name as registered, which party's ballot you desire, your registration address, precinct, the address to which you wish the ballot sent and your signature. Applications may also be picked up at the office.

If you need further information, please call the Town Clerk's office at 383-9900 ext. 105, 106 or 107.

School lunch prices vary

Due to incomplete information provided the Mariner, the price of school lunches could have been misleading in last week's issue.

Lunch at the Osgood School costs $1.35. A standard lunch at Deer Hill and the Junior/Senior High Schools is $1.50. A la carte items vary.

Milk purchased separately is 35 cents at all schools.

Meal tickets for lunches are available Monday. At the Osgood School at ten-meal lunch ticket is $13.50 and can be purchased through the student's teacher.

At Deer Hill 10-meal tickets are $15 and can be purchased at the principal's office.

Checks should be made out to Cohasset Public Schools.

Cohasset blood drive

The next Cohasset Community Red Cross Blood Drive is Tuesday, Sept. 15. The drive takes place at The First Parish House on Cohasset Common from 2 to 7 p.m.

Past donors will receive a scheduling call from their group promoter.

New donors are invited to call the Cohasset Blood Drive chairpersons, Shirley and Jack Cibelli, at 383-2974.

Robert Anzilotta checks a board for straightness while working on the new addition at the Cohasset Community Center, Saturday. when complete, the planned addition will be leased to the Council on Aging for 10 years at no charge, center officials say. (Staff photo/ J. Paul MacDonald)

NOTICE

TO ALL MY PATIENTS

I do NOT recommend that you have a mammogram taken by the mobile van that is coming to Cohasset Saturday, September 12.

I DO, however, recommend that appropriate mammograms be done at the South Shore Hospital, Bay State Health Care, or the Driftway Radiology Association in Scituate.

Chamber launches sticker campaign

The Chamber of Commerce has launched a sticker campaign to encourage residents to shop in town.

"We want people to shop in Cohasset not just because they should but because they get value for their money, the service they expect, and the quality they want," said Keith Knowles, a chamber director.

Two-by-six inch, blue stickers saying "Shop Right Here in Cohasset" are becoming a familiar sight in shop windows.

The stickers are the first step in a program — sponsored by the chamber — in which businesses can participate in a range of activities such as "sale days", cooperative advertising, and holiday events, Knowles said.

"They (merchants) can virtually take any approach they want – we just want to get the message across and get input from the merchants themselves," he added.

Knowles said the campaign will also try to "broaden the thinking" of Cohasset shoppers, by encouraging them not only to shop in the village but in the shopping centers along Route 3A.

Knowles said about 60 percent of the stores in town belong to the chamber.

For more information about the sticker campaign or the Cohasset Chamber, please call 383-1010.

Revaluation underway

The town is currently undergoing its fiscal 1993 triennial revaluation of all real and personal property.

The new fiscal 1993 values will be available for public inspection at the Assessors office, 41 Highland Ave., during regular business hours, in November.

Due to staffing limitations, we will not be able to accept telephone inquiries for valuations. Any problems regarding valuation will be handled through the abatement process. Contact the staff at the assessors office for details, at 383-9900.

Appliance fee set

There is a $10 fee per appliance for all residents disposing appliances containing chlorofluorocarbons (CFC's) in their cooling units. Examples of such appliances are refrigerators, air-conditioners and dehumidifiers.

New regulations require removal of CFC's before they are sent to the scrap dealer.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

SELLING AT A LOSS

QUESTION: It looks like I'm the exception to the rule. I put a lot of money into renovating an overpriced home and now I'll have to sell at a loss. Any suggestions?

ANSWER: You might consider renting the house out for at least a year or so before selling. In that way, the house will be considered a business investment and you can deduct the loss as a business expense.

While you're renting it out, you can also benefit from other tax benefits such as depreciation and maintenance expense deductions. If you sell a house which is your primary residence and take a loss, this loss is not tax deductible. This is a tricky area, so check with your accountant.

All Paws is not your average dog pound

Robyn Service, acting secretary, said that follow-up visits are done after a placement because they "want to be doubly sure" that animals are in a good home.

According to Troiano, animals in need of placement have come from as far away as Boston and because 'All Paws' is a "no-kill shelter" they will hold an animal until a home is found.

Although foster care is often recognized in human terms, 'All Paws' has their own kind of foster care.

As Service puts it, "foster care is a very important part of (placing animals) because there are a lot of animals, both cats and dogs, that are just not ready to go into their prospective adoptive homes."

She gave examples of abused animals and pets that are not used to daily interaction with people or other pets. Animals need to become "socialized" before they can be placed, she said.

Joyce Sproule, another member, is concerned about a pet's background before it is placed.

"These animals that we're taking in, we care about them, but they've all been diseased...we have to presume that they've not had any shots," she said.

Sproule also wants to make sure that a person who plans to act as an animal foster home will be around for the pet.

"If you're not home all day...it's preferable to keep a dog in a kennel situation rather than have it crated for eight hours, that's unacceptable," she said.

Troiano said it's better to find a foster home for a troubled pet than leave an animal in a kennel. This allows the animal to "find trust again" with people and other pets.

Troiano also asked the audience, nearly 20 area residents, if they or anyone they knew, could volunteer as a kennel helper or help the organization with other tasks. She said this was necessary because more kennel space had been acquired in the form of an additional building. This building will be rented to the group for one dollar a year from Allan Foley, a former Hingham resident.

Some people at the meeting had seen the work of 'All Paws" first-hand. Jodi Beldotti of Scituate, for instance, recently adopted two pets from the group. She heard about the animals through a local paper and, after she was cleared as a 'good' home, she took a dog and a cat.

Beldotti said that 'All Paws' "fills a real need in the south shore community. It's different." She is pleased with the way the pets are placed and feels that its "better than a pound." She said she was convinced that they cared when she saw the "interaction" of pets and people.

Kathryn Linnehan, one of the 'All Paws' founders, is pleased by the comments of people like Beldotti. She views the organization as a "group of hope" and wants to see more satisfied owners in the future. Linnehan said the only thing that really costs them anything is the "money that hemorrhages out with the veterinarian bills."

As the kittens, no bigger than a can of soda, squeaked a request for food, Linnehan said the volunteers are "not saving the world...they're just trying to make a change."

'All Paws' has scheduled its next meeting for Nov. 10, at the Days Inn in Rockland and the group will have a booth at the South Shore Dog Show in Scituate this Saturday.

Kennel club to hold Scituate show

The South Shore Kennel Club will hold its 55th annual all-breed and obedience dog show Saturday, Sept. 12, at Central Park on Branch Street, Scituate.

More than 1,100 dogs will gather from across the country to compete for best-in-show honors and earn points to become a champion.

Judging begins at 8:30 a.m. among the various breeds, but by 2 p.m. the really serious competition begins.

Herb Moran, show coordinator, said the best-in-show should be chosen by 4 p.m.

Admission is $2, but senior citizens and children will pay $1. A portion of the proceeds will be donated to the town's beautification trust and to the new Eleanor Haughey Animal Shelter.

Teachers teach themselves

Guido J. Risi said.

School Supt. Stephen Hart applauded the change in direction.

"It is another area of getting teachers empowered," he said.

"It helps increase their involvement and helps them to develop sessions which best meet their needs."

Adjustment counselor and in-service planning committee chairman Edward Leonard said while the new direction of the teacher-training sessions is not radical, it does represent a departure for Cohasset.

"Historically, the administration would decide which programs would be used for professional development," he explained.

"We've taken a bottom-up approach," Leonard said.

The new teacher-directed focus, however, does not eliminate administration involvement, he added.

"It's a co-lead. They are not out of the loop — they are part of it," he said.

Leonard and Risi helped establish a teachers' in-service planning committee last year.

The goal of the committee, according to Risi, was to develop a structure where teachers could be responsible for their own professional development.

Because it was the first year the concept was applied, Risi said , kinks were worked out last year.

This year, he said, is the real trial.

"It is an experiment of sorts,"he said.

"If it can work with the administration doing it, we can make it happen, too."

If participation is any indication of success, the new direction is working.

"This year, there are more people on the committee," Hart noted.

Each school has several representatives on the committee, and each school picks its own focus for professional development, Leonard said.

For instance, the junior/senior high school chose to devote one of their professional development workshops to crisis intervention.

Leonard said the staff will receive information on how to best handle student responses to crisises like AIDS or the death of a parent.

"We want to have a school plan in the event of a crisis, like a child with AIDS, or a child with Cancer, or the death of a parent or student," he said.

"We want to have specific things in place."

Other schools, like Deer Hill and Osgood, may pick very germane subject matter for the training sessions, Leonard said, like how to teach second-grade.

"And they would have an experienced teacher, who has taught second grade, teaching the workshop," he said.

The in-service committee also makes suggestions for workshops.

Some of the committee's suggestions for subjects for this year's training workshops include gender- bias in the classroom, computer-assisted instruction, mainstreaming and self-esteem.

Risi said having staff teach staff is more logical in many cases than hiring "experts" for the training sessions.

"Our own staff has been trained to do it," he explained.

After each training session, teachers are asked to evaluate the session without signing the form.

"In case someone wants to be really critical," Risi said.

The in-service planning committee reads the evaluation forms and adjusts the in-service workshops accordingly, Leonard said.

BRIAN J.
McDONALD
State Senate
Turning the Tide for a Better Future

Brian, Libby and Colin

Brian Speaks Out About:

• THE ECONOMY: "Immediate investment in our infrastructure will create jobs. Long-term investment will bring permanent recovery."

• EDUCATION: "Our future is our children and education is the foundation for their success."

• SMALL BUSINESS: "My experience has shown that we need to simplify tax reporting and get to work on lowering health care and workers' compensation costs."

• ENVIRONMENT: "I marched in every Clean Harbors incinerator protest and I've worked hard on coastal protection. The job has just begun."

• WOMEN'S RIGHTS: "I have never wavered in my support for a woman's right to choose, for economic equality and for quality child care, education and health care."

• TRANSPORTATION: "Restoration of the Greenbush Commuter Rail Line is imperative. The South Shore deserves an improved and balanced transportation system."

• SENIORS: "Our seniors have earned the right to live in dignity and safety. We need to ensure that quality of life for them."

• VETERANS: "Those who served us proudly need our support. We cannot sit by and watch the government erode veterans' benefits."

Brian is committed to changing how government operates... there is a lot of work left to do.
Brian is running to finish the job and with your help he will.

parties' respective ballots. Unenrolled voters may take either ballot — but they must fill out a card before leaving the polling area if they wish to return to unenrolled status. Otherwise, the voter becomes "enrolled" in the party whose ballot they chose, Douglas explained.

State Senate

Sen. Robert Hedlund,, who is unopposed for the Republican nomination in a heavily Democratic district, is an attractive target for three Democratic hopefuls — former Selectman Brian McDonald of Weymouth, environmental activist Chartis Langmaid of Cohasset and Tim White, a Hingham attorney.

With 1992 identified by some as "The Year of the Woman" and Langmaid endorsed by the State Chapter of the National Organization of Women and the Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus, what each candidate perceives to be women's issues have play a major role in the campaign.

McDonald, who lost a primary bid for the same seat to Robert Ambler in 1990, says many of the same issues that prompted him to run two years ago are still around awaiting a solution.

He supports a woman's right to choose; he would like to see school reform including increased state funding; he supports restoration of commuter service in the Greenbush line; and he wants the state to switch to a single-payer health care system.

White describes himself as "a pro-business Democrat" who sees a healthy economy as a prerequisite to continued state services and he would attain that through tax incentives, investment tax credits and a capital gains tax designed to benefit business in Massachusetts. He is pro-choice and would like to see the MWRA placed under control of the state government.

Langmaid said she would push for a single-payer health care system that does not depend upon one's employment; she would make it easier for people to open a small business and free them from "over-regulation;" she favors more equitable per pupil spending for education; and she would fight to get federal funds for the Harbor cleanup. She is pro-choice.

County Commissioner

With the simultaneous retirements of Mary P. Collins of Quincy and John J. Collins (no relation) of Milton, two of the three seats are open at the same time for the first time in memory.

There is an unusual stipulation to the post, however. No two members of the commission can come from the same Norfolk County community, an electoral conflict which could occur in the November election should Peter H. Collins, son of the retiring commissioner, and James G. Mullen Jr., both of Milton, win the Democratic and Republican primaries respectively. The third commissioner, Bruce D. Olsen, is from Stoughton.

Lining up on the Democratic ballot are John F. Youngclaus, former Weymouth selectman who has been active in county charter reform as a member of the advisory board; John Gillis, the Quincy city clerk; William P. O'Donnell, a member of the Norwood planning board; and Peter Collins, a Milton lawyer.

Republican candidates are James G. Mullen Jr., the town clerk and former selectman in Milton; and Robert A. Frazier of Canton.

Governor's Council

Eight candidates, including two names long familiar in Boston politics, are on the ballot for the Democratic nomination for this post that is a vestige of colonial rule by the British before the Revolution of 1776.

The only duties left to the councillors, of which there are eight statewide, is to approve the governor's appointments to the judicial bench and pass on pardons of convicted criminals.

Peter Eeley of Quincy is retiring after a dozen years in the post.

The two familiar names seeking to succeed him are John Kerrigan of Quincy, one of the leaders of the anti-busing faction on the Boston School Committee 20 years ago, and Christopher Ianella Jr. of Boston, the attorney son of the longtime Boston city councillor of the same name.

Other Democratic candidates include Paul Alpert, the Randolph town moderator; Kevin Donovan of Abington; Daniel Flynn II of Quincy, Ronald Iacobucci of Quincy; Paul Kingston and Michael Murphy of Milton.

On the Republican ballot are Kenneth Fortini of Duxbury and Josephine Howland of Boston.

The Fourth Council District includes 16 cities and towns from Quincy to Duxbury and parts of the city of Boston.

(Cohasset editor Mary Ford also contributed to this report).

Senate candidates debate on cable

The Scituate, Weymouth and Hingham League of Women Voters will sponsor a debate for Democratic State Senatorial candidates from the Norfolk and Plymouth District.

Chartis Langmaid, Cohasset activist, Brian MacDonald, former Weymouth selectman, and Tim White, Hingham attorney, contenders in the Sept. 15 Democratic Primary Election at Dimension Cable TV in Weymouth.

Candidates will debate questions posed by panel members Mary Struzziero, Scituate School Committee, who will focus on education; Michael DeLuca, Chairman of the Weymouth MWRA Study Committee, whose focus will be the environment; and Peter Kehew, Chairman of the Hingham Advisory Committee, who will address the candidates on the fiscal relationship between the Commonwealth and local communities.

The two-hour program will consist of one hour of questions from the panel and one hour from the audience.

Continental Cable will broadcast the debate in Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham and Hull on Channel 53 Friday, Sept. 11, at 8 p.m., and Monday, Sept. 14, at 8:30 p.m.

CHARTIS LANGMAID
She's Charting A New Course

CHARTIS - A widow and mother, Chartis knows first-hand the importance of work in maintaining self-respect and making the checkbook balance. Her life experiences as a woman have forged her commitment to universal health care, quality education, a woman's right to choose and protecting the environment.

CHARTIS - A civic activist, Chartis has spent twenty-six years working as an ordinary citizen to solve problems on the South Shore. She knows the value of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station because she has worked on its long-range planning study committee.

CHARTIS - Her three opponents are all Beacon Hill insiders. Her Republican opponent Senator Hedlund has voted to gut public education. Her Democratic opponents Brian McDonald, a career bureaucrat with the Massachusetts Department of Revenue, and Tim White, a lawyer and former special council to the Legislative Committee on Taxation, offer a "politics as usual" perspective.

CHARTIS - An outsider to Beacon Hill who has never held elective office, Chartis brings a fresh and very personal perspective to problem solving. She will be your voice, not the voice of special interest groups on Beacon Hill.

❑ Great news for all of you Moms looking for qualified babysitters this fall...Kara Petrocelly and Meghan Curry successfully completed the babysitting course offered at the Cohasset Community Center. The girls attended the four weeks of classes and are waiting to have new babysitting jobs.

❑ Jennifer Watts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Watts, Jr., of Nichols Road, announced her engagement to Albert Rodiger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rodiger, Jr., from New Canaan, Conn. The couple plan to be married in May of 1993. Good luck to you all.

❑ Jack Karle is one happy man these days. His daughter Priscilla along with her husband and baby Jack, are home after living in Paris for two years. They are busy setting up home in Cambridge, so that's no commute at all for any of them.

By the way, we should all go to Europe, Priscilla looks super!

❑ Don't forget that this Saturday is hazardous waste day for Cohasset. It will be held at Cohasset High School from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Get there early because there is a limit to the waste that can be collected. Great idea for fall cleaning. Paint can't live in the garage over the winter anyway!

❑ When we mention the Board of Health and hazardous waste, we naturally think of Sharon Becker and all that she did to help our town. Through her efforts we have a much nicer community, and a safer one for our children to live and grow up in. Sharon and her husband have moved to Florida but not in our hearts!

We'll still see Bill running across the street to watch the little league games, and the things that Sharon did for our town are too numerous to be mentioned.

Florida's gain is surely our loss, but here's hoping they come back to visit often (or send us their news).

John Biante, a barber at Pat's Hair Styling for Men, gives David Kupec a flat top just in time for school. (Staff photo/Alan Chapman)

❑ Welcome home to Peter O'Loughlin! Peter returned home from the hospital last week and we certainly hope that he is feeling chipper and that this fall will be an especially pretty one for him to enjoy. Just follow those doctor's orders, Peter, you'll be as good as new in no time.

❑ Deepest thanks to Bob Magner and the Cohasset Savings Bank for their donation to the Fred S. Troy Scholarship Fund.

As most of you know, Clark runs a benefit each year to keep the scholarship going, and this one was to be Olivia Newton John. Unfortunately, she canceled due to illness, but many contributed to the fund anyway...again, thanks folks for your generous contribution, and some lucky student will certainly thank you when they go off to college next fall.

❑ Happy Birthday greetings to Jeannine Pompeo Coburn!

❑ Last week was the beginning of the fall sports season for Cohasset Jr.-Sr. High, and everyone is anxiously awaiting the various "kick-offs." The schedule isn't completed yet. We'll be sure to include it in an addition of the Mariner as soon as it is. One thing they are really aiming for is to have all four teams play on Homecoming Day, Oct. 17. Be sure to set that day aside!

❑ Sure is nice to see Ed Atkinson and his wife Sally back! Rev. Atkinson is the minister of the First Unitarian Universalist Church of Cohasset, and Sally is the Carriage House Nursery School Director, and they went across the country and back for the summer. Here's hoping they will let us in on the trip, and what they did. Sounds grand!

❑ That's the news from here. Please let us know your good happenings!

TIM WHITE WANTS TO CREATE MORE JOBS.

(HIS OPPONENTS WANT TO CREATE MORE TAXES.)

In the race for the State Senate, two candidates stand for higher taxes. (Boston Globe, 8/2/92)

That's why the third candidate stands out. Tim White.

Tim White is the pro-business Democrat. He has the right ideas. And, as a small business owner, he has the right experience.

Tim White believes Massachusetts should:

- increase the investment tax credit to encourage investment in new plants and equipment.
- simplify the government permitting and compliance process.
- reduce the capital gains tax to attract new businesses.
- encourage more state and business partnerships like the Boston Management Consortium.

These measures will create more jobs. And more people working will mean more people to share the tax burden. Not fewer people paying more taxes.

Funding for schools, libraries, police, fire, and public works will only come from a healthy economy. And only one of the candidates for State Senate from the South Shore has the experience and the ideas for bringing that Pro-Business message to Beacon Hill.

A vote for Tim White is a vote for economic change on the South Shore and in Massachusetts. It's a vote for business growth and more jobs.

Vote for Democrat Tim White on Primary Day, September 15.

Patrick O. Morrissey

Dr. Patrick O'Hearn Morrissey, 61, of Cohasset, who had a dental practice on State Street in Boston for 34 years, died Sept. 4 at South Shore Hospital.

Dr. Morrissey was born in Boston. He graduated from Roxbury Latin High School, Harvard college in 1952, and McGill Dental School in 1957.

He was a member of the Massachusetts Dental Society.

Dr. Morrissey leaves his wife, Ellen (McAuliffe) Morrissey; a son, Patrick O. Morrissey Jr. of Salem; three daughters, Jane C. Morrissey and Nancy E. Morrissey, both of Salem, and Mary E. Rand of Medford; and a sister, Mary Kelley of Hull.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Sept. 9 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Central Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to the Animal Rescue League of Boston, 10 Chandler St., Boston 02116.

John E. O'Brien

John E. O'Brien, 57, a manufacturers' representative and former vice president of the vinyl film division of Plymouth Rubber Co., died Aug. 26 in South Shore Hospital, South Weymouth.

A soccer enthusiast, he was active in the Garden City Soccer League on Long Island and coached soccer teams in Cohasset leagues and for Massachusetts District Area Soccer.

He was treasurer of the Fair Oaks Homeowners Association.

Mr. O'Brien worked for Plymouth Rubber Co. until starting his own business in 1990. He was a member of the Plastic Film Association.

A native of Pittsburg, Mr. O'Brien attended the Long Island, N.Y. He received bachelor of science and bachelor of arts degrees from Long Island University and a master's degree in business administration from LIU's Roth School of Business.

He was a Navy veteran.

A chance for change ... for a change

All across the United States, people are looking for a change in the way business is conducted in Washington.

In the new Tenth Congressional District, we have a rare opportunity this year to elect a congressman who will pay attention to our needs and problems ... for a change.

But PAUL HAROLD means more than just a change — he combines a solid record of accomplishment with a state-wide reputation for integrity and determination in representing the people of his district.

As a State Senator, PAUL HAROLD has been deeply involved in a wide spectrum of issues, many of which will be resolved at the Federal level — the Old Colony Railroad restoration — Federal money for water and sewer projects — a national health insurance program that provides quality care without sacrificing freedom of choice — Federal contributions to a public school system we can point to with pride — a sensible national policy that will create jobs for our people and get the economy moving again — a small business assistance program that offers more than lip service ... The list seems endless, and we need a Congressman who will serve our best interests.

PAUL HAROLD will be an outstanding Congressman — but he needs your help. When you vote in next Tuesday's Democratic Primary, please consider PAUL HAROLD.

There will never be a better time for change — or a better candidate

No Pain

After Tuesday — another primary election will have come and gone — and possibly as many as 65 percent of Cohasset voters will have sat this one out.

The polls at the town hall are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m., which is enough time to accommodate nearly all our schedules.

Voters don't have to be Republican or Democrat to vote. If you are unenrolled you ask for either the Republican, Democrat or Independent Voters party ballot at the polling area. Remember to fill out a card before you leave if you wish to return to unenrolled status.

Primary elections are important. The people we chose will run again in November and represent us at the County level, State House, or in Washington.

The decisions they make and how they vote on issues will affect everything from our taxes to whether or not there should be unrestricted access to abortion.

So please take a few minutes to find out about the candidates — and vote.

Complaining about the state of affairs locally and nationally is easy but painful.

Voting is easy and doesn't hurt a bit.

News crunch

As summer draws to a close, Cohasset comes alive again.

And along with the increased activity that goes along with schools, youth sports, and clubs and organizations of all sorts there is an increased demand for space in the Cohasset Mariner.

We love the attention and promise to do our best to serve you.

Nothing succeeds in community journalism like being the primary source that townfolk turn to for news and events.

But as things pick up, this is as good a time as any to remind you about deadlines and priorities.

The deadline for editorial copy is noon Tuesday.

That means that your tidbits and news items must be dropped off here at the Mariner offices on Enterprise Drive in Marshfield or at either of our two drop spots in Cohasset Village: the Colonial Pharmacy or Cohasset News by noon on Tuesday at the latest.

Items may also be mailed to the Cohasset Mariner, P.O. Box 71, Cohasset 02025 or to the Cohasset Mariner, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield 02050.

It's always better to get your copy in well before the deadline. That gives us time to edit it and send it to typesetting before the Tuesday rush.

But please remember that getting an item in early or by deadline does not guarantee it will appear in that week's issue.

This is where priorities come in.

Items that are date-specific usually take precedence over those that announce the onset of a new program, for example.

We receive dozens of press releases a week here at the Cohasset Mariner.

Those that take place right here in Cohasset — as opposed to regionally — usually come first.

We try to find a balance each week. We put in happenings, school news, sports, social news, obituaries and so on. Each of these areas has only so much space.

Covering Cohasset — that means news stories about everything from town elections to police news and fires — always comes first.

Unfortunately newspapers cannot just expand to accommodate the amount of copy we receive or generate. The amount of pages is determined by the percentage of advertising space we sell each week.

Whatever copy we receive here at the Mariner is edited at our discretion. Often items are cut from the bottom — so it is important to get the time, date, and place near the top of your news release.

When we are looking to fill a "hole" in the paper at the last minute, we cannot always take the time to cut the item the way you might think best.

We also accept photographs and welcome those taken when our staff photographers are not available. Photographs may be black and white or color. Please remember to identify the people in the photograph and write your name and address on the back if you want the photo (s) returned.

If you would like a photographer for your event, please let us know as soon as possible because we share our photographers with 16 other Mariner towns.

Do we make mistakes? Sure, we do!

The Mariner is a team operation and copy we receive goes through several hands before it appears in the paper. We do our best not to "lose" anything or forget to include a timely item but mistakes do happen.

But if you have a question about a news release or photograph, please feel free to call me here at the Mariner at 837-3500 or on our toll free number, 1-800-649-6661. Please leave a message with the Mariner receptionist if I am unavailable.

MBTA committed to Greenbush

letters

The following letter was sent to Scituate selectmen from Secretary Richard Taylor of the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction.

Your recent letter to Governor Weld regarding the re-establishment of the Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation Project (OCRR) has been forwarded to this office for response.

This administration is committed to bringing commuter rail transportation back to the Old Colony area, and we view the project as a three-line railroad with Greenbush being one of those lines.

Hingham has concerns regarding the alignment and station siting of the Greenbush Line as it passes through the Lincoln Historic District. Those concerns are being addressed by the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) and the other state environmental entities in as timely and efficient manner as state and federal laws and regulations permit.

I have been informed that the MBTA will shortly begin an aggressive posture to bring to closure those Hingham concerns in the very near future. In the meantime, it is impossible to circumvent the process by which all the legitimate environmental and historic concerns will be addressed.

I can assure you that the commitment to build the Greenbush Line is in place, and everything will be done to bring this very worthwhile project to completion.

Your continued support of the project will be appreciated.

Richard L. Taylor
Secretary

Facts behind tunnel option detailed

To the Editor:

On behalf of the selectmen's response team, I want to thank you for your helpful and constructive editorial ("The Big Dig," Sept. 3, 1992) about the proposal for a rail tunnel under downtown Hingham if and when service is restored on the Greenbush Branch of the Old Colony Railroad.

It is important for your readers to understand the role of the response team and also to know some of the facts which convinced the MBTA to consider such a tunnel and to determine that it is a feasible alternative to surface rail through downtown Hingham, with eight open grade crossings in less than a mile.

At the 1991 Annual Town Meeting and town election, Hingham voted overwhelmingly to support selectmen in taking all reasonable steps to ensure that the former Greenbush Branch is restored to active service only after it is adequately determined that:

1. There is no prudent and feasible transportation alternative to such restoration, which alternative would have fewer adverse impacts on the town; and

2. If there is no such alternative, that all possible planning has been undertaken, and all appropriate mitigating measures have been agreed to by the project proponents, in order to eliminate or mitigate such adverse impacts.

A response team first addressed the issue, at the request of selectmen, in June 1990. Members of the team continue to monitor the project and to advise selectmen about its potential impact on our town. Our most recent report was intended to briefly summarize recent developments with respect to the Old Colony Railroad Restoration Project as it relates to the proposed Greenbush Branch.

In June 1992, the MBTA was authorized by the Federal Transit Administration (FTA) to proceed with the Boston to Middleborough and Boston to Plymouth lines of the OCRR project. Construction of these lines will begin in 1993 and be completed by 1997. The FTA will pay half the cost of the $476 million project. The Greenbush Branch, if undertaken, will cost an additional $180 to $320 million.

While the MBTA still hopes to construct Greenbush, the project was put on hold pending further study by order of the FTA. The decision to undertake the study was based largely on issues raised about the admitted adverse impact restoration of a surface rail line will have on downtown Hingham and on the Lincoln National Register Historic District.

Section 4 (f) of the Transportation Act forbids use of federal funds in support of a project which will adversely affect a protected resource — such as the historic district — when there is a "prudent and feasible alternative" that will eliminate or substantially reduce such adverse effects. Without federal funds, it is unlikely that the Greenbush Branch will be restored.

To address this issue, the MBTA was instructed by the FTA to study alternatives to a surface rail line through downtown Hingham. The MBTA asked its engineering consultant to explore such alternatives. Twenty-one were considered, including improved highway and traffic management within the Greenbush corridor, improved bus and commuter boat service, and various routes for a rail tunnel under the historic district in the downtown area.

The engineering studies were begun in the fall of 1991. The MBTA appointed a "working group" of regional representatives — including two citizens of Hingham — to advise it on aspects of the study. The working group has met but once and has, unfortunately, been all but abandoned as an advisory group. Moreover, efforts of the response team to contribute to the engineering study, or to obtain technical data produced by the MBTA's consultants, have been generally rebuffed. We did have two helpful meetings with MBTA management to discuss our concerns, and arranged for the MBTA General Manager to tour the proposed route in June, accompanied by representatives of the town.

The engineering studies were completed in early spring of this year and submitted to the FTA in July. Originally, it was contemplated that the "working group" would review the "prudent and feasible alternatives" to a surface rail line through downtown Hingham and thereafter the project proponents would select a "preferred alternative" by mid-1993.

Now, from what we have been able to learn, the MBTA and FTA are rethinking their strategy and will adopt an environmental review process suggested by Hingham nearly two years ago. Namely, information developed about Greenbush alternatives, including the proposed tunnel, will be readdressed in a revised "Draft Environmental Impact Statement."

Only after public hearings will a "preferred alternative" be selected and a Final Environmental Impact Statement be completed. Section 4 (f) determinations about feasibility of alternatives to surface rail through downtown Hingham, and negotiations with the town about mitigation of adverse impacts associated with any preferred alternative, will be deferred at this time.

The MBTA and FTA have altered their strategy, we believe, for two reasons:

First, engineering studies now confirm that it is feasible to construct a rail tunnel under downtown Hingham. Such a tunnel will eliminate all or most of the adverse impacts of a surface rail line, including up to eight open grade crossings within the Lincoln National Register Historic District. Depending on its orientation, a tunnel will increase the cost of the OCRR Restoration Project by 10 to 20 percent. Of greatest interest is a proposed deep bore route which will reduce construction impacts, minimize noise and vibration impacts, eliminate all eight open grade crossings, and speed travel time to Boston. Earlier environmental studies erred by failing to consider the tunneling alternative.

Second, given the feasibility of such an alternative, the MBTA and FTA are convinced that if they continue to insist on restoration of surface rail through the Lincoln National Register Historic District the Department of the Interior may oppose the project or affected parties may initiate litigation in the Federal courts which will delay, or even derail, it.

While we are not privy to delicate ongoing negotiations between the MBTA, the FTA and the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (which oversees the

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS	Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) 722-1646 Room 416B	Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) 722-2800 ext.7957 Room 134
THE HOUSE AND SENATE. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on four roll calls from the July 28th legislative session dealing with Governor Weld's budget vetoes. The Senate has not yet acted on these vetoes and may consider them after the September primary.
HEALTH INSURANCE (H 5800) — House 120-30, overrode Governor Weld's veto of a section amending a current law requiring cities and towns to offer Blue Cross Blue Shield type indemnity plans to its employees. The change allows communities to waive the BCBS requirement if agreement on alternative HMO type health care coverage is reached through collective bargaining agreements. Override supporters said BCBS has stopped coverage in 64 communities and argues this has left those communities in violation of the law and with only local HMO coverage which does not provide any insurance for out of state retirees. They noted the change would mandate equivalent coverage for out of state retirees. Override opponents said the change will create problems for communities and will require higher mandated employer contributions. They argued it will also have an adverse impact on the Group Insurance Commission. (A "Yea" vote is for the change. A "Nay" vote is against it).		Y
FARM PRESERVATION (H 5800) — House 141-3, overrode Governor Weld's veto of $2 million in funding for the Agriculture Preservation Restriction Program. Override supporters said this important program allows the state to pay a farmer an amount of money and impose a deeds restriction which preserves the farm by restricting its development for any non-farm use. Opponents said the program still has some money left and argued this cut is another which must be made to balance the budget. (A "Yea" vote is for the $2 million. A "Nay" vote is against it).		Y
WELFARE FRAUD (H 5800) — House 133-14, overrode Governor Weld's veto reduction of $412,628 (from $4.16 million to $3.75 million) in funding for the Bureau of Special Investigations. Override supporters said this money is necessary to expand the investigation of welfare fraud which costs the state millions of dollars. Override opponents said the reduction is necessary to balance the budget and argued the reduction will still result in maintaining the current level of investigations. (A "Yes" vote is for the $412,628. A "Nay" vote is against it).		Y
HEALTH CARE (H 5800) — House 105-41, overrode Governor Weld's veto reduction of $386,594 (From $970,196 to $583,602) in funding for administration of the uncompensated care pool. The pool reimburses hospitals for free care they provide to uninsured patients. The veto also eliminates language earmarking $185,350 to fund a statewide program of technical assistance to community health centers. Override supporters said the $386,594 is necessary to administer the program and to help community health centers which are important to many neighborhoods. Opponents said the cut is necessary to balance the budget. (A "Yea" vote is for the $385,594 including $185,350 for community health centers. A "Nay" vote is against it).		Y

MADD concerned about one-day liquor license

(Editor's note: the following letter was sent to the board of selectmen).

Dear Honorable Chairman:

This office has received a citizen complaint concerning a one-day liquor license issued by your board to the George Mealy Post #118. The concerns that the citizen has, and we have, are that these types of operations need to be properly run to be successful. It is imperative that properly trained personnel are in charge of serving alcohol.

Our major concern, as with all functions of this type, is that without adequate controls some people will drink and drive and thereby set the scene for disaster to strike. Once harm is done it cannot be reversed and the liability falls on all parties involved.

It is in the best interest of the citizens and to protect the liability of the town to have in place regulations dealing with one-day liquor licenses, as they should be for all serving licenses. If these regulations are not in place they should be promulgated by the board.

We understand that this function is a fund-raiser in memory of a girl who died as a result of an alcohol related crash. It is disturbing that alcohol is being served at a function of this type, whatever the case may be, strict controls are required. There was also the question raised by the caller as to the legality of this particular license. (Town property or quasi Town responsibility)

We respect the board's decision to issue the license as they see fit. We hope that this letter is taken in a positive way to improve the quality of life in Cohasset.

Any questions or information regarding regulations of servers please contact this office.

Seven-foot retaining wall opposed

(Editor's note: the following letter was sent to Supt. Stephen Hart with copies to the police, selectmen, and appeals board. The hearing in question was postponed until last night, Wednesday, Sept. 9 after the Mariner went to press).

Dear Mr. Hart:

Thursday, Sept. 3, the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals will conduct a hearing regarding an application for a variance to obtain a permit to construct a seven-foot high concrete retaining wall along Jerusalem Road and Black Rock Road. The developers of the Curtis Estate need to erect this retaining wall as part of the septic system at 15 Black Rock Road.

The wall would begin at a point on Black Rock Road across from the Fox residence at 8 Black Rock Road. It is my understanding that at this point the wall would be almost at ground level; however, as the wall continues toward Jerusalem Road it would gain in height reaching seven feet at the point where Jerusalem meets Black Rock Road and would continue along Jerusalem Road.

If the corner of Black Rock Road and Jerusalem Road is used as a school bus stop, I would question the safety of children standing next to, around or behind a seven-foot high concrete wall to wait for the bus.

Jerusalem Road is very curvey and narrow near this intersection, and having a wall of this type, even though the developers have indicated they would plant trees to camouflage the wall, I feel would be a very dangerous situation. My son and others wait for the bus at the end environmental review process), we anticipate that the proponents will recognize the viability of a rail tunnel by issuing a new Draft Environmental Impact Statement, proposing this alternative, to which the local citizenry can respond in open meetings. We believe such a course of action is wise and have urged the project proponents to adopt it. A restored Greenbush Branch is intended to serve the transportation needs of our area well into the next century and probably beyond. All aspects of the proposal, including alternatives which will reduce adverse impacts on Hingham, deserve thorough study.

(See page 13)

Facts behind RR tunnel option . . .

The MBTA and the FTA should be commended for their efforts to provide quality, cost-effective public transit for the South Shore. As the voters of Hingham have instructed, the members of the response team support these efforts, consonant with our responsibility to protect the historic, residential and commercial assets of the town.

The MBTA seems to think that the revised environmental review process can be completed without additional delay. We agree. Indeed, if the eventual "preferred alternative" includes a rail tunnel under downtown Hingham similar to that which passes under downtown Salem, there will be no substantial obstacle to speedy restoration of service on the Greenbush Branch. This is a win-win solution to an otherwise insoluble problem!

of Windy Hill Road and they must stand back a number of feet to be out of the way of traffic. Therefore, I would say that children waiting for a bus at Black Rock would have to stand back on Black Rock Road to be out of the way of traffic, and his would put them behind the wall creating a hazard for the children. I would also think it would impair the school bus driver's visibility.

If this variance is approved and the developers are granted the permit to continue work on the three houses on the Curtis Estate, there is the very real possibility that these same developers will eventually develop the acreage remaining on the Estate and could build an additional 27 houses. This would increase the number of cars exiting and entering black Rock Road and possibly increase the number of children waiting for the school bus at this intersection.

As a concerned abutter, I plan to attend the meeting Sept. 3. If you feel that the construction of this seven-foot high concrete wall would indeed pose a threat to school children, perhaps your department could send a representative to the meeting to voice your department's concerns. If his would not be possible, perhaps you could write a letter to the Zoning Board of Appeals so that they would have it as part of the record at the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goyette of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Jacqueline M. Goyette, to Peter V. Vitello, son of Joseph and Margaret Vitello of South Weymouth.

Miss Goyette graduated from Cohasset High School. She is employed at Hub Shipping Company in Cohasset.

Mr. Vitello is a graduate of Weymouth South High School. He is employed at J.W. Graham & Sons.

A Sept. 26 wedding is planned at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. A reception will follow at the Pembroke Country Club.

Mrs. Kevin Lessard

Weisenfluh/Lessard

Pamela Weisenfluh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Allen Weisenfluh of Rice Island, Cohasset, became the bride of Mr. Kevin Lessard of Barnard, Vermont, at an August 1 ceremony at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset.

The Rev. Gary Ritts and Fr. William Gallagher officiated.

Following the ceremony, the wedding party paraded around Cohasset Common on a carriage pulled by Clydesdale horses.

The bride and groom arrived via boat at a garden reception on the water held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Weisenfluh.

The bride wore a thule gown.

The bride was attended by Jennifer Deveney as maid of honor, and bridesmaids Stacey Gerrish, Susan Sweeney, Rebecca Westover, Margaret Wojcik, and Pamela Moffat, sister of the groom.

The bridesmaids carried sea lavender. Flower girls were nieces of the groom, Emily and MacKenzie Moffat.

Color theme for the wedding was pink and lavender.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lessard of Barnard, Vermont, chose his brother Brian Lessard to serve as best man. Users were Kurt Weisenfluh and Barton Weisenfluh, brothers of the bride; Kurt Lessard, brother of the groom; William Gage and Edward Howe.

The bride is a graduate of Dana Hall School in Wellesley and Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs, New York. She is employed as an investment officer at The Boston Five Savings Bank.

The groom is a graduate of the University of Vermont in Burlington and is a sales representative with Funk Software Inc., in Cambridge.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple is residing in Cohasset.

Cohasset's Michael O'Donnell earns humanitarian award

Braintree St. Coletta Day School honored Michael P. O'Donnell of Cohasset at its 23rd Humanitarian of the Year award ceremony, August 4.

O'Donnell, who lives on Nichols Road with his wife and daughter, is chairman of the board of Ground Round Restaurants, Inc., and president and chief executive officer of The Ground Round, Inc.

Last year The Ground Round commissioned its advertising agency to create a unique and attractive Christmas card to sell through its restaurants. The proceeds benefitted St. Coletta's.

"We fell that St. Coletta's is a very worth cause," O'Donnell said. "The Ground Round is very committed to designing and producing a distinctive Christmas Card which speaks of our special relationship with the children of St. Coletta's."

John W. Shyne, executive director of Braintree St. Coletta Day School, said St. Coletta's is fortunate to have O'Donnell's support.

"He is a remarkable and talented young man," Shyne said.

The private, non-profit school educates youngsters with mild-to-severe multi-handicaps in preparation for meaningful and fulfilling lives within the community.

The Humanitarian of the Year celebration afforded the administration, staff, and students of St. Coletta's the opportunity to formally thank O'Donnell for his caring assistance.

Meet the 10th Congressional candidates

Dan Daly

U.S. congressional candidate Daniel W. Daly believes the way to stimulate job growth is to provide tax incentives for businesses.

A business owner himself, Daly, a Republican from Hingham, left his most recent position as Undersecretary for Economic Affairs for Governor William Weld, to run for the 10th Congressional District seat currently held by U. S. Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Cohasset.

A focal point of Daly's campaign is his desire to reduce the capital gains tax for specific businesses.

"I want to cut the capital gains tax for businesses that create jobs," he said, "and not, like my opponent, have it apply to businesses that trade precious art."

Daly was referring to one of his Republican challengers, Michael Crossen of Mashpee.

The third GOP candidate for the 10th congressional seat is Robert King of Plymouth.

Daly said he also wants the Investment Tax Credit (ITC) reinstituted.

ITC, a victim of 80s tax reform, allows businesses to deduct a percentage of the purchase price of capital equipment from their taxes.

The deduction encourages employers to buy big-ticket items, Daly said, which increases the potential for job growth.

Targeting the real estate industry, Daly said he would like to see the passive-loss deduction, another victim of the Reagan-era tax reform, resurrected.

"It will help get real estate going again," he said.

The passive-loss deduction encourages real estate development, he said, because investors can deduct losses on their taxes more easily.

He also supports measures which would encourage banks to lend money to small businesses.

"I'd keep the pressure on the executive branch because banks have the money, they are just not lending."

While Daly does not support a universal health care plan, he advocates the use of a single standardized claim form—which he said would reduce insurance costs.

"The federal government would be the best area to implement a standardized form and they would force businesses to accept it."

He also supports the establishment of inner-city clinics, which according to Daly, will provide preventative health care and reduce expensive emergency room visits by the uninsured.

On education reform, national testing standards should be applied to both teachers and students, he said.

"Let's put more money into Head Start," he added.

Daly said parents can do their part for education and "shut the TV off."

Explaining that he is personally opposed to abortion, Daly said he supports a woman's right to choose.

"The role of government in these matters should be minimal."

While supporting construction of the Plymouth and Middleborough lines of the Old Colony Railroad, Daly opposes construction of an above-ground rail through Hingham as part of the Greenbush Line.

He said he was hopeful that a tunnel could be used through Hingham instead, adding that improved transportation is a pressing concern for the South Shore.

State Sen. Paul Harold

State Sen. Paul Harold, D-Quincy, a Democratic challenger for the 10th Congressional seat, is poised to drag Massachusetts back into a leadership position, and the key, he says, is job creation.

With 14 years in the state Senate, Harold hails his involvement with the Committee on Public Works and Transportation as an asset and promised to carry his commitment to infrastructure development to the national level.

"The government has got to get back into the water and sewer business," he said, pointing to Scituate's sewer treatment woes and to existing problems with water resource management in Brockton.

With the loss of fishing giant New Bedford, Harold down-played the importance of the fishing industry in the new district and accused incumbent U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, of clinging to a bygone issue.

If elected, Studds will chair the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. Harold said he would concentrate on public works and transportation to create more jobs.

"A freshman on a committee that's representative of the district can do more than the chairman of a committee that is not. . ." he said.

Harold opposes Studds' single-payer tax plan, opting instead for U.S. Sen. Ted Kennedy's, "pay or play" system.

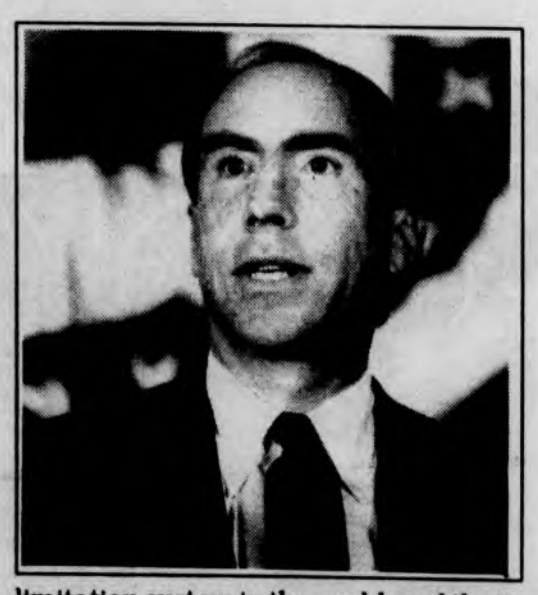
The proposal would assess a three to five percent payroll tax on employers to pick up underemployed and uninsured workers or force employers to pay 80 percent of health care costs.

He said an insured nation would be more apt to utilize preventive medicine, cutting costs by reducing expensive emergency procedures.

Harold said he would fight to ensure unspent defense dollars, realized as part of the peace dividend, would be used to reduce the $4 trillion national deficit and improve education.

A moderate pro-choice candidate, Harold believes in a woman's right to an abortion in the first trimester but sanctions second trimester abortions only in cases of rape, incest and health concerns.

Harold has long been a supporter of restored rail service to the South Shore.



He has spent the last five years assisting Fore River Shipyard workers in establishing an employee-owned and run company which, he claims, will be able to bid successfully against foreign competitors.

"We have laid the foundation for the shipyard to come back on a limited basis for ship repair and construction," he said.

"Now we need to bring together a coordinated national investment plan which provides tax programs that favor U.S. shipyards and finances the upgrading that's needed."

Harold is opposed to term limitations although he criticized the system for seeming to favor those candidates with "huge war chests."

U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds

Outlining his 10th Congressional District campaign platform, U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Cohasset, emphasized his front line position in the fight to reform the country's health care system.

He supports a single-payer system, akin to that operating in Canada, where the link between insurance coverage and employment has been severed and where pre-determined rates and fees are governed by the provincial government.

"The Canadians are spending substantially less," he said.

"In the United States, 20 to 25 percent of every dollar is spent on red tape. There are more people employed by Mass Blue Cross and Blue Shield than are in the entire Canadian system."

While he recognized that Massachusetts has the highest quality health care in the world, Studds said the uninsured "are more likely to get to Boston (hospitals) from Saudi Arabia than from Brockton."

With 20 years in Congress, Studds will assume chairmanship of the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries in his next term. The committee regulates fisheries, clean water funding and the U.S. Merchant Fleet.

He charges that the merchant marine is woefully under-equipped and should be directed to increase its fleet.

"These decisions will determine whether there will be work at the Quincy shipyard," he said.

Studds pledged his effort to eliminate boating user fees and the luxury tax and pointed to the success of his striped bass bill which has dramatically increased local populations.

He attacked the president's reference to Congress as a "tax and spend" entity.

"Congress has spent less than was asked for by both Bush and Reagan in the last 12 years," he said.

He is a proponent of investing Cold War dollars into the state's infrastructure to put people back to work and has aggressively pursued the expansion of public transportation into the South Shore.

A Cohasset native, Studds is a staunch supporter of the Old Colony restoration project.

He is a pro-choice candidate and is opposed to term limitations.

"I think we have the greatest term limitation system in the world, and that's an election," he said.

Campaigning in a re-districted area has presented only minor challenges, according to Studds, who lost Fall River and New Bedford and gained Quincy, Weymouth and part of Rockland and Brockton.

Weymouth and Rockland had been in the 10th District until 1983.

"I've been really touched by the people who remember us from 10 and even 20 years ago," Studds said.

"Obviously the loss of New Bedford hurt like hell, personally if not professionally. It was family for 20 years. . . but I've got a really good district in the South Shore and the Cape. It's not at all illogical. It really sticks together."

"And if we decide not to run again, it's going to make all the wrong people happy."

Congressional candidates speak to the Mariner

Jon L. Bryan, an unenrolled candidate for the 10th Congressional District, named jobs and the economy as this election year's predominant issues.

Bryan is a US Air pilot with 23 years flying experience and has taught management and aviation science at Bridgewater State College for the past 10 years. He also is president of Macronomics Inc., a financial and economic consultant.

A resident of Marston Mills, he ran for Congress in 1988 and 1990, most recently garnering 47 percent of the 10th District vote.

Bryan hopes to stimulate the economy by establishing targeted tax credits and investment incentives for small businesses and called for an overall reduction in federal deficit spending.

In the arena of health care, Bryan vows to push for a tort law reform to limit damages in medical lawsuits and unnecessary medical prescriptions.

He is seeking to increase tax deductions for individual health care, provide tax incentives to stimulate urban and rural health care centers, punish fraud and encourage preventative health care programs.

He promises to be tough on crime and environmental mismanagement and pledges to investigate educational choice to boost the nation's competitiveness in the world marketplace.

(See page 17)

Bryan strongly supports term limitations of four years for congressmen and, if elected, vowed to leave office after two terms.

MICHAEL CROSSEN

Republican candidate Michael Crossen called government spending control the key to stimulating the entire nation's economy.

"I really think it's the role of the government to get spending under control to lower taxes. It has to let business work for itself with no central planning," he said.

Crossen, a lawyer for Rubin and Rudman, a Boston firm specializing in energy and energy conservation, supports a capital gains tax to encourage business to remain local.

Crossen proposes to reduce health care premiums by establishing a 100 percent tax deduction for the self-employed. He would combine this with insurance and tax reforms and a reform of the tort system to more rigorously prosecute fraud.

He believes rate-payers should have more direct involvement in the payment system to increase awareness of skyrocketing medical care and administration costs.

A pro-choice Republican, Crossen does not believe in term limitations although he criticized the system for lending incumbents the advantage.

He ranks environmental concerns as a high on the list of voter concerns.

"People want to maintain their environment, and they recognize that it has deteriorated over the years. In this area especially, they recognize that the environment is important to our economy."

Crossen notes a need for the federal government to express a vested interest in education, but he felt any change should originate on the local level.

WILLIAM ZISSULIS

William G. Zissulis of Barnstable, a senior driver for Premium Beverage and Coastal Beverage of Avon for 22 years, is seeking the Democratic ticket.

An Air Force veteran, Zissulis has a background in labor relations and described himself as "a common person for a common cause."

If elected, he will rescind 50 percent of his salary and benefits and fight to abolish Congress' pension system. He is a proponent of a one-term limit.

Jobs, the economy and the federal deficit top his list of priority items.

Zissulis blames the deficit on the poor state of the present economy and warns of impending disaster if spending continues unchecked.

Using his labor experience, he says he will work with businesses to create investment incentives to expand growth and create jobs.

"Government is a failure at business," he said. "We need the private sector."

Zissulis is in favor of health care reform and would seek to implement a system which families could tailor to fit their needs.

He would finance the system with a combination of employment-based and government subsidized spending, fighting medical fraud and waste to alleviate rising costs.

He is in favor of creating a privatized educational system to compete with public schools.

He would create tax incentives for businesses to encourage them to be environmentally responsible and force violators to pay for cleanup costs.

Art lovers tours

Art lovers take note! This fall, the South Shore Art Center offers a course to those who "appreciate" the arts, in "Museum and Gallery Tours." Led by Louise Kalish, the class will spend three Thursday mornings (11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.) visiting Boston-area art museums and galleries. Gallery talks will be delivered by the directors, artists, or Ms. Kalish.

Thursday, Sept. 17, the class will travel to the Rose Art Museum at Brandeis University in Waltham to enjoy selections from their permanent collection of contemporary art.

The Nielsen Gallery on Newbury Street in Boston, where New York artist Willy Heeks' abstract paintings are on display, is the site of the October 15 tour. This is Heeks' first Boston show after a recent exhibition at the Corcoran in Washington, D.C.

The class' final visit will be at the Gallery Naga, also on Newbury Street in Boston, November 19 to view two solo shows by Boston artists. Ken Beck will be exhibiting realistic single object paintings while Sam Earle will display his acrylic and mixed media on doors.

The tours are scheduled from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Lunch is available near the different locations. The cost for the three-tour class is $30 for SSAC members and $40 for nonmembers. Carpooling is suggested. To register, please call (617) 383-9548 by September 11.

Women's voices are being heard . . .

relationship between men and women in the work place and whether he improperly used his position of dominance over her," Sherman said.

Determinations of who told the truth are irrelevant, she explained, because women walked away from the hearing feeling they were left out of the process because there were only men on the senate confirmation panel.

"Women came to understand that their voice and their understanding was not included in discussions on policy," she said.

And that understanding, Sherman added, has caused women to seek elective office in droves.

Women came to understand that their voice and their understanding was not included in discussions on policy,' —Elizabeth Sherman on outcome of Clarence Thomas-Anita Hill hearing.

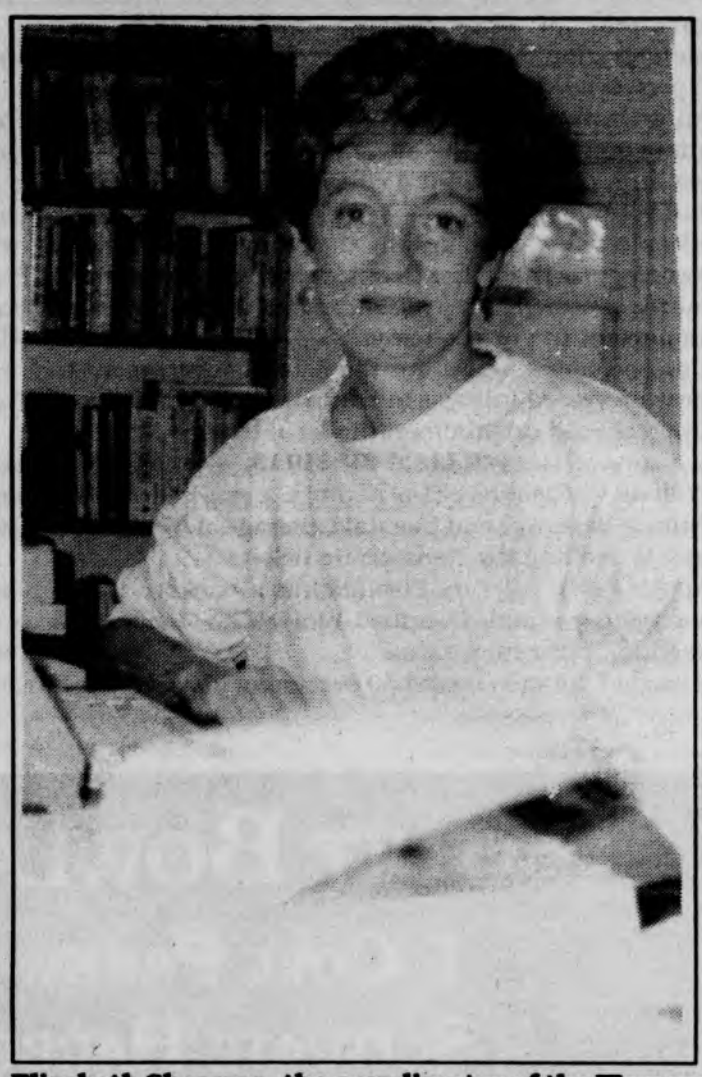
More than 100 women are campaigning for seats in the state senate and the state house of representatives, according to Beverly Droz, Executive Director of the Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus.



Sherman said the number of women seeking elective office is higher than ever before.

Nationally, the numbers are also up, with 17 women running for U.S. Senate seats, 147 for seats in the U.S. House of Representatives, six for governor and six for lieutenant governor, according to Patricia Reilly of the National Political Women's Caucus.

Sherman said about 10 percent of the program's graduates aspire to political careers. Included in the number is Chartis Langmaid, a democratic candidate for the state senate from Cohasset.

Because the program teaches students to think critically about policy issues, Sherman said, the majority of students use their training to direct public policy in non-elective ways.

Droz, for instance, is a graduate of the program. Gretchen Condon, former executive director of the Hingham Housing Authority is another graduate.

Elizabeth Sherman, the new director of the Women in Politics and government Program at the University of Massachusetts in Boston, gears up for the fall semester amidst a computer and books in her Hingham home.

(Staff photo/Dori Dwyer)

Sherman said while women have made in-roads into the public policy power structure, there is still a long way to go.

"We are experiencing a glass ceiling," she said. Less than five percent of the members of congress are women, she added.

Part of the reason the program moved to UMass Boston was because Boston College believed in the glass ceiling theory, Sherman said.

"There was this feeling at BC of 'Is this really necessary?'" she recalled.

Sherman is adamant in the continued need for the program.

"At high levels, women have still not arrived," she said.

University of Massachusetts will better serve the needs and aspirations of the program, she said.

"UMass has a lot of non-traditional classes, which take into account the diversity of the state," she said.

Sherman added that UMass would be more amenable to developing the women in politics and government program into an institute, which is one of the new director's goals.

Sherman would also like to see the program expand from its sole educational purpose, to a dual objective of education and research.

"I'd like to sponsor a research fellow every year. I'd like to have a fellow in residence," she said.

The institute could become the authoritative source of information on women in politics and government, Sherman explained.

If the program had money available this year, she said, we could hire retiring Senator Patricia McGovern, who chairs the state ways and means committee.

Sherman said as program director she is anxious to raise the money necessary to attain her goal of institutionalizing the program and adding a research component.

Women's Political Caucus to meet in Cohasset

Members of the Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus (MWPC) and former Rhode Island Congresswoman Claudine Schneider will gather at the home of longtime political activist Polly Logan to add momentum to women candidates in this pivotal year for women in politics. Area candidates for office in Massachusetts are also expected to attend. The fund-raising brunch will take place from noon to 2 p.m., at 121 Nichols Road, Cohasset, Sunday, Sept. 13.

The event, co-hosted by Ms. Logan and Hingham Democratic Town Committee Member Jane Malme, will combine the forces of both Democratic and Republican supporters of the Caucus. The MWPC is the local branch of the National Women's Political Caucus, the only bipartisan organization dedicated to increasing the number of women in elected office nationwide. The MWPC also sponsors training workshops, seminars and educational forums to improve women's political awareness and effectiveness.

"About 100 women in Massachusetts are running for The State Legislature this year," says Logan. "No matter what happens in November, that increase over previous years is a victory in itself, and will provide a strong base for future elections," adds Malme.

In Congress, Schneider served on several key environmental committees, co-founded and co-chaired the Congressional Competitiveness Caucus to boost U.S. competitiveness abroad, and championed women's rights through her advocacy of pay equity, child care and increased research on women's health concerns. After an unsuccessful bid for the Senate in 1990, she taught at Harvard University's Institute of Politics, and currently heads the Artemis Project, a coalition of economic and scientific leaders committed to sustaining biological diversity.

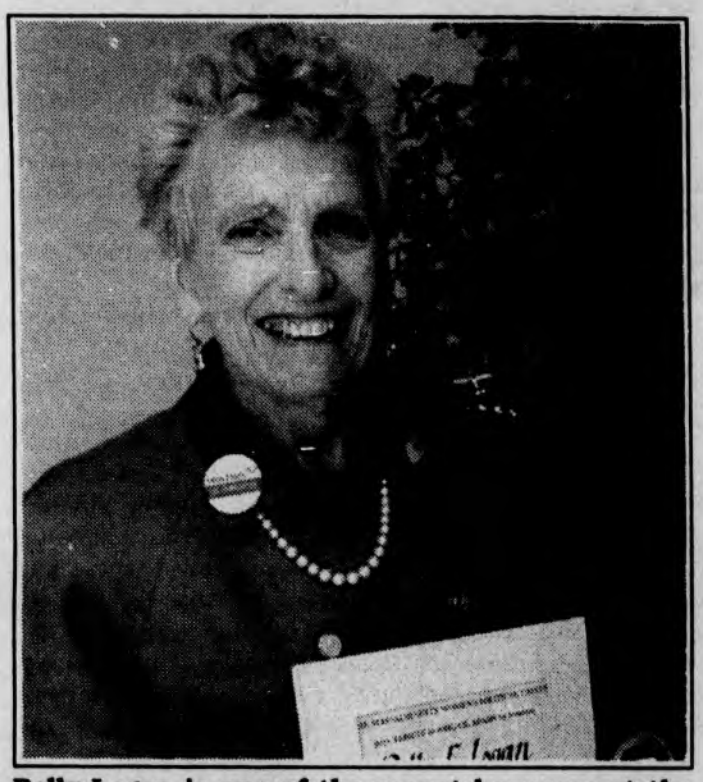
"It is only by electing more women to public office that we will see our economy and our communities in balanced harmony," says Schneider, who is making a special trip to Boston for the MWPC.

Ms. Logan, a founder of the MWPC in 1974, has worked to ensure political and economic equality for all women. A former Republican National Committee Member, she is currently a member of the Massachusetts Republican State Committee. Her numerous affiliations include the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, Clean Needles, Inc., the Board of Overseers of both the Museum of Fine Arts and Harvard University. Also long active in local government, Ms. Malme, an attorney and associate of the Lincoln Land Institute in Cambridge, is a current member of MWPC's Steering Committee and serves as President of the Boston Network for Women in Politics and Government.

The MWPC is the only statewide multi-partisan, grassroots organization which identifies, recruits, trains and supports women for elected and appointed office at all levels of government.

Tickets for this membership event range from $25 to $100. One year's MWPC's membership is included in tickets $50 and above. Membership is $40 and is split 50/50 with the National Women's Political Caucus. For more information, please call the MWPC at 617/451-9294.

Polly Logan honored by women's caucus



Polly Logan of Cohasset is one of the recent honorees at the Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus (MWPC) Fifth Annual Tribute to Abigail Adam at The John Hancock Conference Center.

As a founder of the Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus in 1974, Polly worked indefatigably to ensure political and economic equality for all women. Polly is a former Republican National Committee Member and currently a member of the Massachusetts Republican State Committee. Her voluminous affiliations include the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, Clean Needles Inc., the Board of Overseers of both the Museum of Fine Arts and Harvard University.

This annual MWPC event was dedicated to Massachusetts' own Abigail Adams, wife of the second president of the United States, and mother of the sixth, and acknowledges women who best embody her strong commitment to equal political, economic, and social rights for women.

"The award recipients were selected for emulating Abigail Adam's patriotism, public mindedness, clear perception of rights and dedication," says Sondra Shick, MWPC Chairwoman. "They Honor us with their commitment, service to other women, and feminist values," adds Shick.

The MWPC is a state-wide multi-partisan organization committed to increasing the numbers of qualified women in elected and appointed office in Massachusetts.

Polly Logan is one of the recent honorees at the Massachusetts Political Caucus 5th annual tribute to Abigail Adams at the John Hancock Conference Center.

Little League tryouts

Tryouts for the 1993 Major League Division of the Cohasset Little League are Sunday, Oct. 4, from 1 to 4 p.m. All youngsters whose tenth birthday takes place before Aug. 1, 1993, and who do not have their 13th birthday before that date are eligible to try out. Players already on a major league roster are not required to attend the tryouts.

The tryouts will take place, as follows:

Ten year old – 1 to 2 p.m.; 11 year old – 2 to 3 p.m.; and 12 year old – 3 to 4 p.m.

All players are required to register prior to that date. In the event of cancellation due to inclement weather, the tryouts are Monday, Oct. 12, (Columbus Day) from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Football is back

1992 will be an exciting season for Cohasset High School football. Our young men have been working hard throughout the summer preparing for team workouts which began last week.

Opening game is against West Bridgewater on Saturday, Sept. 19 at Milliken field. Kick off is 1 p.m.

Football is back — support your team!

Clean Air Classic

Lester Hiltz, a 61-year-old native of Cohasset, will be guest of honor at the Lung Association's first "Clean Air Classic" Golf tournament Oct. 5. The tournament will be held at the Cohasset Golf Club.

Hiltz, who retired this year from his job as health agent in Norwell, suffers from a lung disease called pulmonary fibrosis and requires oxygen 24 hours a day. To complete the 18-hole course, he will need three tanks of oxygen.

"The least bit of exertion does me in," he says. "I can't turn over in bed without getting exhausted." But, incredibly, he has devised a way to continue playing golf, his passion.

His friend, Bob Mullin, loads the cart and drives it close to each tee and to every shot played. Connected to the tank of oxygen is a 25-foot extension cord, and a motorcycle battery makes the oxygen supply last longer than usual.

Hiltz, who has played in several tournaments this summer, says he is especially glad to play in this one to support the Lung Association's fight against lung disease and to encourage smokers to quit.

Golfers who want to join the effort should contact the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association at 25 Spring Street, Walpole, MA 02081. Telephone number is (508) 668-6729.

Mammography reminder

Mammography screening is Saturday, Sept. 12, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Mobile Diagnostics Van, Cohasset Town Hall lot. Please call 383-0771 for appointment.

Here is your personal checklist for breast cancer detection.

- Mammography for all women who are age 40 or older
- A regular breast exam by a health professional
- Monthly breast self-examination
- Personal alertness for changes in the breasts
- Readiness to discuss quickly any such changes with a doctor.

The above guidelines are recommended by the National Cancer Institute.

A family history of breast cancer makes it even more important to discuss prevention with a doctor. A doctor's order is not necessary to have a mammogram but ask your doctor what he/she would recommend in your case and cooperate with the doctor in planning your health care.

Debate on cable

Sunday, Sept. 13, host Wigmore Pierson's guests on a Special Edition of Pierson to Person will be Congressional Democratic candidates Representative Gerry E. Studds, Cohasset; State Senator Paul Harold, Quincy; and William G. Zissulis, West Barnstable.

The Pierson to Person television show will be broadcast live Sunday, 8-10 p.m., from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hanover, Hingham, Hull and Norwell; on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Scituate; and on a tape-delayed basis in Marshfield, Weymouth, Brockton, Stoughton, Quincy, Plymouth, and many surrounding towns. The public is invited to be part of the studio audience.

Each candidate will make a two-minute opening statement, a two-minute closing statement, and have the opportunity to ask each opponent two questions during the program.

To reserve a seat for this debate and for further information about upcoming guests and additional show information contact the Pierson Show's Executive Producer, Robert Belliveau at 545-2500.

Register for SHARE

SHARE is a non-profit organization dedicated to community service and self-help, offering good food at great savings for those who participate.

Registration is from 7 to 8 p.m. tonight at the Council on Aging at the Community Center on Main St.

SHARE participants pay $13 for the food and pledge two hours of volunteer service once a month. In return you receive 15-17 food items, good wholesome nutritious food purchased from growers and processors, with a retail value of $25-$35. SHARE has no eligibility or income requirements and is not connected in any way to any government program.

If you are interested in finding out more about this self-help program please call the COA at 383-9112.

Junior Voices sign up

The special singing experience called "Junior Voices" is about to begin again in Hingham, with Tuesday afternoon rehearsal/classes for children 7 to 13 who love to sing and perform. Music reading skills are incorporated into the program, so that new music can be learned from reading notes, not just by ear. Each hour's activities include games, songs, exercises and drills, taught with enthusiasm and energy to improve reading and the ability to sing with proper voice production in two and three parts.

JV's instructor/conductor Margo Euler is the founder and director of The Broad Cove Chorale and Unicorn Singers; she received her music education at Smith College and Harvard's Graduate School of Education, and has taught music at all levels in the public schools.

Registration for the fall 1992 program is Tuesday, Sept. 15, from 4 to 5 p.m. New children must be accompanied by a parent and should come to Second Parish Church, 685 Main St., So. Hingham, at 4 p.m. Children who sang with JVs last spring or in a previous semester may be dropped off, with tuition check of $70. Those who absolutely can't come Tuesday but do wish to sing in JVs must pre-register by phone with Margo Euler Monday, Sept. 14, before 6 p.m., or Tuesday, Sept. 15, between noon and 2 p.m. Call 749-7890 or 749-6561.

Junior Voices performs as a chorus several times a year, so a serious commitment to the weekly rehearsal/class is required. Children considering enrollment should have a strong love of singing, good attention span and ability to match pitches accurately.

Please call JV's administrative/coordinator Linda Hurt at 826-9816 for further details about the program before Sept. 15.

Reporters on cable

Thursday, Sept. 10, host Wigmore Pierson's guests on Pierson to Person will be Mary Ford, Editor of The Cohasset and Hingham Mariner Newspapers and Molly Hochkeppel, correspondent for The Patriot Ledger and producer for The Darling Productions Theater, Quincy.

The second segment guest will be Arnold J. Nickerson, former owner of the now defunct Nickerson Theaters of Norwell and Sudbury.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday, 8-9 p.m., from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hanover, Hingham, Hull, and Norwell; on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Scituate; and on a tape-delayed basis in Marshfield, Weymouth, Brockton, Stoughton, and many surrounding towns. The public is invited to be part of the studio audience each Thursday evening and those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

For further information about upcoming guests and additional show information call the Pierson Show's Executive Producer, Robert Belliveau at 545-2500.

Cub Scout signups

Calling all boys in grades one through five! Come join the fun of Cub Scouting with Pack 38. Sign-up night is next Wednesday night, Sept. 16 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the Deer Hill School cafeteria.

Tiger Cubs is the program for first grade boys and their adult partners. Second and third graders may join Wolf and Bear Cubs, respectively. Boys entering fourth and fifth grades sign up for Webelos Scouting. Each program is tailored for the target group and presents age-appropriate challenges and responsibilities.

The annual registration fee is $25 for all programs, except Tiger Cubs which is $20 for the year. Special-rate subscriptions for Boy's Life Magazine are available at this time for $7.80 per year. This is a 65 percent discount off the cover price available only during annual registration.

So, bring yourself! Bring a friend! Bring your parents! And "Come Join The Fun" of Cub Scouting!

Seniors update

The council on aging is offering seniors 55+ FARMER's MARKET COUPONS.

The coupons are available at the senior center, 3 North Main Street, Cohasset. These coupons come in $1 denominations and each senior is eligible for $5 worth of coupons. They can be redeemed up until the close of the market season.

SHARE — Registration for the Cohasset SHARE program will be held Thursday, Sept. 10 from 7 to 8 p.m.

SHARE stands for Self Help and Resource Exchange. Families and individuals pay $13 and two hours of community service for a food package worth about $30.

People can use cash or food stampa are accepted. Personal checks are not.

Most community service in the program has been in local Councils on Agings, town halls and churches. There is no limit to the kinds of services volunteers can offer. Participants are encouraged to share their time and talents.

For more details about SHARE, please call John Kierce at 383-0578, or Council on Aging, 383-9112.

St. Anthony's classes

St. Anthony's Parish registration for religious education classes is Sept. 12 and 13 in the Desmond Room after all Masses.

Welcome Back Sunday

Welcome Back Sunday at First Parish in Cohasset is Sept. 13 beginning with a pancake breakfast in the Parish House at 23 North Main Street, across from the Meeting House on the Common.

The breakfast begins at 9:30 a.m. and will be followed by an intergenerational service of worship in the Meeting House at 10:30 a.m.

The congregation will be greeting Rev. Ed Atkinson who has just returned from a four-month sabbatical leave during which he and his wife toured the United States and Canada.

The theme for the morning is "Make New Friends and Keep the Old," and the church wishes to extend an open invitation to all to attend: church members, visitors and those who might like to know more about the programs and activities of the First Parish. A donation of $1.50 per adult and 75 cents per child for the breakfast would be appreciated.

First Parish in Cohasset is a Unitarian Universalist congregation centered on a non-doctrinal approach to religion which respects a diversity of beliefs and traditions while encouraging spiritual growth, ethical conduct and service to the larger community.

Tag sale, Sept. 26

Tag Sale on the Common. Crafters and Tag Salers welcome! Saturday, Sept. 26, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Cohasset Common.

This year marks the 5th Annual Tag Sale on the Common!

Tag Sale guidelines:

- Sale space fee is for a 6 x 10 area.
- Provide table(s), chair(s), etc. for display.
- Have cash box and change.
- Responsible for cleanup of sale area.

Setup on the Common begins at 7:30 a.m. Food is available at a Community Center concession stand on the Common or by local merchants in the downtown area. Rest rooms will be open in the Community Center building. The Community Center must receive a check in order to reserve a space. For further information, please call the Center at 383-0088.

Sign up for soccer

Registration for fall soccer programs, sponsored by the recreation department, is tonight from 5 to 7 p.m., Sept. 10; and from 9 to 11 a.m. Sept. 12.

Soccer clinics are planned for boys and girls in kindergarten through second grade. Leagues are for kids in grades three through seven.

Games and clinics begin, Sept. 19. For more information, please call the recreation department at 383-6791.

The Cohasset Community Center welcomes to the "1992" Dance program instructors Tiffany Zaniboni and Donna Joyce.

Tiffany Zaniboni has studied dance since the age of three. Tiffany taught dance classes in ballet and jazz at the Plymouth Academy of Dance for children from the beginner level to advanced levels. She pursued her career in dance as a Dance major through college with classes from technique to choreography and has experienced all forms of dance. Tiffany is certified with the American Red Cross, the American Heart Association, and the Aerobics and Fitness Association.

A variety of classes will be taught; including ballet, jazz, and a new fun style dance. Call 383-0088 for more information.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
92E0077-G1

To all persons interested in the estate of Mary C. Sears late of Cohasset in said County:

A petition has been presented to said Court by Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company, trustee, PRAYING: That this Honorable Court enter a judgment instructing distribution of certain trust property and funds held in trust under Article 4 (2) of the will of Mary C. Sears, for reasons more fully set out in said petition;

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file in said Court at Dedham a written appearance and answer or other legal pleading, within twenty days after the twenty-fifth day of November 1992, the return day of this citation.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this twenty-eighth day of August 1992.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT NORFOLK DIVISION DOCKET NO. 145913 NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of Adelbert E. Buffum late of Cohasset Norfolk County.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the twenty-ninth through thirty-second account(s) of State Street Bank and Trust Company and F. Murray Forbes, Jr. as Trustees (the fiduciary) under the will of said deceased for the benefit of Frances Snyder and others have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said account(s), you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the thirtieth day of September, 1992 the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said account(s). If you desire to object to any item of said account(s), you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham this twenty-seventh day of August, 1992.

business notes

Patricia Pomerleau, executive vice president of South Shore Hospital, talks on recent improvements at the hospital and the new Advanced Life Support system now serving Cohasset and other area towns at 8 p.m., Sept. 15 at the South Shore Arts Center.

Pomerleau's talk is sponsored by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

The ALS ambulance and the new Cohasset ambulance will be on display from 7:30 to 8 p.m. Paramedics, EMTs and firefighters will be on hand to answer any questions.

The public is also invited to join chamber members at 7:30 p.m. at the arts center for refreshments.

For more information, please call Bob Martin at 383-1010 or 383-0785.

Paul Finnegan and Sandra Noble have recently joined the Cohasset Office of Jack Conway & Company, Inc. as sales associates, according to manager Mary Ellen Neagle.

Finnegan is a former University Administrator and presently resides in Scituate. He is a member of Scituate Harbor Yacht Club.

Noble is a graduate of Fitchburg State College and is currently a member of Cohasset So. Shore Art Center. She is married and has three children and resides in Cohasset.

Mary Ellen Neagle has been named Top Producer for the first six months of 1992 for the Cohasset Office of Jack Conway and Company, Inc.

The award was presented to Ms. Neagle by Conway President Dick Cahill at a business breakfast held at Lombardo's in Randolph June 25. Said Mr. Cahill, "We are pleased to recognize Mary Ellen for her outstanding efforts in selling property in what is still a tight economy. It's a tribute to her professionalism, salesmanship and real estate savvy that she was able to come out on top in her office."

Advanced Life Support Paramedics pose with the ALS ambulance — a new service provided by South Shore Hospital — (pictured top left to right), Rich Kelly of Marshfield, Lisa Nasuti of Weymouth, Peggy Cass, EMS/paramedic coordinator of Boston, John Ahlstedt of Weymouth, Bob Flater of Braintree, Charlie

Paul Finnegan recently joined the Cohasset Office of Jack Conway & Company, Inc., as a sales associate.

A Scituate resident, Finnegan is a former university administrator at UMass Boston, and taught at both Bridgewater and Boston State Colleges. He is a graduate of Boston College and holds a degree in political science.

Sparks fly in debate over wire department

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Sparks flew between Supt. of Wires Stephen Wigmore and Selectmen Chairman Jane O. Goedecke Monday over wire department accountability.

Wigmore, who was at the selectmen's meeting to answer questions about how his department spends its time, angered Goedecke when he said the fire chief should refer questions on fire boxes to the wire department, not the selectmen.

"There is a difference between talking about fire boxes and policy," she said.

"And I am not going to defer to you," Goedecke added.

Fire Chief John Nadeau — along with most other department heads — submitted an analysis of the number of hours his department uses the wire department annually.

Nadeau included his suggestion that costs could be eliminated if the town fire boxes were dismantled.

The scrutiny paid to the wire department during the meeting angered Wigmore.

"It seems to me it's the only department in the history of Cohasset that has been asked to submit its hours," he said.

"The last time we had a meeting with the advisory

McDonald, Daly win in exciting contests

By Tom Henshaw

Former Selectman Brian J. McDonald survived a last minute assault from an unexpected quarter to win 66.3% of the Weymouth vote and capture the Democratic nomination for state senator from the Norfolk-Plymouth District Tuesday.

McDonald will face incumbent Republican Sen. Robert Hedlund in the general election.

Cong. Gerry Studds absorbed Paul Harold's best punches in the unfamiliar precincts of Weymouth, Quincy and

Bill Weeks passes the gavel

By Mary Ford

Although some town officials think William Weeks should finish out his term, they can agree on one thing.

Weeks — who is stepping down as town moderator after 12 years — is a class act.

"He's a very good moderator, very even handed," said selectman Martha Gjesteby, who said publicly she would

Selectmen revoke Roberts Food Mart liquor license

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

There is one more liquor license available in town this week.

With merchants from Jonathan Livingston Square urging swift action, selectmen Monday revoked the liquor license of Roberts' Food Mart, formerly located in the square on Route 3A.

But owner William Roberts said he would appeal the town's decision to the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC.)

The food mart was destroyed in an April 24 fire, which is still under investigation.

To the chagrin of square business owners and the landlord, Thomas Cummings, the space has remained vacant since the fire.

Food mart owner William Roberts said he cannot reopen because damage from the fire exceeded his insurance coverage by $118,000.

While Cummings recently broke his lease with Roberts through an Aug. 13 court action, he is unable to rent the space to a store with a liquor license without the revocation of the existing liquor license on the property.

Cohasset kids learn the 'niceties'

Waltzes, dance cards, and proper salutations are becoming a part of the lives of more youngsters in Cohasset.

According to those who offer programs which combine formal dance instruction and social etiquette, the trend in town is indicative of a larger movement which is sweeping across the country.

"There is a big resurgence in learning manners and niceties," Amy M. Tunnicliffe said.

Amy, and her husband Guy W. of Hingham began offering a junior cotillion program, which combines dance and social behavior instruction, for South Shore youngsters 18 months ago.

Demand for the Tunnicliffes' classes has been so overwhelming, they added Cohasset to the locations where there program is offered.

The first local class will be held at the Cohasset

New town accountant

J. Michael Buckley Jr. of Pembroke beat out five other candidates for the town accountant position.

Selectmen Monday unanimously voted to offer Buckley, who is the town accountant in Westport, and a former assistant town accountant in Hingham, the job.

Selectman Chairman Jane O. Goedecke and selectman Merle S. Brown are on the sub-committee to negotiate Buckley's salary.

Mary Gallagher, the former town accountant, earned $35,416.16 annually.

Goedecke said she hoped Buckley would begin within the next several weeks because the position has been vacant since Gallagher left in March.

Special Town Meeting

The date for the Special Town Meeting is Nov. 16.

Selectmen set the date at Monday's meeting, noting that an interim town moderator would have to be appointed because Town Moderator William Weeks is stepping down.

The warrant opens on Oct. 5 and will close Oct. 13. Selectmen will vote to accept the articles submitted for the warrant on Oct 19.

Ambulance bids needed

None of the bidders for the ambulance contract were able to meet the bid specifications, and keep the price below the $90,000 limit stipulated in the bid request.

Selectman Chairman Jane O. Goedecke noted that it was the first time in her tenure on the board that businesses bid over the specified cost of a project.

Of the eight bid requests sent out, the town only received two bids: one for $92,362 and the other for $95,160.

Selectmen voted to put the job out to bid again, but this time Fire Chief John Nadeau will cut out some items previously requested from the bid request in an effort to keep the price at or below $90,000.

Debbie Cook hands hazardous waste to Laidlaw Environmental Services worker Trisha Beaird at the hazardous waste collection day, paid for through Cohasset taxpayers' passing a Prop. 2-1/2 override last spring. The event was held in the Cohasset High parking lot Saturday.

Cesspool issue unclear

Whether or not cesspools must be replaced is still uncertain.

Selectmen Michael Sullivan told the board Monday that he spoke with state officials regarding the upgrading of cesspools in order to be in compliance with state guidelines.

"They stated that cesspools are not grandfathered," he said.

"However, they are not taking the position where they ask the town to upgrade the system," he said.

Sullivan said the board of health will still organize an ad hoc committee on cesspool upgrading, but should develop a specific charge for the committee.

Matos gets raise

Selectmen approved a salary increase for police officer Lisa M. Matos.

Her salary will increase from $28,683 to $29,322.

Selectman Michael Sullivan suggested that in the future the board "consider" instituting a performance review prior to granting salary increases to town employees.

Bill Weld

Name: William Weld

Occupation: Governor of Massachusetts

Best Day of your life: June 7, 1975 — the day I got married.

Most embarrassing moment: None of your business! I was a teenager and it was really embarrassing.

Goal: To eradicate the label 'Tax-achusetts' from the state once and for all. Give me eight years and I will.

Favorite season: Fall. I like to hunt and fish. I'm a real Northerner, I like the cold weather.

Best vacation: Antigua in the West Indies with my wife between the election and taking office in 1990. It was probably because the campaign was over.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving.

Pet peeve: Typographical errors.

Favorite book: Parade's End by Ford Madox Ford.

Favorite movie: Tom Jones.

Biggest worry: To lose my veto strength in the senate.

Favorite place: Up-state New York where I love to go fishing.

Moderator Weeks passes the gavel . . .

have preferred that Weeks stay on until the town election.

"He tried to be fair and bent over backwards to be non-partisan," she added.

Former selectman Burtram Pratt said he wasn't happy with Weeks' resignation before the end of his term but he had nothing but praise for the way Weeks conducted the job.

"Bill is a fine moderator and he leaned over backwards to be fair and impartial.

"He ran a good town meeting," he said.

Weeks says there's no ulterior motive to his stepping down before the end of his term in April.

"I've given it a great deal of thought," he said. "And for a variety of reasons, the time had come to step aside at this point."

Weeks explained that he did not want to go through another annual town meeting.

"It has become a difficult task meeting on successive nights and so forth," he said. "And there may be a lengthy special town meeting this fall."

The annual elections in Cohasset are held on the Saturday following the opening session (s) of the annual town meeting — so if Weeks continued as moderator, he would be presiding over the annual town meeting.

Weeks — who served as state senator for the Norfolk/Plymouth district for six years and came within 1,000 votes of defeating Congressman Gerry Studds in the 10th Congressional District race in 1972 — has no regrets.

"I've enjoyed serving as moderator greatly. I got a great deal out of it. It has been enormously gratifying to receive the cooperation and support of everybody," he said.

The moderator's job also includes being involved with making appointments to some town committees.

He added that he is a big proponent of the town meeting form of government.

Weeks was appointed as moderator following the resignation of David Place, who also stepped down in mid-term.

He was unopposed in the election for town moderator the following spring and was re-elected four times.

Weeks said he decided to run for moderator because the wanted "to give the town something back."

Weeks and his wife, Franny have lived in town 35 years, and raised four children here.

A lawyer with the Boston law firm Sherburne, Powers & Needham, Weeks says he's not retiring from work or involvement.

But he said the demands of work are one of the reasons for his stepping down from the moderator post.

"I'm not planning to fade away. I certainly will continue to maintain strong interest in this wonderful town."

Advisory board member Ann Whelan, who is a former campaign worker for Weeks, said Weeks will be missed.

"He is a delightful man. I'm sad he's stepping down, he ran town meeting with such dignity," she said.

Selectmen Chairman Jane Goedecke said Weeks taught her the ropes.

"He was the person who taught me how town meeting works," she said. "He's done an excellent job over the years."

Goedecke has no problem with Weeks' stepping down before the end of his term.

"He's served 12 long and faithful years. And if it's convenient now for him to step down then that's his prerogative."

Selectmen will appoint an interim town moderator to serve until the spring election. The interim moderator will preside of the Nov. 19 special town meeting.

So far Myrna Putziger, chairman of the zoning board of appeals, and George Marlette, chairman of the board of registrars, have applied.

Roberts Food Mart loses liquor license . . .

Cummings, and the merchants gathered at the meeting, said the liquor sold at the food mart was a draw and they want a similar store to replace Roberts Food Mart.

Roberts said that of his annual $750,000 in sales, only 15 percent of his business was in beer and wine.

"Beer and wine will not make or break a convenience store," he said.

Citing abandonment of the business, Cummings asked selectmen to revoke Roberts' liquor license in order that the space may be leased to another merchant selling beer and wine.

"I've spent days, weeks and months trying to get a hold of Mr. Roberts to discover his intentions," Cummings, an attorney, said.

Cummings added that he sent registered letters and made numerous phone calls to Roberts in order to find out what his intentions were.

Roberts said he did not respond to the inquiries on the advice of counsel.

"Because they talked about it (the fire) being suspicious, he told me not to talk to anyone," Roberts said.

Roberts' attorney, William Clary of North Scituate, asked selectmen to delay the revocation so his client would have enough time to sell the license.

"In order to be fair about this, considering the fire, I respectfully request that the license remain in tact and board, I got the feeling we were hung out to dry," Wigmore said.

Sparks fly in wire debate . . .

Goedecke disagreed.

"I sat at that meeting with the advisory committee, and the purpose of this meeting is to improve the impression — you left at that meeting — that the wire department doesn't do enough work to add up to a year," Goedecke explained.

"We have talked about this all along. If we are forced to make a decision to reduce or eliminate the wire department, it will be done gradually, over a period of time," she said.

The wire department was established in 1950 and has a 1992-1993 annual budget of about $70,000.

But due to the town's fiscal crunch, selectmen are reviewing the wire department to determine if it is needed as part of an overall cost-cutting plan.

Wigmore warned the board that cutting his department would cost more money in the long run.

"If you are going to do away with the wire department, you are going to be paying a high price for electricians," he said.

In Nadeau's analysis, he estimated it would cost $14,500 to maintain the present system, which consists of fire boxes around town.

The costs, Nadeau said, could be avoided if the system were dismantled.

The suggestion was also met with resistance by Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle.

"The issue has been to do away with the fire alarm system for years," he said.

"It would cost $40 or $50 an hour for a private electrician to make repairs to the system, and things always happen in the off-peak hours," he said.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said an analysis of the present fire box system needs to be done before any decisions are made.

Selectman Merle S. Brown said he supported the fire box system at the present time.

"I don't think we should do away with the present system, especially since we do not have 911," he said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she wanted to review the information.

Food mart loses liquor license . . .

that Mr. Roberts make his best efforts to sell the license," Clary said to the board.

"He paid for the license for the year and he should have the opportunity to sell it," he said.

Clary said similar liquor licenses in Hingham have sold for approximately $15,000.

He added that Roberts, who operates a similar business in Hanover, was trying to find a new location for the food mart.

Deborah Ryan, owner of Cohasset Pizza, said Roberts Food Mart was a pivotal draw to the square. She asked selectmen to take any steps which would hasten filling the space.

"We are all suffering because an anchor store is not here anymore," she said. "(The entanglements of) Bill Roberts store is holding things up."

Richard Lamb, of Lamb's Insurance in the square, said he was concerned that the space formerly occupied by Roberts Food Mart has been vacant so long.

"I wish Mr. Roberts could go back in, he had a gold mine," he said.

Lamb's business, and that of Cohasset Antiques owner Nancy Pereto, sustained damage because of the fire.

Pereto also urged selectmen to take steps so a new store could lease the Roberts Food Mart space.

"We are dying," she said of the slow-down in traffic because of the empty store.

Town counsel Richard Henderson told selectmen their only criteria in making their decision to revoke the liquor license was to determine whether the business was abandoned. "The issue is whether the license holder was in control of the premises and whether there was abandonment of the property," Henderson said.

With their revocation of the food mart liquor license, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said the town now has four liquor licenses.

Doyon also questioned the viability of selling a liquor license for $15,000.

He said someone could apply for one of the four available at town hall and pay approximately $700.

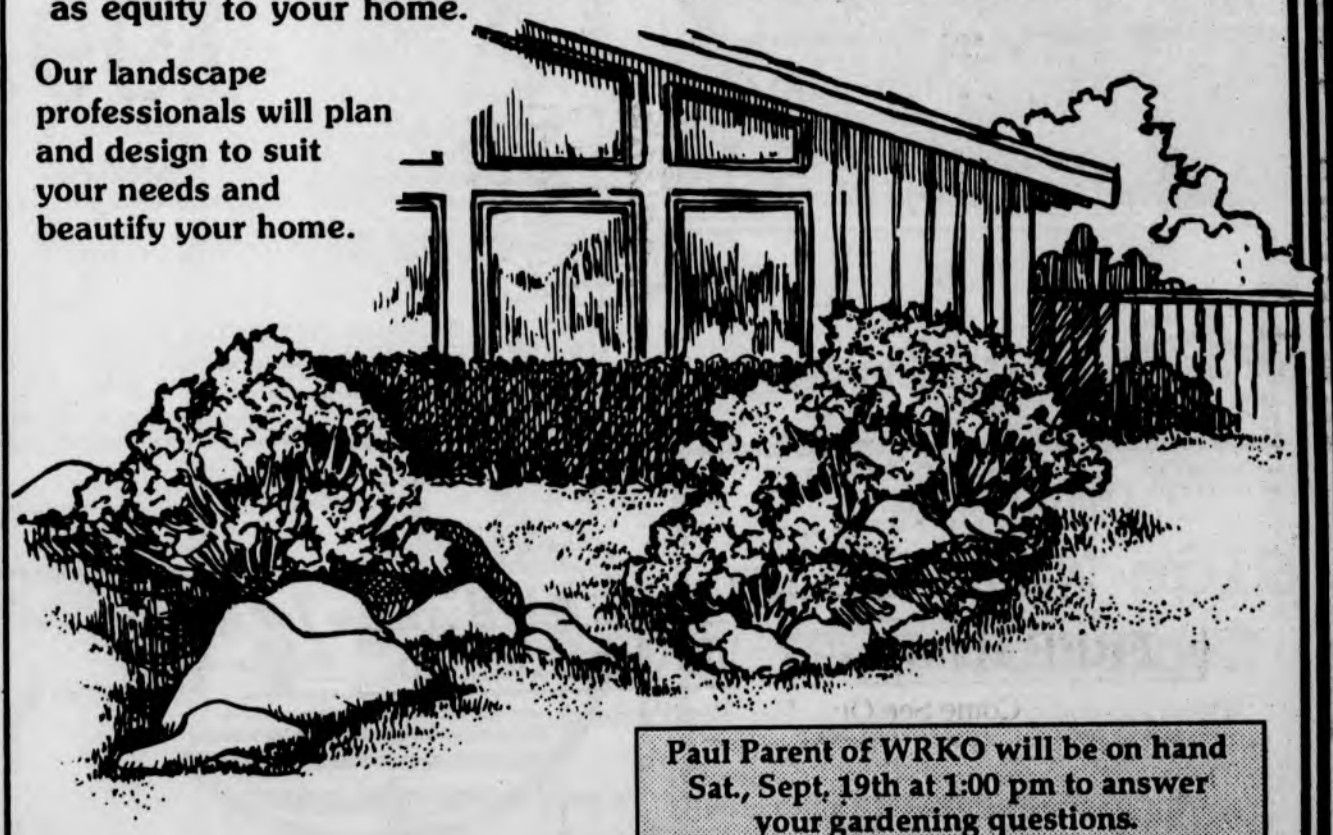
WHY A TITLE SEARCH

QUESTION: Why is a title search necessary when you buy a home?

ANSWER: Skipping the title search is like buying a new car without a warranty — except the stakes are higher. Although you may be the only buyer, others may also claim rights to the property. There may be an easement to restrict the use of your land or unpaid taxes. An heir to a former owner may claim a share of the property.



A title search will check for any such possible claims and determine if the title is clear. Your deed does not eliminate claims that others may have. It simply transfers the seller's right of ownership to you.

Cotillion . . .

Community Center, Oct. 2, at 7:30 p.m.

Sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders are eligible to participate.

"We knew it would be successful — that there were certain people who would enroll, but we had no idea it would have such a broad reach," Amy said.

John Notts of Plymouth has been giving similar classes in the South Shore for the past 54 years.

"In the 60s and 70s it slipped quite a bit," he said.

"But in the 80s and 90s it has really picked up," Notts added.

The Tunnicliffes believe baby-boom parents, many of whom grew up in an era where formal behavior was shunned, are responsible for the renewed focus on manners and social etiquette.

"During the 30s and up until the Vietnam War, it (cotillions) was big," Guy said.

"With the 80s, and especially with people becoming more status conscious, people found themselves in formal situations where they did not know how to act," Amy explained.

"People want to make sure their children are never in that situation," she added.

Linda Henderson of Cohasset enrolled her 13-year-old daughter Emily for just that reason.

"Somehow Junior Cotillion doesn't seem terribly relevant to the world we live in today — but on the other hand, we expect kids to know social skills they are not exposed to," Henderson said.

The Tunnicliffes operate the Junior Cotillion of Greater Boston, the only Massachusetts chapter of the National League of Junior Cotillions (NLJC) headquartered in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Director of the NLJC Anne Colvin Winters offers a similar theory to explain the increasing enrollment of children in social etiquette classes.

"It helps them withstand negative peer pressure at school," she said.

"Cotillion programs teach the customs and courtesies that will serve the students for a lifetime. It will have a lasting effect on the self-esteem and social development of young people," she said.

Parents seem to agree.

Susan Baker's daughter Hilary is in the eighth-grade at Hingham Junior High school and attends the Tunnicliffe's two-year program.

"I thought it was an excellent program because they learn manners, etiquette and dancing," Baker said.

"The dancing was a lot of fun, but the wonderful thing is that it has really increased her confidence," she added.

Paula Walsh of Hingham, whose daughter Allison will begin her second year of dancing and etiquette training with the Notts program, also praises the effect such classes have on children.

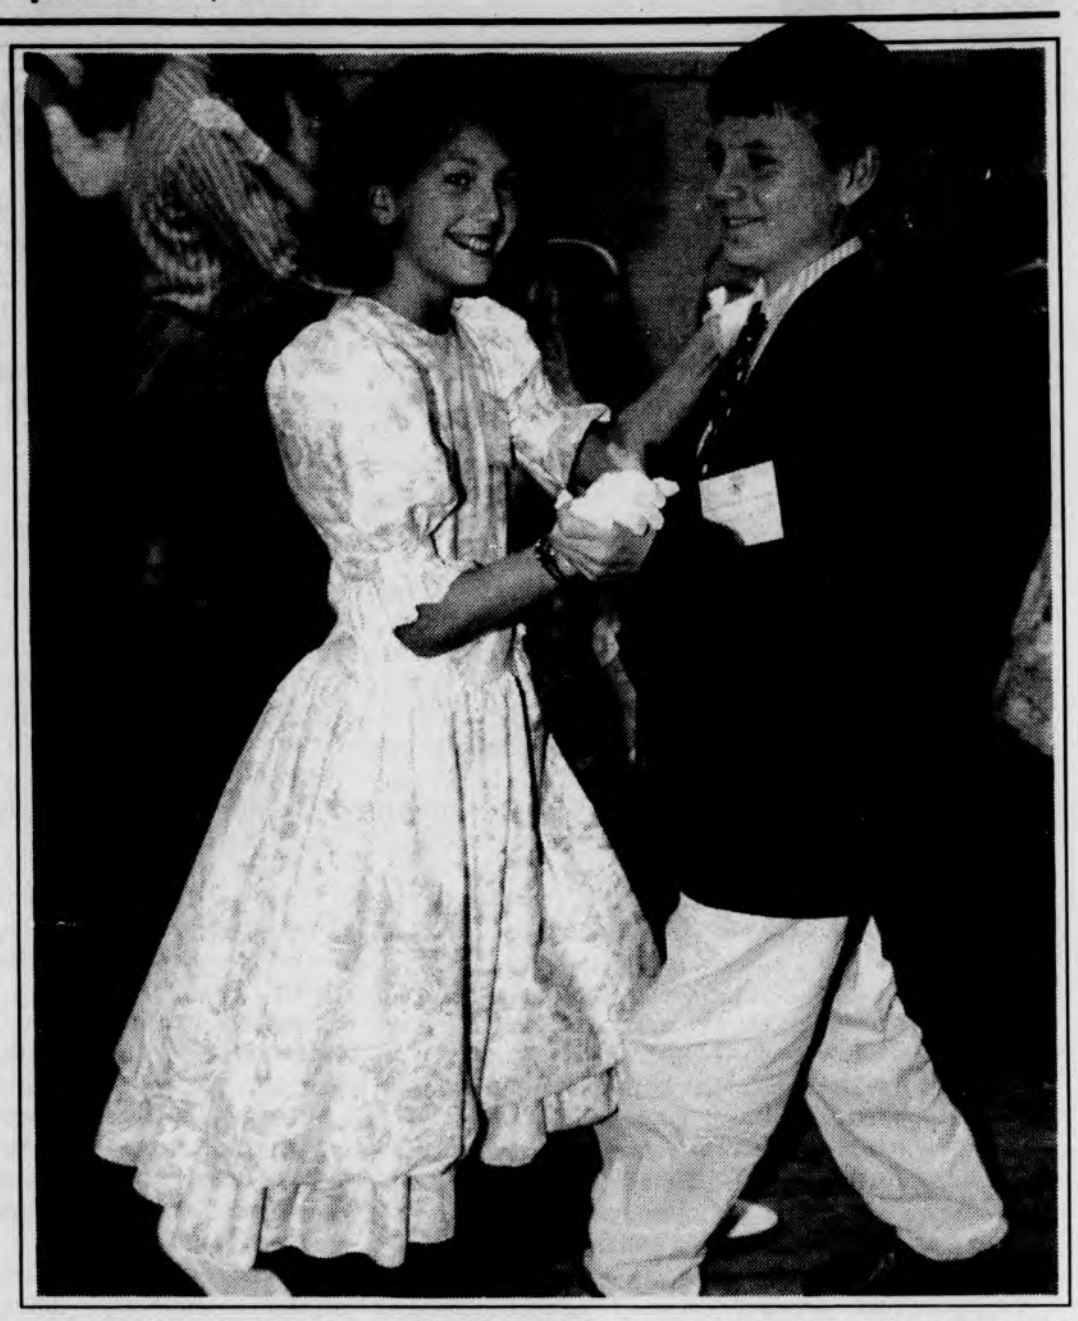
"It has gone a long way in developing self-esteem and confidence," she said.

"It makes them feel comfortable with doing the right thing."

Walsh hopes to enroll her son, John, in the Notts program next year when he is in sixth grade.

"The children really enjoy it and especially when they are going into sixth grade — when children start to feel awkward," she said.

The Junior Cotillion of Greater Boston is located at St. John's Church in Hingham, the Milton Woman's Club in Milton, and now the Cohasset Community Center.

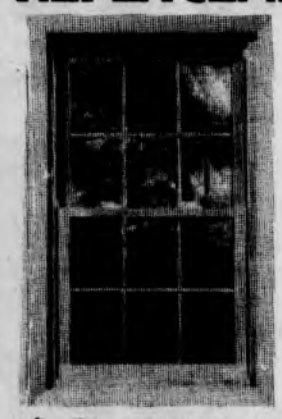


The Tunnicliffes' program includes six classes and two balls over an eight-month period for $195.

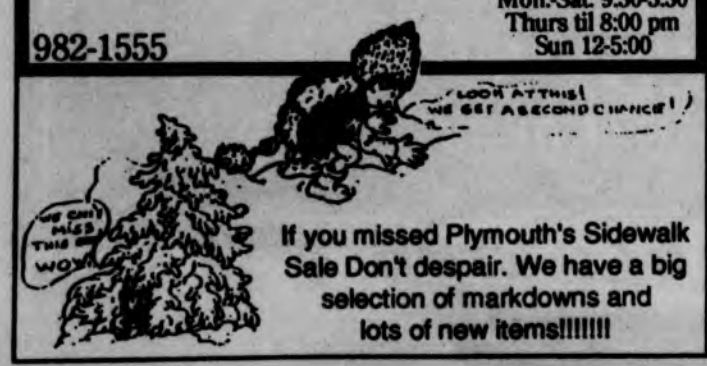
In addition to teaching the children ballroom dancing, the program offers a social behavior component, which ranges from how to make proper introductions to table manners.

"As a society we have been very lax in stressing proper behavior," Amy, who formerly groomed teenagers for beauty pageants, said.

The youngsters learn the proper way to respond to invitations, write thank-yous, greet hostesses and escort their partner off the dance floor.



"We get letters from parents, and grand-parents, saying their children now correct them at the dinner table," she said.



Elizabeth Thernian and Scott MacPherson fox-trot gracefully across the dance floor in the junior cotillion program, which combines dance and social behavior instruction.

Fall art season

The Barn at Bound Brook is holding a group show of eight area artist to begin the fall season. The show opens Sept. 18 and runs through Nov. 13.

A reception to "meet the artists" will be held at the Barn Friday evening Sept. 18 from 6 to 8 p.m. All the artists will be present.

"Goat Lady Series, #6" a watercolor by Jane Bregoli is on display at The Barn at Bound Brook.

Jane Bregoli, known for her "Goat Lady of Dartmouth" series will show her prize winning oils. She resides in Dartmouth, MA.

Eugene Conlon, Braintree, award winning watercolorist will present a number of New England homes from the past.

Paul Crimi, Pembroke, an eclectic artist will display both watercolor and acrylics.

Mary Good, Randolph, will show large portrait charcoal drawings which have received many honors.

George Hartley, Middleboro, a traditionalist painter, is presenting a number of oils.

Victoria Justice, Marshfield, will show pastels on sandpaper. Landscapes and cows in landscapes will be her subjects.

Clemente Micarelli, is also from Marshfield. His portraits in oil and conte, charcoal, white chalk on toned paper can be viewed at the Barn.

Mimi Turner will show large hand carved birds. Her subjects are from the wood and marsh viewed from her studio in Marshfield.

Murray Wentworth, ANA, AWS, of Norwell, is known for his watercolors of New England. His inspiration always returns to nature, changing with each season.

The Barn wishes to extend to the public a warm invitation to enjoy an "evening with the artist" Sept. 18 and view the show at their leisure until Nov. 13.

Science meets art

Winged and creepy crawly things are art? They are in "Science Meets Art," a new course offered by the South Shore Art Center and the South Shore Natural Science Center, Sept. 15 - Nov. 3. Students in grades 1-3 explore the environment as naturalists and artists in this eight-week class, which meets from 4 to 5:30 p.m. and divides time between the Natural Science Center in Norwell and the Art Center in Cohasset.

The class is $60 for SSAC and Science Center members and $75 for non-members.

❑ Bill and Mary O'Brien are having quite a trip for themselves!!

First its California with their daughter, Monica and her family (which includes two grandchildren).

After that it's on to Vegas where they'll meet their daughter, Diane and her husband, Rich.

From there they will go to Colorado to spend a few days with Joan and Paul Lawrence.

The last leg will be off to Central City, Colorado which has gambling, and is an old mining town that has been restored.

Joan reports that there was snow last week in the mountains, here's hoping that Bill and Mary remembered to bring their winter coats!!

❑ When thoughts are returning to "lessons" this week, be sure to know that Priscilla D. Daniels, professional pianist and teacher of pianoforte, resumes her lesson-schedule at her home on Beach Street. She is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music of Boston, magna cum laude. She is also a member and past president of Alpha Chi Omega, national sorority, and Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary professional society. She incorporates all she knows as a part of each lesson, and everyone learns so much, as well as having all like her. Give her a call at 383-1487.

❑ Joe Berkeley must be one happy person and you should know why!! Joe won the 110 Sailboat Nationals, hosted by the Boston Harbor Yacht Club. The Regatta drew 30 entries from Boston, Marblehead, Hull, Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Chicago, Oregon, Michigan and California.

As most know, the South Shore is the 110 capital of the sailing world and Joe and crew, Dave McGrath, sailed "Retread 632" to national victory. In winning the title, Berkeley and McGrath, representing the Hull Yacht Club, succeeded fellow HYC sailors, Tom and Will Craig, the defending National Champs. Joe and Dave edged out the Hingham duo, Russell Robinson and Mike Warner, giving the Hingham sailors a second.

Skipper Joe Berkeley and crew, Dave, sailed consistently all week to nail down the title. Joe's parents are Jay and Mary Kakas of Spinnaker Island.

Next year the 110 Nationals will be back in Michigan, here's hoping there will be back-to-back victories!

❑ Wonder how Matthew Drinkwater, son of Marifrances McIntosh of 96 Doane St. and Gary Drinkwater of Weymouth, is faring during his fall semester this year?

Matthew, a senior at Trinity College in Hartford, Connecticut, is studying at the University of Aberdeen in Aberdeen, Scotland!! What great things he should have to relate upon his return, let us in about all you do, Matthew, and good luck with your studies.

❑ Stuart W. Weier, Jr., the son of Stuart and Shelley Weier of Cohasset, earned honors during the spring semester at Skidmore College, a co-educational liberal arts institution with an enrollment of approximately 2,150 students. Honors are awarded for a grade point ratio of 3.3 to 3.6. Keep up the good work!!

❑ Be sure to visit the Children's Exchange in downtown Cohasset, you'll be glad that you did. They specialize in "gently used" children's wear size newborn-to-14, dance and gymnastic clothing and shoes; cloth diapering products; used baby equipment; cotton hosiery; personalized baby baskets; handmade baby gifts; UNICEF stationery and children's gifts; handmade toys; sweaters and quilts...it's consignment shopping for "fashionable grandchildren and practical grandparents", moms love it too.

The hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and the address is 23 Main Street.

❑ Erin M. Lennon, daughter of John and Joanne Lennon, has been enrolled in William Smith College as a member of the Class of 1996. Hobart College for men and William Smith College for women are sister institutions — individual institutions that share a common campus, faculty, and residence quarters and is located in Geneva, New York.

❑ As this goes to press, super-senior Joe Horak will have just completed playing in the USTA's National Men's 85 Grass Court Championships at the Longwood Cricket Club in Chestnut Hill, Mass. Horak has played before in this event for players over the age of 85. The draw this year was the largest ever for this event. Twenty-eight 85s from 16 states played competitive tennis and enjoyed a full week of socializing with old friends.

Let's hope that super-senior Horak will let us know how he did in what sounds like a great week!

❑ Hats off to Girl Scout Cadette Troop #4300 for their participation in the "Children to Children" project.

They will pack cookie cartons full of urgently needed supplies to help mend the body and heal the hearts of children. They are looking for supplies, mostly vital everyday needs, such as toothbrushes, aspirin, Band-aids, Kleenex, toys, comb and brushes, etc. If you would like to donate or help in any way, call Georgine Butman at 383-2528.

❑ Finally, a little news from our family...our beloved Kelsie turned three last week, and to celebrate the occasion we all spent the week in Harwich. It was beautiful and relaxing and fun and warm, and sandy and...could go on and on!! Anyway, that's why you couldn't get me with your news!!

Thanks, Mr. Weeks

In a small town news travels fast.

William D. Weeks' resignation from his post as town moderator was announced as a scoop on the local TV talk show "Pierson to Person" last Thursday.

And it was followed Friday with a story in the local daily paper.

This week, the Cohasset Mariner is printing Mr. Weeks' letter of resignation in which he explains his decision.

Not everyone is pleased with Mr. Weeks' decision to step down before next April when the annual town election is held.

But Mr. Weeks' reasons seem straight forward enough to us.

And he certainly has the right to resign from an elected position anytime he wants.

In fact, we think it's refreshing that an official chooses to go on a positive footing when he or she feels that the time has come.

Wouldn't it be nice if some of our elected officials at the state and national level, would be so wise?

Mr. Weeks has served the town well. And he certainly knows when it's time to step aside.

But we'll miss his style.

Mr. Weeks is fair, even-handed, courteous, and treats people with respect — super qualifications for a town moderator in anyone's book.

We can look forward to seeing him on the sidelines at town meeting because he's promised not to fade away.

So now the time has come to simply say — Thanks, Mr. Weeks for serving us well.

Go Skippers!

That fall nip in the air keeps coming and going.

It may be 80 degrees this weekend or 40 — but don't let that deter you from getting out to root for the Skippers!

The Cohasset High School Skippers football team's opener is Saturday against West Bridgewater at 1 p.m. at home.

What a great opportunity to lend your support to a hard-working group of young people from both communities.

You might want to take advantage of the chance to watch athletes who play for the love of the game, rather than for multi-million dollar contracts and beer and aftershave endorsements.

For those soccer, field hockey, and cross country enthusiasts — we plan to have lots of photos and sports coverage this fall on all high school and youth sports.

So stay tuned to the Mariner and Go Clippers!

Mousse anyone?

We hope Cohasset folk don't mind if we went one town over this week to get someone for "Picture This," our weekly feature highlighting a person of the week.

Governor Weld was stumping for state Senator Robert Hedlund in Hingham and we just couldn't pass up the chance to ask him to participate.

We cornered the governor at the dessert table where he was sampling the mousse at a retirement party for a Hingham official.

A good sport, Mr. Weld opted to answer the questions off the cuff.

We hope you find the weekly feature as much fun as we do.

William D. Weeks resigned last week after serving nearly 12 years as town moderator for Cohasset. The former state senator for the Plymouth/Norfolk district cited business and personal reasons for his decision.

Weeks steps down as moderator

(Editor's note: the following letter was sent to the board of selectmen with attention to chairman Jane Goedecke).

Dear Jane:

As I have discussed with you previously, I am tendering my resignation as Town Moderator to the board of selectmen herewith, to be effective immediately.

After much thought, I am taking this step for personal and business reasons. I have been the Town Moderator for nearly 12 years and feel the time has come for me to turn the job over to a younger person.

In reaching this decision, I debated whether to let my current three-year term run out next April and not run for re-election at that time, or to resign not and let the board of selectmen fill the vacancy for the balance of my term. I opted in favor of the latter approach, believing that it would be preferable, all things considered, for me to step aside now.

It has been a great pleasure and privilege for me to have served the town as moderator since 1981. I strongly believe in the Town Meeting form of government and have always endeavored to preside over the meetings firmly and fairly while at the same time permitting all points of view to be expressed.

I have also enjoyed participating as a member of the so-called "Troika" in the appointment of town residents to various boards and committees. One of our greatest strengths as a community lies in our volunteers, and I am proud of the many dedicated individuals we have persuaded to serve our town in this way.

In selecting a person to fill the vacancy caused by my resignation, I hope your board will choose as moderator someone who has been active in town affairs, who will have the respect of the community, and who — because of his or her abilities and temperament — will stand a good chance of serving in the post for a considerable period of time.

Finally, through you I want to thank the board and all those with whom I have served in town government for their cooperation, encouragement and support.

Seven foot wall sets a precedent

To the Editor:

Have you noticed the yellow ribbons at the corner of Jerusalem Road and Black Rock Road? No, we aren't welcoming the boys home from the war! This is the skeleton for the proposed, mounded septic system for 15 Black Rock Road.

The developers, Jerusalem Road Limited Partnership, are seeking a variance from the Zoning Board of Appeals for these septic system walls because the height exceeds the town restriction of five feet. The finished wall which will run approximately 50 feet parallel with Jerusalem Road varies from six-to-seven feet in height from existing grade.

At last week's Zoning Board of Appeals hearing, the developers stated their plans to backfill against the wall so "only" 3 1/2 to 4 feet would be exposed on the street side. Their theory is that this would "visually" bring the wall under the five foot height requirement. Does this mean that the wall is magically shorter? Isn't the top of the wall still seven feet in the air? Their theory sounds like smoke and mirrors. The Zoning Board of Appeals then actually questioned whether the height should be measured from existing ground level or finished ground level. If the Zoning Board of Appeals doesn't know the answer to this question, on what basis have they made decisions for variances on height restrictions in the past?

These walls should not be considered perimeter walls. This will be a solid structure. When this septic system has been completed, the interior section of the walls that contain the sewage disposal system will be backfilled around and over the system to within approximately one foot from the top. Shouldn't this project fall under structures rather than perimeter walls and, therefore, be subject to set-back requirements as well as height? As submitted, this plan does not meet set-back requirements on either Jerusalem Road or Black Rock Road.

It is the responsibility of the Zoning Board of Appeals to grant a variance only when there is no other viable alternative. In October of 1989, the trustees of the Curtis Estate submitted a viable septic system plan for 15 Black Rock Road that was approved by the Board of Health. This system was below ground and a more natural use of the property. When drawing up the current lot lines, Jerusalem Road Limited Partnership chose not to include the location of the previously approved system within the boundaries of the parcel for 15 Black Rock Road. Jerusalem Road Limited Partnership claims they would suffer "manifest injustice" if this variance is not granted. (There have been 27 variances already approved on this property.) They claim this property would be unsalable without this variance. They own 52 acres in total, and were solely responsible for the configuration of all lot lines, and, therefore, have created their own "manifest injustice." Adoption of the septic system plan of 1989 would resolve this matter.

Approval of this septic system with its seven foot walls would set a precedent for the future direction of development in Cohasset. The aesthetic values as well as property values will suffer. As residents of one of the most beautiful and picturesque towns on the South Shore, we should all be concerned about this issue.

If you would like to voice your opinion on this matter, please send a letter to the Zoning Board of Appeals as quickly as possible. The next Zoning Board of Appeals meeting on this issue is scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 17 at 8 p.m. Time is of the essence!

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS

	Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) 722-1646 Room 416B	Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) 722-2800 ext.7957 Room 134
THE HOUSE AND SENATE — As the school season begins, Governor Weld and the legislature have yet to hammer out a comprehensive reform package overhauling the state's education system from kindergarten through grade 12. During this year's budget consideration, there was heated debate over the $184 million in new education aid. Governor Weld and his legislative supporters wanted to withhold the new aid until a reform package was approved. The Democratic leadership and most of the legislature approved the funding without the reform requirement. Weld later vetoed the funding but the House and Senate overwhelmingly overrode the vetoes. This week, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on five previously unrecorded roll calls on the education package. The package provides $84 million in new aid in the form of $100 per pupil. It also provides $100 million in increased Equal Educational Opportunity Grants (EEOG) to provide increased spending in communities where spending has been less than 85 percent of the state average. There were no roll calls in the House and Senate last week. Formal sessions and roll call votes are expected to resume shortly after the September primary.
$218 PER PUPIL (H 5700) — House 122-27, rejected an amendment distributing the entire $184 million in new education aid equally to all communities at the rate of $218 per student. Amendment supporters said this distribution is the fairest and noted otherwise 100 percent of the EEOG money will go to only 25 communities under a very unfair formula which helps larger cities like Boston which have not done their fair share locally. Opponents said the amendment is divisive and parochial and argued legislators have a responsibility to children in poorer communities despite what is happening in individual legislators' communities. (A "Yea" vote is for the $218 per pupil. A "Nay" vote is against it).		Y
REFORMS (H 5700) — House 141-8, rejected an amendment providing the $84 million at the rate of $100 per pupil but withholding $100 million in EEOG money until an education reform bill is passed. Amendment supporters said this will ensure immediate relief for communities but forces reform by withholding the $100 million. Opponents said communities need all the money and argued students should not be held hostage because the governor and legislature cannot agree on reform. (A "Yea" vote is for withholding the $100 million. A "Nay" vote is against withholding the $100 million).		N
MAINTENANCE LEVEL (H 5700) — House 107-43, rejected an amendment requiring communities spend as much on education this year as they did last year in order to qualify for the $100 per pupil aid. Amendment supporters said this will ensure communities do not make major cuts in education and that they use the extra aid to increase education spending, rather just shifting money formerly spent on education to other uses. Opponents said the amendment is unfair to communities which have been hit by the recession and decreased local aid and may have to make across the board cuts. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it).		N
MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES (H 5700) — House 87-61, reconsidered its earlier approval of an amendment requiring the $100 per pupil funds be used solely for instructional materials and supplies for individual students and the hiring of additional teachers to reduce class sizes. Amendment supporters said this will ensure the money goes only for direct benefits to students and not for administrative and other purposes. Opponents said this decision should be left up to local communities. (A "Yea" vote is for reconsidering approval of the amendment. A "Nay" vote is for the amendment).		Y
REDUCTIONS (H 5700) — House 141-8, approved an amendment prohibiting communities from cutting education spending by more than the percentage of a community's budget that the education account comprises. The amendment also requires that any communities which do not have to reduce overall spending must increase this year's school spending by at least the amount provided by the $100 per pupil funding. Amendment supporters said this will limit the amount of education cuts which can be made. Opponents said this imposes additional unnecessary conditions on local communities' use of the money. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it).		N

PSO plans gift wrap sale to support school programs

(Editor's note: The following letter was sent to parents from the PSO.)

Dear Parents,

As the new school year begins, the Cohasset PSO once again looks forward to bringing our children many exciting and enriching programs. To help us accomplish this, we are delighted to have found a terrific fund raiser that has been used with great success at schools in many neighboring towns.

The Cohasset PSO Gift Wrap Sale will make available beautiful top quality, competitively priced gift wrap. We will be selling these products in September and will keep 50% of the money earned for our schools. If each Cohasset school family purchases just two rolls of gift wrap through this program, we could raise over $4,000.

letters

In past years, this money has supported programs at each of the schools including:

- trips to the symphony
- math and science enrichment materials
- video and laser discs
- arts enrichment
- geography software
- storytellers and puppet shows
- dictionaries for young readers

Next week, your child will bring home all of the information, including an order form and samples of wrapping paper. Purchase gift wrapping needs for your family, and if you would like, extend the offer to friends, relatives, neighbors and co-workers. Children should not be asked to sell the wrap. Orders are due back by the deadline noted below, and the gift wrap will be delivered to school before Thanksgiving vacation to distribute.

Thanks for taking the time to look this over during the busy first week of school! If you have any questions, or would like to help, please contact Ellen Sanchez at 383-6911.

Constructive energy supply action needed

To the Editor:

Americans seem to have lost faith in themselves and are prey to all sorts of negative propaganda.

For example, almost every discussion of nuclear energy devolves into a helpless: "Oh, but there's no way to get rid of the waste!"

"That's nonsense, and no excuse to continue polluting needlessly with fossil fuels, while dreaming that conservation and some breakthrough in solar energy will negate need for constructive energy supply action.

Nuclear waste disposal is primarily a political problem, and will remain so as long as opportunistic or irresponsible politicians exploit public misconceptions that continue to be fueled by the propaganda of the anti-nuke cabal and disseminated by careless journalists.

It's not much of a technical problem, and it's far down on the list of real problems facing the nation, e.g. assuring long term electricity supply to retain national economic security and support future employment, reducing acid rain, disposing of vast quantities and infinite varieties of chemical waste, reducing health care cost while expanding coverage, preventing ambitious dictators from coming into control of Mideast oil revenues and all the trouble that could buy for the rest of the world, and on and on.

Some of these real problems could be assuaged, in part, by further exploitation of nuclear energy. Strong leadership is essential also, to make us face up to the real problems and to defuse the destructive propaganda which weakens our will to use the solutions at hand.

Every step of nuclear waste disposal has been studied and tested ad nauseam; what really is needed is pragmatic use of what has long been known. In other words, stop snivelling about imagined or exaggerated hazards, and just do something constructive. Only trace elements remain radioactive for long periods; the radioactivity of high level waste decays rapidly at first and then more slowly, but after about 400 years is no more radioactive than a pound of naturally occurring ore. We can certainly deal with that, and much more readily than some of our other problems.

Recycling effort is going well

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Recycling Committee wishes to thank townspeople for cooperating in the mandatory recycling effort at the Transfer Station.

Each of us knows if he or she is recycling all we could or should. Let's all do the best we can —it's for our own good.

We have been told by the company which takes our magazines that they do not want plastic or brown paper bags included with the magazines. Also, no telephone books. They are not magazines and go in the general trash. Unless this is corrected, we will have to spend more to have them picked up.

Everyone could help lots by washing and squashing the plastic milk and spring water containers. Rinse out the milk containers with cold water and squash (with your heel) to reduce the volume.

Keep up the good work!

World War II Memorial work begins

Austin L. Ahearn Jr., president of Cohasset Historical Military Memorial has announced that work will begin on the World War II memorial Saturday, Sept. 19. The first job is to haul stones from an old wall on school department property off Pleasant Lane to the construction site. Permission to remove the stones and use them in the memorial construction was granted by the school committee a year ago.

Volunteers are needed to help with the project.

"We can use all the able bodied people we can get, man or woman, old or young" Ahearn said. "We will be at the site all day, and will welcome anyone who wants to help."

The work area is approached through Pleasant Lane which runs off Pleasant Street.

A town truck has been loaned to haul the stones, and a front end loader has been loaned by Paul Barry.

The memorial project has been in the planning stage since early last year and contemplates the eventual construction of memorials to the men and women who participated in all of the Nation's major conflicts from the Revolution to the Persian Gulf War.

No public funds will be used in the project.

Sufficient funds have been solicited from private individuals and organizations to carry through the early stages.

Additional money will be required as the project progresses and donations may be sent to Cohasset Historical Military Memorial, Inc., P. O. Box 701, Cohasset 02025.

Nellie Mae (The New England Education Loan Marketing Corp.) today announced the purchase of over $200,000 in student loans from Cohasset Savings Bank. The purchase replenishes the bank's supply of education credit, giving South Shore students and parents greater access to education loan funds for the fall/spring semester.

"Nellie Mae's partnership with Cohasset Savings Bank is a win/win for everybody; for the students and parents of the South Shore, for the bank and for Nellie Mae," said Lawrence O'Toole, president of Nellie Mae.

"We are pleased to help Cohasset Savings Bank continue to offer the community higher education loans to help with the cost of today's college or university tuition."

"Nellie Mae's record of quality customer service remains the determining factor in our decision to enter into loan sales agreements each year," said Margaret Santacroce, vice president of Cohasset Savings Bank. "Since 1986, Nellie Mae has purchased over $2 million in student loans from the bank."

Headquartered in Braintree, Nellie Mae is the largest non-profit student loan holder in the country, and has provided funding for over 500,000 student and parent loans in both federally and privately sponsored education loan programs. Since 1990, Nellie Mae has also made grants of over $1 million to education and early awareness/early intervention programs in New England through the Nellie Mae Fund For Education.

McDonald, Daly win in exciting contests

Brockton and rode to victory in the Democratic congressional primary on the strength of an overwhelming vote from the Cape and the Islands.

A total of 1,831 votes were cast in Cohasset — or 35 percent of the registered voters — a moderate turnout for a primary, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said.

Chartis Langmaid who finished second behind McDonald for the Democratic nomination for the Plymouth/Norfolk state senate seat captured Cohasset with 984 votes or 80 percent of those cast.

But McDonald won in his home turf of Weymouth despite a last minute sticker campaign for Hedlund organized by some town Democrats; a letter of support for White by former Rep. Robert Ambler; and the endorsement of the Boston Globe for Langmaid.

In his victory speech, McDonald promised his supporters "seven weeks from hell but we can take this thing in November."

"We have to turn the economy around and put people to work. The Republicans are not doing it. If we don't start believing in each other again, we will be short changing the future of the country."

McDonald also captured the vote of Hull, 599 to 424 for Langmaid and 359 for White and he stood up well in Scituate, losing to Langmaid by a scant 3345 votes.

The vote from Hingham was delayed until the early hours of Wednesday morning when it was discovered that the voting machines wouldn't read the ink from the pens used. So all ballots had to be counted by hand.

In Marshfield, some 400 write-in votes, apparently part of the Hedlund sticker campaign, fouled up the voting machines so badly that workers went home and promised to come back early Wednesday morning.

Harold, who thought he was going to run for an open seat until redistricting put him in the 10th Congressional District with the 20-year veteran Studds, needed to win Quincy, Weymouth and Brockton, the new towns in the district, by large margins in order to win.

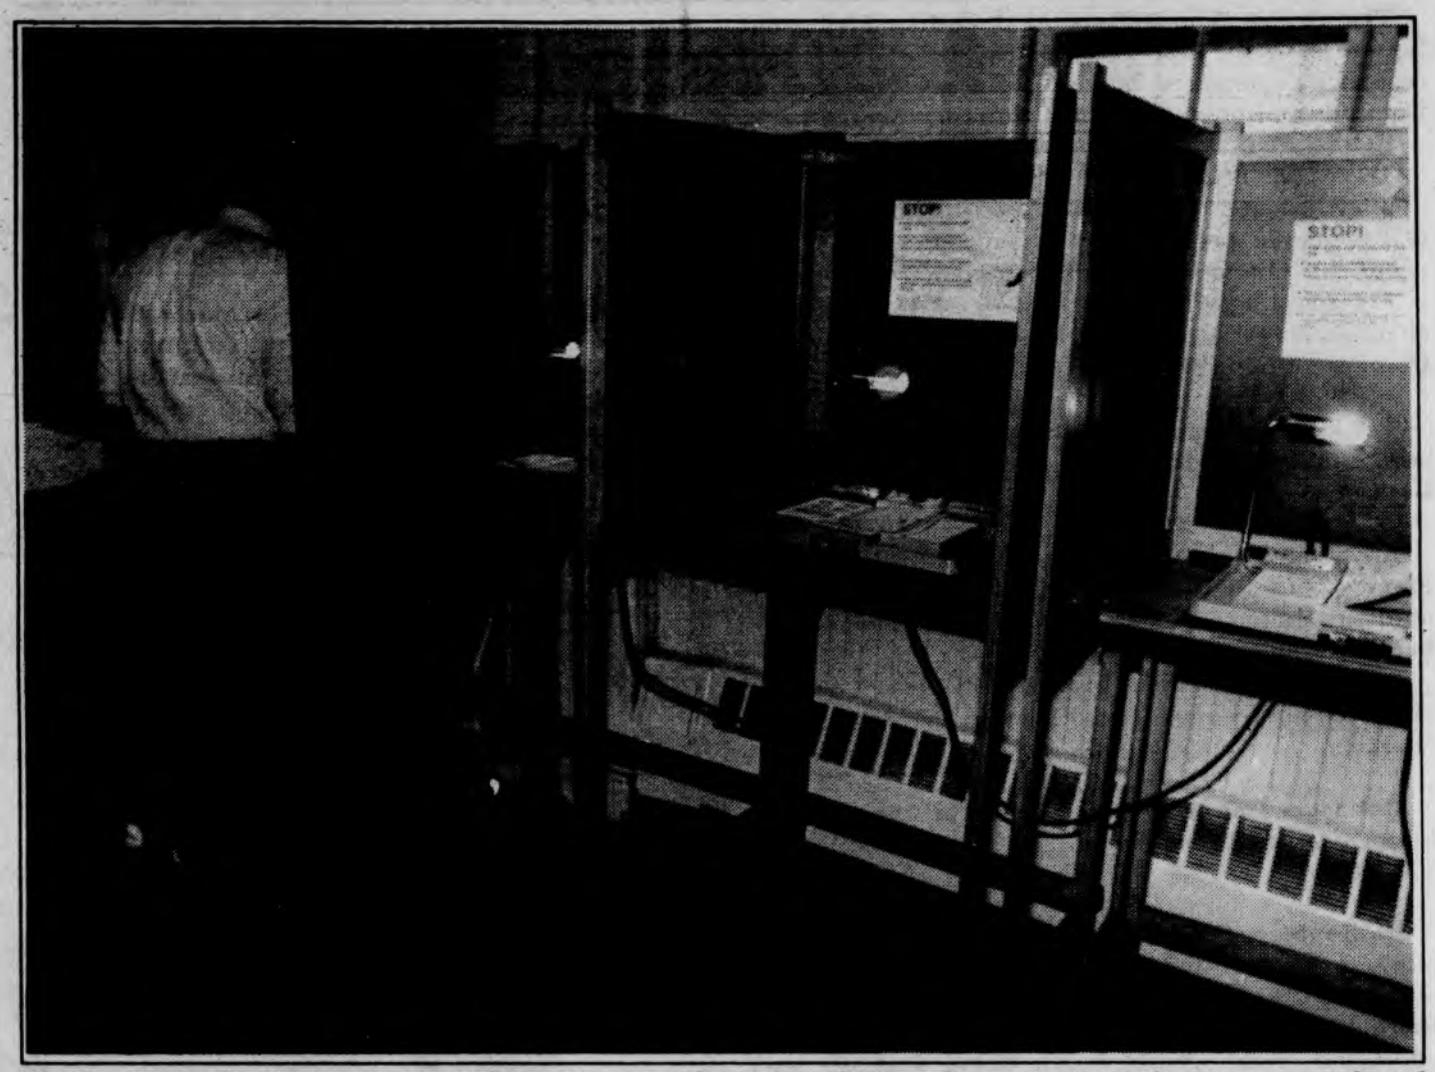
He won Quincy with about 69% of the vote, barely squeezed by in Weymouth, 5,354 to 4,937, and gained little better than an even split in the Brockton precincts, 1,878 to 1,859.

But the South Shore, the Cape and especially the island towns on Martha's Vineyard creamed him.

Studds won his home town of Cohasset by 859 to 313, Norwell by 248 to 166, Scituate by 1,795 to 1,014.

On the Vineyard, the Studds margin was 651 to 24 in Oak Bluffs and 251 to 2 in Chilmark.

Studds, who lost his bellwether city of New Bedford in the redistricting, called Weymouth, Quincy and his half of Brockton "the bedrock, the new heart and soul of our district."



"To the people of the Cape and the South Shore who we have represented for two decades, a very, very heartfelt thank you," he said. "And to our new friends, we welcome you."

Studds will face the Republican nominee, Daniel Daly of Hingham and unenrolled candidate Jon Bryan in the Nov. 3 election.

In a see-saw race, Daly ended up with 48 percent of the vote to 40 percent for Republican challenger Michael Crossen and 12 percent for Robert King. Also in the race will be Michael Umina of Mashpee, the Independent Voters Party candidate.

Daly, who was endorsed by Governor Weld, ran strongly in the northern part of the district and Crossen piled votes in the Cape and Islands.

Daly won Cohasset with 69 percent of the votes cast to 23 percent for Crossen and sic percent for King.

The low-to-moderate turnout in Cohasset — as well as other cities and towns across the state — produced many scenes like this one at Cohasset Town Hall Tuesday. (Staff photo/Buzz Wadsworth)

For further information, please call the office at 383-0345 or Kim Maynard, C.E. director at 383-2707.

Seventh-to-12th grade parents' meeting is at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 27 at the church to discuss formation of two youth groups. If you have any questions, please call the office at 383-0345 or Ami Argus, youth director at 383-9325.

The Upward Bound Adult Sunday School, which discusses faith and politics is at 8:15 a.m., Sundays, Sept. 20 - Nov. 1.

Christian education for children takes place at 10 a.m., Sunday, Sept. 20, at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave.

The first Sunday of classes features St. Stephen's lollipops for each child.

There are classes for preschool and kindergarten, first grade, second grade, third grade, and intermediate (grades four through six).

For more information, please call the church office at 383-1083.

CHRISTIAN COURSE OFFERED

Faith as a resource for contemporary living is the subject of a course, "And Walk in Your Ways" given at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave.

To find out more about the class, please come to an exploratory meeting at 11:40 a.m., Sunday, Sept. 20.

SPIRITUALITY IN WRITING

The Rev. John Snow leads an afternoon session on "The Spirituality of Creative Writing," from 3 to 4:30 p.m., Sept. 20 at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave.

Snow helps participants explore how one's ability to write can be an expression of prayer and spirituality. The event does not require any prior creative writing skills.

Snow is an Episcopal priest and retired professor of pastoral theology at Episcopal Divinity School in Cambridge. He is author of The Impossible Vocation: Ministry in the Mean Time; A Vocation to Risk: Notes on Ministry in a Profane World; Mortal Fear: Meditations on Death and AIDS; and The Gospel in a Broken World.

HUNGER FOR HEALING

A class on 12-step spirituality entitled, "A Hunger for Healing," is offered at 10:30 a.m., Sept. 16 at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave.

The class meets weekly through the fall.

Using video presentations by Keith Miller, an author and therapist, the course shows how the "12 steps" developed by Alcoholics Anonymous provide a classic model for Christian spiritual growth.

Keith Miller relates how these steps are based on spiritual principles for healing, such as confession, repentance, and prayer — which have existed in the church for centuries.

For more information, please call St. Stephen's at 383-1083.

'Ohio' is Good Morning! in Japanese

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Hideo Mikami traveled half a world over and had the time of his life making fourth graders giggle at his Groucho glasses in a Scituate elementary school.

And he impressed students at Cohasset Junior/ Senior High by having teacher William Kite model a kimono – the traditional dress that Japanese teachers wear in the summer.

Mikami's presentation included a lesson in Japanese. Many common Japanese words and phrases sound like English.

"Good morning" in Japanese is nearly indistinguishable from the name of the Midwest state, "Ohio," while "Excuse me" sounds like ashtray.

Mikami came to Scituate and Cohasset as part of an international teacher exchange program sponsored by the Cultural Homestay Institute. This year 24 Japanese teachers from all over Japan came to the United States.

The teachers spent five weeks studying English in California before heading for host homes and schools around the South Shore. Unfortunately, a late Labor Day interfered with their hopes for an intensive, if brief exposure to American-style education.

Mikami stayed with Richard, Wendy and Kai Hoffman of Fifth Avenue in Scituate. The Hoffmans arranged for Mikami to visit high schools, junior high schools and elementary schools in Scituate, Marshfield and Cohasset. He sat in on French classes, music lessons, computer labs, orientation sessions and shared his culture.

At home, Mikami works for the city board of education in Omi Hachiman. This was his fourth trip to the United States — three were for educational exchanges with Omi Hachiman's sister city in Michigan and one was a honeymoon visit.

Mikami spoke favorably of his impressions of South Shore schools. He found the children extremely well-behaved, attentive and interested. He also said he found the curriculum at all levels extremely well-organized at all levels.

But American education and Japanese education are also very different.

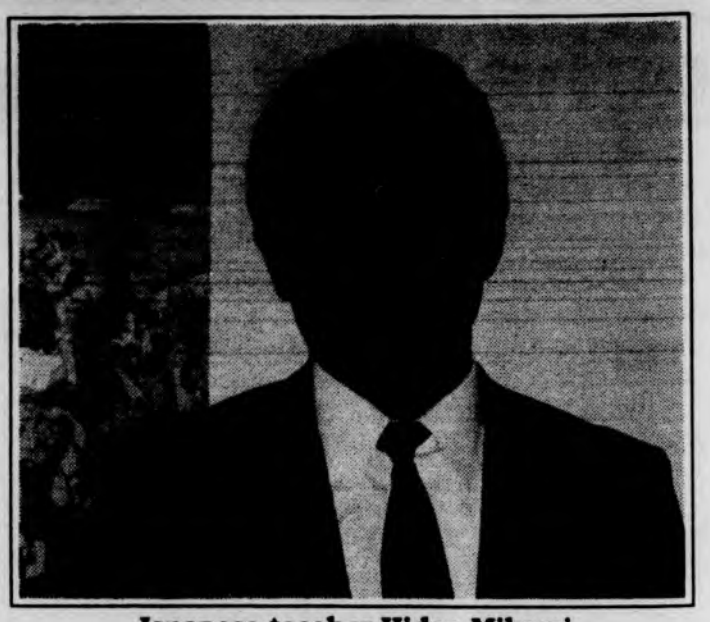
In Japan, he said, the curriculum is set by the national Ministry of Education. The Ministry also prescribes the textbooks that school systems may choose. Generally, they are given several choices, but they may not select a book not on the official list.

Mikami believes the system works well in Japan. All students have the same preparation whether they come from a rural area or a large city, whether they come from the northern regions or the southern.

The school year is also much longer in Japan. Students used to attend for 240 days a year. This year the Ministry of Education is experimenting with a school calendar that gives students one Saturday a month off.

Students go to school six days a week, although Saturdays sessions are only a half day. The other days begin at 8:30 a.m. and end at 3:30 or 4 p.m. After that, students spend their time in extra-curricular activities until 6 or 6:30 p.m.

The schools teach nine subjects and morals. English instruction is introduced in the seventh grade. Many students take private English lessons in the fifth and sixth grade to give themselves an edge.



Students may attend "juku" or cram schools where they are given intensive preparation in math, Japanese, English, social studies and science. Mikami estimated at least half the students do so. Juku schools also offer art, music, calligraphy, physical education and other enrichment classes.

Mikami said students attend the cram schools to prepare them for the entrance examinations they must take for enter high school.

Education is only compulsory in Japan through the ninth grade. Although few students actually drop out, the examination determines what high school they may attend.

The college preparatory program is known as the general course. It is reserved for the best and the brightest students. Other students may opt for a commercial or business education high school, an industrial or trade high school or the agricultural schools.

Very few students enter the agricultural school, Mikami said. He joked that in Japan it is easier and more popular to import food than to grow or raise it.

Japanese teacher Hideo Mikami

Although elementary and junior high schools are free, parents must pay tuition for kindergarten and high school. The tuition is very low, averaging between $40 and $50 per month.

Mikami was taken by the fact that all the principals he met said the budget is the biggest problem they face. In Japan, education is fully funded by the national government and funded very well.

In spite of that, class sizes in Japanese schools can be as large as 40 or 45 students.

The students are encouraged to think of their classmates as an extended family and their classroom as their home away from home. Unlike the United States where students move from room to room for different subjects, the students remain in their room and the teachers come to them.

Students are responsible for cleaning the classroom, they eat lunch in the classroom and the classrooms may compete against each other in athletics and academics.

Mikami heartily endorses teacher and student exchanges. He wishes more Americans would come to Japan to see what the two cultures can share and what they can learn from each other.

Cohasset teacher Jo-Ann Wood said Mikami was as impressed with Cohasset students as they were with him.

Cohasset schools take action on goals

Cohasset Schools plan to include as many community facets as possible in developing a comprehensive educational plan.

In terms of enhancing community involvement in the schools, Supt. Stephen Hart's discussion of his "Action Plan for the School District's Goals" at Monday's school board meeting included items ranging from the implementation of a new teacher evaluation system to improving school facilities such as heating and handicap accessibility.

The plan also focuses on ideas of coordinating a comprehensive science curriculum for grades K-12 with assistance from community leaders who are experienced in the various fields of science.

While noting the importance of community involvement and awareness the school committee also talked about expanding community activities within school grounds.

When talking of student development, the committee not only discussed such topics as an enhanced math lab and better ways to use diagnostic testing but also focused on how community organizations could get involved. The Chamber of Commerce Forum, which assisted students in career paths, was mentioned as an example.

Furthermore, the committee agreed that the regionalization of schools should be investigated because it would provide students with the opportunity to attend local schools that have specific academic tracks which the Cohasset system may not offer.

Another important highlight of the meeting was the school budget and its effects on the entire system.

The combination of a 3% increase in funding from the town and the August approved new state educational aid of $112,008 will mean, according to Supt. Hart, "that we are able to maintain the size of the staff, able to move to a higher level in technology through the acquisition of science supplies such as microscopes and computers for the math lab, able to add more classroom time for the [newly appointed] Spanish teacher, and now able to implement the new teacher evaluation system" among other projects.

The committee is also investigating alternative types of financial resources such as private, corporate, and cooperative funding (i.e. regionalization) as well.

Through its emphasis of combining book knowledge with the knowledge of experience tapped from the community (both locally and internationally) the committee hopes to fulfill its most important goal in its plan: enriching the curriculum and educational experience for all its 1,140 students.

IN OTHER BUSINESS

• The approval and appointment of new staff members: Melissa Barry as part-time foreign language teacher for the Junior/Senior High School; Nancy Hodges as the secretary for the principal's office at the Junior/Senior High School, Jeffrey R. Martell as the junior varsity soccer coach, and (4) Elizabeth Leonard as a computer aide.

• And unanimous approval for the free and reduced lunch program.

Japanese teacher gives schools an A+

By Chris Kukk
Mariner Correspondent

Although many Americans believe we should look to such countries as Japan for an educational model, one Japanese teacher, Hideo Mikami, has the opposite view.

According to school officials Mikami — who recently spend a day at the junior/senior high school — was so impressed with the Cohasset school system that he said Japan could learn a lesson or two from the U.S.A.

What really astounded Mikami was how well behaved Cohasset kids are and the classroom discipline, noted Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher.

Mikami also said that due to his experience in Cohasset his misperceptions of American students have been unequivocally corrected.

He took special interest in the fact that the classrooms all have flags and that the students recite the Pledge of Allegiance on a daily basis. Japanese students do not undertake such activities, he said.

Mikami would like to return to Cohasset and spend an entire semester in order to learn more about a quality American education, school officials noted.

"It says something about Cohasset," said School Committee Chairman Barbara Bliss.

Donations are wanted

The Cohasset Historical Society asks for donations of fine quality bric-a-brac, household wares, small furniture, equipment and other saleable items in good condition for its table at the Saturday, Sept. 26 Community Center Tag Sale at Cohasset Common.

Donated items may be dropped off at the Society's headquarters, the Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer St.

The Historical Society's telephone is (617) 383-6930.

In addition to its "Saleable" table at the Tag Sale, the society will feature items from the museum shop, relating to the town's own history. Two historical society T-shirts are featured; one marking the establishing of America's first volunteer lifeboat in 1807 at Cohasset's Whitehead Point; the other showing a replica of an 1842 Cohasset Temperance Banner. Also featured are several volumes of the town's history, Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset, vol. 1 by Rev. E.V. Bigelow and vol. 2 by Burtram J. Pratt; and the biographical book Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains, by E.P. Collier.

Historical Society canvas tote bags, coffee mugs, the Cohasset Coloring Book by Barbara Conte and Pairpoint glass Minot's Light cup plates are also available.

Girls' soccer and field hockey hope for strong start

The 1992 girls' sports season has started off with a bang.

Both soccer and field hockey teams are looking forward to strong seasons from their returning players and some real in-depth help from a host of new, young talent.

The girls' soccer team has been both cursed and blessed at the start of this season. They were cursed with the loss of their entire middle to graduation, plus the re-injury last year to All-Star mid-fielder Allison Ludlow.

They were blessed by the addition of eight new talented and highly motivated young players: Jessica Pyform, Emily Henderson, Tammy Maitland, Vicky Maynard, Megan Rhodes, Jessica Keefe, Bonnie Kreuger, and Cheryl Saif, the return of all 12 remaining veterans, Kathleen O'Brien, Allison Ludlow, Jenn Knowles, Jen Anstead, Colleen Fitzsimmons, Lisa Schram, Jessica McDonald, Erin Murphy, Tracy Connor, Katie Carroll, Corinna McMacken and Sara Atherton, and the versatility of the team as a whole.

After three pre-season wins (over Keene, NH., Hingham, and King Phillip), coach Kennan Starzell was quietly optimistic. He has been moving players around to see which combinations gel, and he intends to continue this approach during the early stages of the season.

He has moved Allison Ludlow to goal and says, "She could easily be the best goalie in the league. And having Jess McDonald as back up goalie is a real plus for us. She's played really well in the pre-season."

He feels that he has a real good mix of players this year, and has already seen scoring from Kathleen O'Brien, Tracy Connor, Jess McDonald, Kate Carroll and a Hat-Trick against Hingham by Erin Murphy.

Coming off their best season ever, this Cohasset team is versatile, aggressive, and talented; and although the loss of Ludlow in the middle has left a void in leadership on the field, Kennan feels that it might be for the best in the long run. As more players begin to take up the slack, the greater the team effort and spirit become on the field. This should be an exciting year for all involved.

Field Hockey Coach Deb Bostwick faced the beginning of the season with the unexpected loss of both veteran goalies, and the loss to graduation of most of her defensive starters. But she had a great core returning. Three of her four captains, league-scoring champ Danielle Shaughnessy, sweeper Karyn Murray, and center halfback Bridgette Corkery came back raring to go; and her fourth captain, speedster Kate Murray, lost to spring track due to a broken leg, came back stronger than ever.

The rest of her returning veterans, Cilla Goff, Liz Deveney, Lauren Almeida, Julie Good, Christine McMacken, Katie O'Connor, Katie Ridge, Kate Norris, Meghan Staunton, are as good, if not better, than any returning team in the league. Add to that the talent of newcomers Jemilah Afshar, Cloe Chittick, Nikki Peterson and Gina Rosano, and you have a team that is going places.

In fact, Coach Bostwick feels that there are only three teams in the league that should be in line to beat or tie them, if her girls stay healthy and motivated.

"My captains are terrific motivators and role models," Bostwick said, "and I don't have any egos that need to be stroked. These kids really play as a team, and help

Little League tryouts

Tryouts for the 1993 Major League Division of the Cohasset Little League are Sunday, Oct. 4, from 1 to 4 p.m. All youngsters whose tenth birthday takes place before Aug. 1, 1993, and who do not have their 13th birthday before that date are eligible to try out. Players already on a major league roster are not required to attend the tryouts.

The tryouts will take place, as follows:

Ten year old – 1 to 2 p.m.; 11 year old – 2 to 3 p.m.; and 12 year old – 3 to 4 p.m.

All players are required to register prior to that date. In the event of cancellation due to inclement weather, the tryouts are Monday, Oct. 12, (Columbus Day) from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The Cohasset defensive unit looks on as a shaken up Nate Fiore is checked out at the football jamboree in Abington last week. Don't miss the Skippers' opener Saturday at home against West Bridgewater.

Estate of EILEEN E. M. ZELEK late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK
NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that MARK E. ZELEK of MIAMI in the State of FLORIDA be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on September 30, 1992.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the twenty-fourth day of August one thousand nine hundred and ninety-two.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 91P0922E1
Notice Of Fiduciary's Account

To all persons interested in the estate of Eleanor G. Power late of Cohasset, Norfolk County.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the first and final account(s) of John Power as Executor (the fiduciary) of said estate have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said account(s), you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the fourteenth day of October, 1992 the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said account(s).

If you desire to object to any item of said account(s), you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham this tenth day of September, 1992.

each other along. Our Offense should be even stronger than last year, and I'm hoping for a berth in the post-season tournament."

Rookie goalie Gina Rosano, who moved up from JV, worked all summer with her brother and, according to her coach "has a real desire to win."

After Cohasset's recent scrimmage with Duxbury, where Rosano stopped innumerable shots on goal from their all-star scorer, the Duxbury coach made a special effort to praise the Cohasset rookie's performance. With the backing of her teammates and some strong support by the defense, the coach feels that Gina has a terrific future in goal.

Soccer pancake breakfast

A tradition for the past 12 years, this years' soccer pancake breakfast is Sunday, Sept. 20, 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. at the Deer Hill School. Tickets $3, preschoolers are free.

Tickets will be sold by members of the girls' and boys' varsity, junior varsity, and junior high teams, and at the door.

Hosted by the Cohasset Soccer Boosters to raise money for the Cohasset School soccer program. Come for a delicious breakfast and an opportunity to support Cohasset's soccer teams.

Fall soccer programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department's Soccer Clinics for children grades K-through-2 begin Saturday, Sept. 19, at Lillard Field (behind CHS), at the following times by grades:

Kindergarten - 9 to 10 a.m.
First Grade - 10 to 11 a.m.
Second Grade - 11 a.m. to Noon

Should you wish to register for K-2 soccer clinics but have not yet done so, you may register Saturday, Sept. 19, at Lillard Field, at the appropriate grade level and time. The fee for the six-week program is $20 with $5 discounts for subsequent children registering for the clinics. Checks payable to "Town of Cohasset."

Afterschool activities

GRADES K-3

Due to the success of the spring afterschool programs for boys and girls in grades K-3, the Recreation Department offers six-week fall programs, scheduled to begin the week of Monday, Sept. 28, at the Osgood School Field.

Programs will meet on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, from right after school until 5 p.m. A.M. Kindergarten students must be dropped off at Osgood at 2:50 p.m. All other students may stay after school as long as the form is completed, signed and returned to the recreation office by Friday, Sept. 25.

The programs are designed for fun and exercise and meet Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Children may register for one, two or all three programs, and the fees have been established to allow for maximum participation as follows:

One-Day Program (one child) $16, six weeks; second child, $10; third/subsequent, free.

Two-Day Program (one child) $28, six weeks; second child, $15; third/subsequent, free.

Three-Day Program (one child) $38, six weeks; second child, $20; third/subsequent, free.

Programs include a variety of low-organized games, sports and activities each day, and summer playground staffers Craig Carter and Chris Conley will conduct the after-school programs for Grades K-3.

Children should dress appropriately as weather conditions indicate and may bring snacks and juice boxes.

Please call 383-6791 for more information.

Garden Club news

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset begins its 1992-1993 season Tuesday, Sept. 22, at the Walton Rodgers Hall. Pauline Runkel, from Floral Artistry, will present her beautiful floral creations. She comes to us with rave reviews. It will be a great way to welcome in a new year with the club.

Coffee will be served at 9 a.m. and the meeting begins at 9:30 a.m.

Teen depot news

Coming Sept. 26: free car wash. While at the Community Center's Tag Sale, get your car washed at the Second Congregational Church (next to Town Hall): free, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Fall hours: Friday and Saturday nights from 7 to 11 p.m. All teens are invited to drop in and use the game tables and other facilities.

Open house for parents: Parents of seventh graders or anyone who wants to see the Teen Depot are invited to the Open House Sunday, Sept. 27 from 2 to 4 p.m.

The Teen Depot is an independent drop-in center for teens, located at 9 Depot Court.

Because we are a fully self-supporting community resource, contributions are always welcome.

Library story hours

Registrations are currently being accepted for fall story hour at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The series begins on Oct. 1 and last for six weeks. Sessions are offered at 10 a.m. Thursdays and Fridays.

Each 45-minute program consists of several picture book stories and simple finger plays, songs, and crafts. Children must be at least 3-1/2 years old to participate.

To register, please call the children's librarian at 383-1348.

Tag sale, Sept. 26

Tag Sale on the Common. Crafters and Tag Salers welcome! Saturday, Sept. 26, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Cohasset Common.

This year marks the 5th Annual Tag Sale on the Common!

Tag Sale guidelines:

- Sale space fee is for a 6 x 10 area.
- Provide table(s), chair(s), etc. for display.
- Have cash box and change.
- Responsible for cleanup of sale area.

Setup on the Common begins at 7:30 a.m. Food is available at a Community Center concession stand on the Common or by local merchants in the downtown area. Rest rooms will be open in the Community Center building. The Community Center must receive a check in order to reserve a space. For further information, please call the Center at 383-0088.

Register for Girl Scouts

Daisy, Brownie and Girl Scout registration for the 1992-1993 school year will be held in Bates Hall at the Second Congregational Church Monday, Sept. 21, from 6:30 to 8 p.m. The registration fee is $6 per girl. Any girl interested in Scouts should register at this time.

Information will be available for any parent interested in becoming a leader and helping with a troop. For further information call Patriots Trail Girl Scout Council at 828-3750 or 1-800-637-0070.

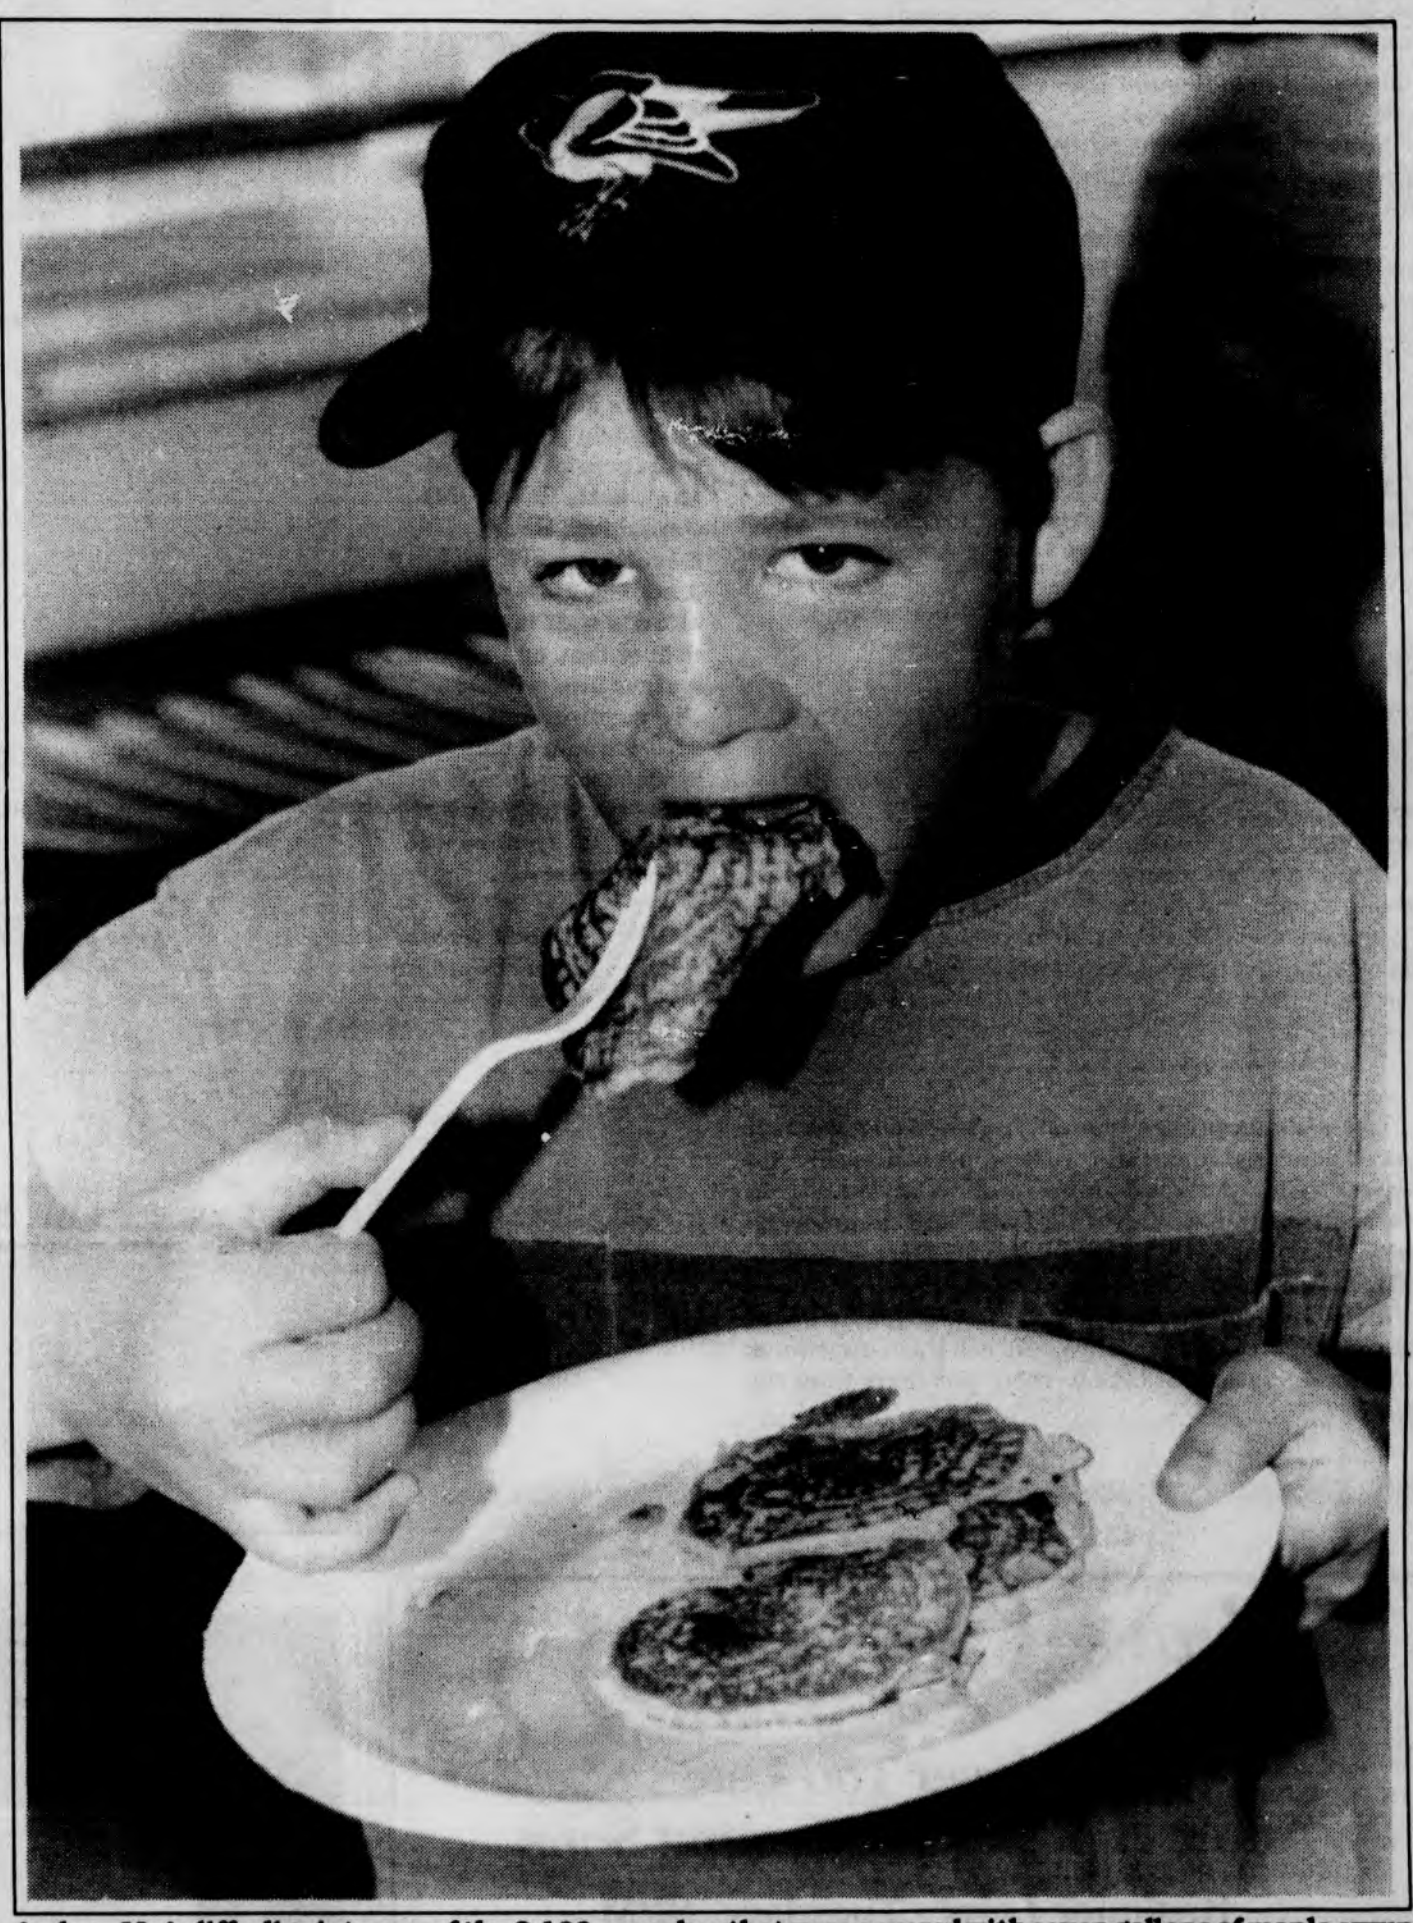
Late mooring holders may get leeway

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset's mooring by-law has earned the town a little notoriety with the state Department of Environmental Protection.

Because of the town's tough stance on timely payment of mooring fees — of the 18 mooring appeals cases currently before the DEP, 14 are from Cohasset.

As a result, the DEP has asked the town to revise its by-law to allow a grace period for failure to pay a mooring fee and to reaffirm one's position on the mooring waiting list.



Harbor Committee Chairman John "Fritz" Pfaffman said the committee voted unanimously to recommend the changes.

"We are looking to get on the better side of the state by doing this," he explained. "By eliminating the hard by-law, we agreed it's in the best interests of the town to do this.

"So if anyone does appeal (after the new by-law goes into effect), the state will look more favorably on the new by-law and rule in favor of the town," he said.

Under the current by-law, mooring holders must pay by April 1 or lose their mooring; and those on the

Smoking curbs cause no sparks in Cohasset

The lack of opposition to the Cohasset Board of Health's proposal to increase the number of non-smoking areas in local restaurants last year is in stark contrast to neigboring Hingham, where restauranteurs are irate about the prospect.

In 1991, the Cohasset Health Board proposed to increase the percentage of non-smoking seats in restaurants from 50 to 75.

State regulations require that "a portion" of seats be reserved for non-smokers.

According to health agent Joseph R. Godzik, town meeting overwhelmingly accepted the proposal.

Moreover, he said, none of the restaurants in town

Mackerel is metaphoric for added library access

By Mary Ford

Visitors to the library may be looking up for some time to come.

The weather vane, which features a mackerel, atop the cupola on the roof has taken on renewed significance.

Mackerel — the mainstay of Cohasset industry during the 1800s — is now, along with the weather vane, the new library logo, which will take the the town's literary resource into the 21st century.

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library, which is part of the 21-town member Old Colony Library Network, has a new, state-of-the art computer terminal which is now on-line with a centralized computer system based in Canton that ties Cohasset to the other town libraries.

The new system can tell instantly not only the status of books in Cohasset but those in other member systems with access to 1-1/2 million items.

And the network provides other services including electronic mail for rapid exchange of requests and daily delivery on inter-library loans.

But to utilize the new system, all books and library cards must contain a barcode, making Cohasset's present library cards obsolete.

Cohasset had the option along with the other towns of using a standard card issued by the Old Colony Library Network.

But the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library, who sup-

It took less than a week for the victors in the Sept. 8 primary to catch their breaths and dive back into the political maelstrom that leads to the Nov. 3 general election.

But the hottest local election news of the week came all the way from Washington where it was announced that First Lady Barbara Bush would pay a "non-political" visit to South Shore Hospital yesterday (Wednesday) to honor its volunteers.

Also from Washington, Gerry Studds, fresh from his primary win over Paul Harold, dropped everything as acting chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee to return to Weymouth Monday for a Democratic "Unity 92" rally at LaRossa's Function Hall.

Shoplifting arrests made

Police arrested three people Sept. 16 after receiving a call from security at CVS in Tedeschi Plaza of a possible shoplifting incident underway.

Arrested were: Paul R. Taylor, 31, of Revere; Elaine Shaw, 32, of Scituate; and John T. Mastropietro, 33, of Chelsea.

The two males were charged with shoplifting, possession of a Class A substance; and larceny of a motor vehicle.

Shaw was charged with larceny of a motor vehicle and possession of a Class A substance, Sgt. Brian Noonan said.

"Security within CVS thought there was a shoplifting going on," Noonan said. "Further investigation revealed two males in the store and the female waiting in the car."

Noonan said police recovered $250 in merchandise from CVS and found a substance in the vehicle believed to be heroin, he said.

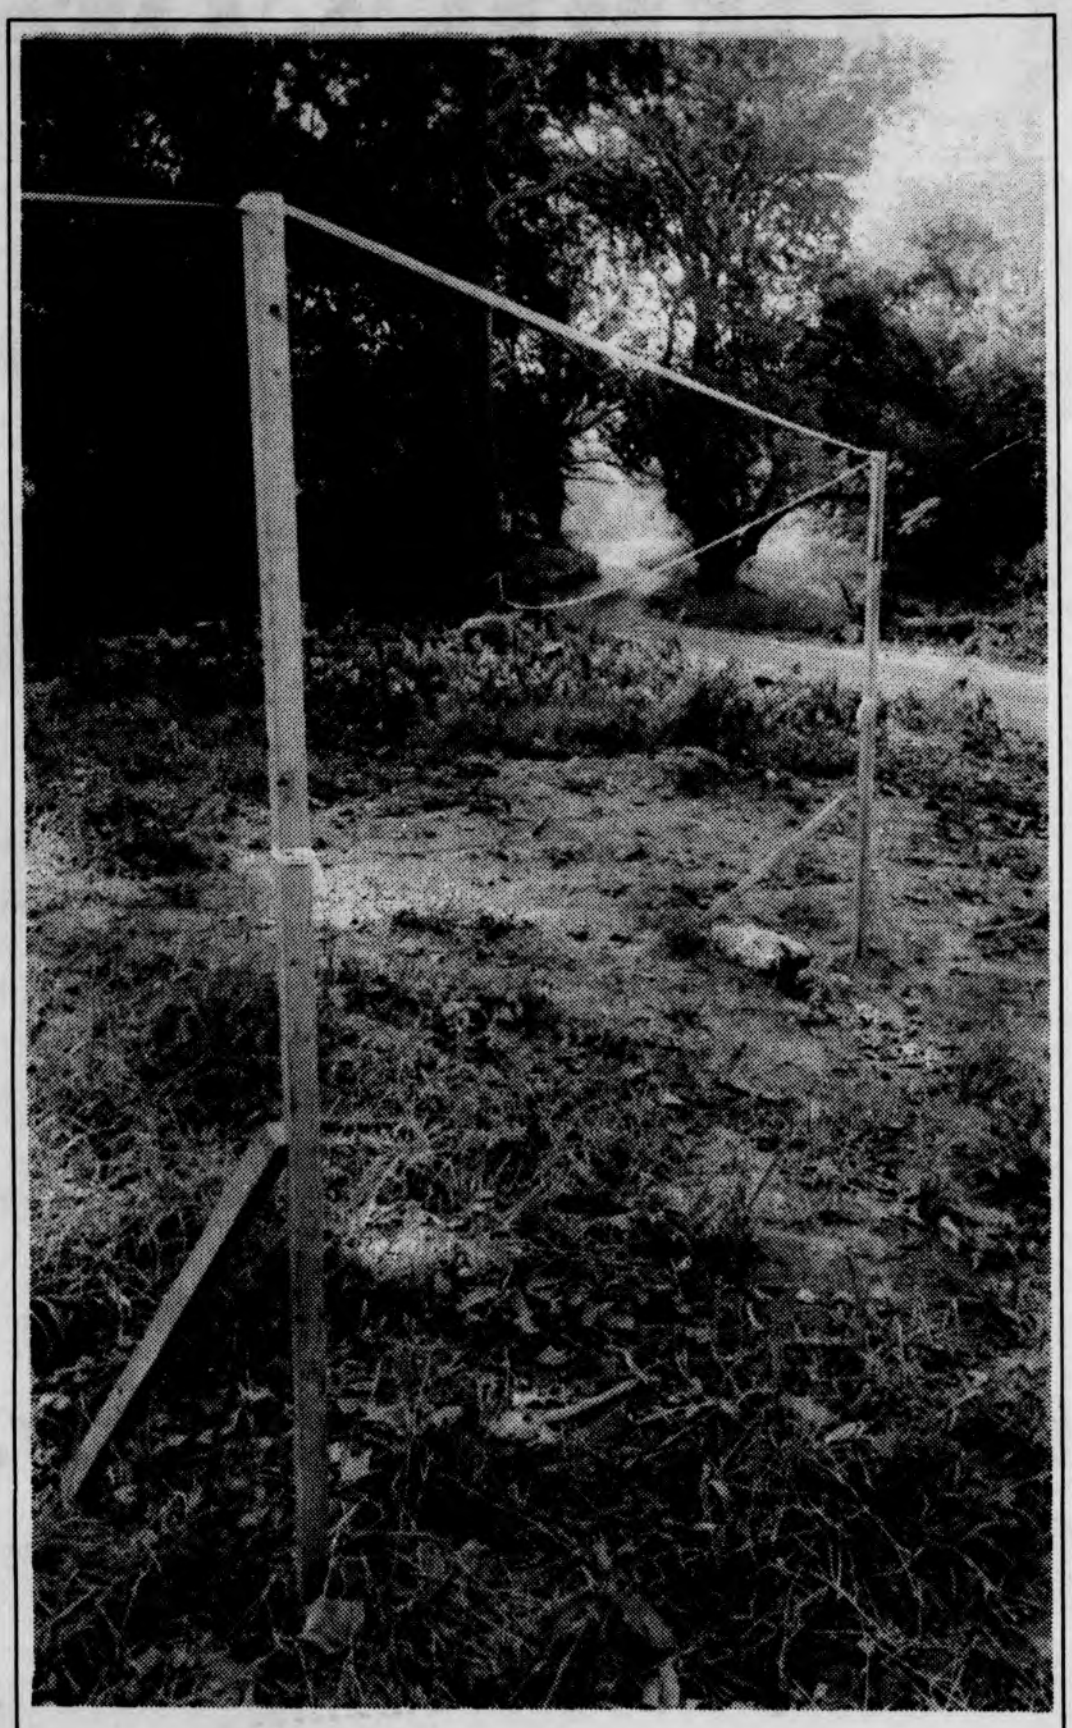
The car was stolen from Revere.

Taylor is being held on $10,000 bail. Mastropietro has been bailed. Shaw was bailed and defaulted on her arraignment, so police have issued a warrant for her arrest.

"We will pick her up eventually," Noonan said.

Outfall pipe panel

The public is invited to a scientific panel presentation on the MWRA outfall pipe at 7 p.m., Sept. 30, at Norwell High School, 18 South Street.



The panel discussion is sponsored by the South Shore Coalition and the Metropolitan Area Planning Council. Panelists will present the current status of knowledge and their conclusions on four major issues:

- denitrification
- red tide
- circulation patterns
- whales

Several communities, organizations and citizens have voiced concerns about the outfall pipe, especially with regard to its potential impact on water quality in Massachusetts and Cape Cod Bays, and its potential impact on endangered species, particularly whales.

This forum is an opportunity for the interested public to meet with scientists who are knowledgeable about these issues, hear their views, and ask them questions.

The moderator will take written questions from the floor.

These temporary posts and tape demonstrate where a walled septic system could be placed in a lot which was formerly part of the Curtis Estate off Jerusalem Road. Developers are seeking a zoning variance to allow a wall in excess of five feet or to build a structure without the required set backs. The proposed wall/ structure concerns abutters who think it will be an eyesore and safety hazard.

Walled septic system debate goes on

The zoning board continues to deliberate whether or not to issue a variance for a walled, mounded septic system at 15 Black Rock Road.

The septic system is for one of three houses which used to be part of the Curtis Estate off Jerusalem Road.

The current septic system design under consideration involves constructing a seven-foot high wall which would be back filled and enclose the septic system for the house. Part of the wall would run parallel along Jerusalem Road for about 50 feet.

Last week the board also looked at the plans from 1989 — which were drawn up before the property was sold to the present developers — in which the septic system was planned in a different location.

But the Jerusalem Road Ltd. Partnership since subdivided the land so that the old plans had the septic system on a different lot than the house it would serve.

Board chairman Myrna Putziger said the board is looking at the old plans to determine if the developer created his own hardship.

"We asked the applicant whether there had been any other location that could accommodate the septic system," she said. "(We want to see) if the current situation could have been avoided if the lots were configured differently."

The new plans for the septic system worry abutters, who think the wall will be an eye sore and a safety hazard.

The seven-foot wall requires a variance because town zoning laws allow walls of no more than five feet. If the wall is determined to be a structure, it still needs a variance because it doesn't meet the set back requirements.

The board tabled discussion last week because some members wanted to walk the site again.

The zoning board meets at 8 p.m., tonight (Thursday, Sept. 24) and all unresolved issues before the board may be discussed including the septic system at 15 Black Rock Road, Putziger said. The decision is due in November.

Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said the health board's permit for the septic system is contingent on the approval of other boards.

He explained that the way the developer has configured the lots, there "is no other place to put the septic system."

Godzik said the health board granted a variance for the system "because the plan is not a whole lot different than other (septic system) repairs in town."

He said he doubted this plan would have been approved on new construction, however.

Godzik said walled, septic systems are fairly common in Cohasset.

"There are walls all over the place," he said.

waiting list must reaffirm their position by April 1 or they are removed from the list.

The proposed by-law, which must be approved by town meeting, allows a 15-day grace period and $100 penalty for failure to pay mooring fee on time. The harbormaster would send out certified letters notifying mooring holders who are late.

The by-law also allows a 15-day grace period and a penalty of $50 for failure to reaffirm a name on the mooring waiting list; those failing to meet the April 1 deadline would also receive a certified letter from the harbormaster.

"The state felt we ought to give people the leeway and the state felt we ought to be able to fine," Pfaffman explained.

The fines would cover the cost of the certified letters and sending out extra bills and notices.

Pfaffman said the committee asked executive secretary Gregory Doyon to ask selectmen to place an article for the by-law change on the warrant for the special town meeting set for Nov. 16.

Normally, articles for by-law changes are restricted to annual town meetings. But with the April 1 deadline in the current by-law, waiting for the annual town meeting would postpone enactment of the fees and grace period until April 1994.

There are about 300 names on the waiting list for moorings which cost $5 per foot.

An amendment to the town's harbor regulations enacted last spring allows the harbormaster to reassign moorings conditionally pending the outcome of an appeal.

In the past, when a mooring was cancelled — the town allowed the mooring holder to keep the mooring through the appeals process — which can take years.

Cohasset has a total of 302 moorings in service; 40 of which are for commercial vessels.

SELL HOME YOURSELF?

QUESTION: Doesn't it make sense for me to sell my house on my own? This way I can pocket the Realtor's commission. Right?

ANSWER: Wrong! It's not that simple. For one thing, the typical buyer is no fool. He'll expect you to deduct the commission for HIS benefit before you even start serious negotiations. Then you're on your own to handle some tough bargaining, curiosity seekers, credit checks and intricate financial arrangements. In the long run, you'll find that a Realtor will sell it for the best price and in the shortest amount of time. You've got a lot invested in your home. It makes sense to sell it the professional way.

complained of the increase. In fact, Godzik said, at the board meeting held to field anticipated complaints from area restaurant owners, only one restaurant was represented — Kimballs.

And the representative from Kimballs asked the board to increase the required percentage of non-smoking seats to 100.

Kimballs banned smoking in the restaurant in 1986.

The health board was surprised only one restaurant was represented because they had sent invitations to the meeting to every restaurant owner in town, Godzik said.

"It apparently wasn't an issue for them," he added.

Unlike the Cohasset health board meeting, there was plenty of opposition on hand to battle proposals for the same non-smoking increase last week in Hingham.

Among the changes to restaurants the Hingham Board of Health is currently proposing is to change the non-smoking seats in restaurants from 50 percent to 75.

Thomas Harrington, owner of MacArthurs Restaurant and Lounge, 48 Whiting Street, Hingham, told the board he personally supports efforts to curtail smoking, however, his clientele doesn't.

"If customers wanted more non-smoking seats, we would do it," he said.

"We work on a supply and demand basis."

Harrington said if the board's proposal to increase the non-smoking seats is accepted, it would represent the second time in as many years the regulations were changed.

Hingham Health Agent Bruce T. Capman said the board wants to increase the non-smoking seat percentage so it more accurately reflects the national average.

Between 75 and 80 percent of Americans are non-smokers, Capman said.

Harrington added that while the national average for non-smokers may be about 75 percent, setting aside that same percentage in a restaurant doesn't accurately reflect the need for non-smoking seats.

"Because non-smokers come in with smokers, as a couple, and they will sit in the smoking section," he said.

There are smoking customers now who must wait over 20 minutes for a seat in the smoking section, Harrington said, while they stare at empty seats in the non-smoking section.

"More than 50 percent of my business is smoking," he said.

Harrington, who is also President of the Hingham Restaurant Association, said he would support the increase if it were universally accepted across the state.

"If there is a long wait for a smoking seat, they can go next door," to a neigboring community, he said.

MacArthurs, and several other Hingham restaurants, are located within several hundred yards of the town lines of Rockland and Norwell.

"Someone could just walk to another restaurant without the 75 percent limit," he said.

Ed Sweda, a lobbyist with the anti-smoking organization GASP (Group Against Smoking Pollution) said several other towns have more stringent anti-smoking policies.

The towns of Lenox, Stockbridge and Lee passed legislation which will institute full bans on smoking in restaurants by 1994, Sweda said.

"Dozens of communities in Colorado and California have had full bans on smoking," he added.

Provincetown has a ban on cigarette vending machines — a proposal once considered by the Cohasset Health Board.

"We talked about banning vending machines but first of all, there are very few to start with — one at the bar at the Red Lion, one at Kimballs, one at the Dunkin Donuts, maybe a couple more," Godzik said.

The purpose of banning vending machines is to stop minors from illegally buying cigarettes, Godzik said.

"I think it's probably easier for someone who wants to smoke to get someone older to go to Tedeschi's and buy them a pack," Godzik said.

However, he added, the board of health continues to look at ways to restrict smoking.

"Probably within the next year-and-a-half we will look at a total smoking ban," he said.

Legal fees approved

Selectmen approved payment of $3,899.91 to town counsel Richard A. Henderson for professional services for the month of August.

Doane Street bids

The following bids have been received for repair of the Doane Street bridge:

- $159,967 from Sylvester A. Ray, Inc.
- $129,561 from J. D. Amico Inc.
- $182,547 from N. Gbotti Inc.
- $157,110 from Tasca Construction Inc.

Executive secretary Gregory Doyon said town engineers are checking references and reviewing the bids to check compliance.

Town meeting authorized up to $175,000 for the repairs.

The state has agreed to pay $152,000, Doyon said. If a bid is chosen over that amount, the town may make up the difference or ask the state to up the grant, he said.

Doyon said the bid could be awarded at the selectmen's meeting Monday.

❑ Nancy Snowdale wants to thank everyone — including her three sons — who made her 'surprise' retirement party Sept. 11 at the Golden Rooster such a success!

Nancy is retiring Oct. 1 after 25 years, four months in the treasurer/collector's office.

Special thanks to former treasurer Gordon E. Flint who presented "This is your life.." to Nancy.

In addition to all the well wishes and a proclamation from Gov. William F. Weld, Nancy also received a Donna Green painting of Cohasset Common with the town hall in the background.

Nancy's familiar face at town hall will certainly be missed.

But she won't be going far. Nancy plans to stay busy with her duties as treasurer of the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Corporation; and her other activities on the historic commission and at Beechwood Congregational Church.

Summer breeze — Kristen O'Connell and Kerry Sullivan place second in the Sail II group on a "gem" of a day, August 30. The Cohasset Sailing Club wound up its 33rd season with turnabout racing in a good breeze, hot dogs and soda, and awards and certificates. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald)

❑ Early walkers may have noticed the crowd of cars outside Hunneman's office on Friday mornings...the new schedule gets those brokers up and out by 8:15!! And, here's a news flash that was announced at a recent Friday meeting... all managers must attend an Outward Bound Program in October. Judy Parsons, the Cohasset manager, will be shopping for her first pair of jeans in preparation for the rough and ready program. Be sure to let us know all about it!!

❑ Congratulations go to Ellen Malloy this week!

In the recent Ladies' Club Championship at Cohasset Golf Club, Ellen won (that's the second year in a row friends!!). We'll bet the trophy takes center stage on the mantle (it should).

Dad, Bill, says that Ellen plays like her Mom, not him!

Whomever you take after Ellen, keep up the good work, we're all proud of you and your efforts.

❑ Speaking of efforts, what about Allison Ludlow? Everyone knows of her soccer prowess and her injury-plagued knees. Well, Allison is now the CHS goalie for her soccer team, and she is doing an outstanding job.

Although used to doing the scoring, she's now saving the goals, and doing it with the team spirit she is known for.

Go watch the soccer team, judge for yourself, then tell them all how good they are!

❑ Laurie Goodrich Cleveland is on cloud nine, and with good reason! Laurie, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Earle Goodrich of South Main Street, just passed her nursing boards and is officially a registered Nurse!

Knowing her love of people (and the way she handles dogs with her firm but gentle hand), we know she will be a wonderful nurse and we wish her good luck as she begins her career.

❑ Under the "Everyone is talking about" news, how about the library at the Deer Hill School. It is sporting a brand new look with a nifty paint job.

Marge Murphy, along with hubby Bill and son Billy, spent their spare time last summer doing the job (to perfection we might add).

That's what is called school (and community) spirit, they are all to be thanked (and congratulated).

You can bet that the kiddos and all that use it are appreciative and happy with the new look.

❑ Sept. 8 was a special day for Jaqueline Kurtz and Robert Jones. That's the day that their son, Robert Jason Jones, was born. Robert was born at South Shore Hospital at 2:39 a.m. and weighed 7 lbs. 15 ozs. His grandparents are Leo Kurtz, Eileen Kurtz and Cliff Jones.

Congratulations to all of you, and enjoy that baby boy!

❑ Another baby boy was born recently, Benjamin Joseph Campbell.

Benjamin was born Aug. 14 at Newton/Wellesley Hospital and weighed in at 8 lbs. 8 ozs.

His parents are Janet (LeClair) and Joseph J. Campbell. His sister, Alyssa, is three years old. !

obituaries

Paul Desmond

Paul A. Desmond of Cohasset, vice president of finance for Warren E. Collins Inc. of Braintree, died Sept. 16 at Deaconess Hospital, Boston.

Mr. Desmond was a certified public accountant and worked with Arthur Young Accounting Inc. in Boston before working for Warren E. Collins Inc.

He was a graduate of Merrimack College in North Andover.

Mr. Desmond was active in St. Anthony's Church of Cohasset.

Born in Lowell, he lived most of his early years in Reading and graduated from Reading High School.

He served in the Army after graduation.

He leaves his wife, Denise (Cummings) Desmond; a son, Lawrence P. Desmond of Cohasset; a daughter, Ellen Marie Desmond of Cohasset; his parents, J. Leo and Juliette (Gagnon) Desmond of Reading; two brothers, Robert J. Desmond of Acton and Dick Desmond of Brookline, and a sister, Eileen Downing of Hampton.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Sept. 19 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

The Gaffey Funeral Home, 757 Country Way, N. Scituate handled the arrangements.

Louis J. Zervas

Funeral services for Louis J. Zervas, 61, of Scituate, owner of the Golden Rooster restaurant, were conducted Sept. 17 at the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church in Cohasset.

Mr. Zervas died Sept. 15 at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston.

Mr. Zervas was born and educated in Greece and served with the Greek army during the revolution that broke out after World War II.

In his father's bakery in Greece, he learned the food trade, and when he came to the United States after his military service, he began working at the Marguery Restaurant in Ipswich.

Later he worked for the former Cock and Kettle restaurant on Border Street, Scituate.

Two years later, he bought the restaurant and renamed it the Golden Rooster.

Mr. Zervas was a founder of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church and was its president at the time of his death.

He leaves his wife, Niki (Soffron) Zervas; a daughter, Kiki Angela Lazaris of Scituate; a sister, Georgia Galanis of Ipswich, and a granddaughter.

The mackerel

The gold-leafed, copper mackerel weather vane has been atop the cupola at the library for 90 years, a symbol of the town's rich past.

The mackerel is typical of Cohasset's former fishing industry.

And what an industry it was.

A fleet of 50 mackerel schooners once graced Cohasset harbor with a catch that was second to none.

Vessels sailed in Canadian waters and returned to town with their bounty which spawned many other businesses that brought prosperity to the town, according to local historian David Wadsworth.

Rope makers, wood carvers, ship builders and the salt industry all flourished.

But as the mackerel schools depleted and powered vessels arrived — the regal majesty of the two-masted fishing schooner in Cohasset waters was relegated to the pages of the town's history books.

So there on top of the library, the mackerel has been positioned for the bulk of this century — alerting us to wind direction, with most of us taking little note.

But now as the town enters the 21st century, the mackerel has again become a symbol — not of the past but of the future.

One of those major changes on the horizon is regionalization.

Perhaps it's ironic that the public library — one of the town's oldest institutions — is leading the way.

To form the Old Colony Library Network — a group of 21 area towns had to reach agreement — that means selectmen, library trustees and town meetings. A remarkable feat considering the parochial roots of New England towns.

And the results are mind boggling.

Each citizen now has access to a computerized catalog of more than 1-1/2 million items. Other exciting things like electronic mail for rapid exchange of request and daily delivery of interlibrary loans are benefits of the network.

Thanks to the hard work of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, its trustees, and library director, Cohasset's new high-tech library card features that very old symbol — the mackerel weather vane.

"People look to the weather vane to get information — to see which way the wind is blowing," notes John Hartshorne of the Friends.

"And that's why they come to the library to get information."

Today, whether it be libraries, fire service, public safety or schools — the wind is blowing toward regionalization.

And in Cohasset, we can thank the mackerel for pointing us in that direction.

The Days of Awe

commentary

Don't think of man's sins, I beg of You. Think rather of his good deeds. They are fewer, I agree. But You must admit, they are more precious. Believe me, it isn't easy to be good in this world. And if I didn't see with my own two eyes that man, in spite of all obstacles, is capable of kindness, I would not believe it. And so I ask of You: don't be so harsh with Your children: rare as it may be, it is their kindness that should surprise You.

—The Grandfather of 'Shpole

Elie Wiesel cites the New Year's prayer of an Hasidic Master in his book, Souls On Fire. In this simple plea for grace and charity from God, one sees the rabbinic belief in the possibility of, and a need for, a personal relationship with the Creator.

In Judaism this relationship descends from Adam through the Patriarch Abraham, to all humanity. All powerful and apart from His creation(s), God is yet watchful and available to His children.

Sunday at sunset, Jews begin the observance of the New Year 5753. Aside from the start of the New Year, the High Holy Days reaffirm the sacred connection between God and mankind.

Rosh Hashanah begins 10 days that culminate in the holiest day of the Jewish liturgical year—Yom Kippur. These are the Days of Awe. In them, the anniversary of the seven-day Creation of the universe and the power of the Creator are recognized and contemplated.

In synagogues around the world, believers will reflect on the awesome might and will of the Creator who brings forth all Creation with His voice—alone out of nothing.

. . . For He commanded, and they were created. (Psalm 148:5)

Now The Book of Life is opened and all are judged for the past year's deeds. The new year's measure is made by God, and the book of His judgments and our fates is sealed for the year.

These are and ought to be, contemplative times. Everyone falls short of expectation, but hope for fulfillment and redemption live in the promise of a fresh start with the new year—and God's grace.

In the services Jews will pray for all mankind and peace among nations. Sadly, as it has been from the earliest days, these prayers continue to be necessary.

Looking at the world news we shudder as war, famine, plague and death continue to ride through history on steeds of hatred. But there are also the glimmers of hope found in the uncommon, but not rare, acts of courage and charity among people—like peace talks and air-lifts to the hungry and suffering.

In the readings for Rosh Hashanah we glimpse at God's love and concern for His children—all of His children—all humanity.

Among these texts are Genesis 21:1-34 and 22:1-24, which speak about Abraham and his sons Ishmael and Isaac, the fathers of the Arabs and the Jews respectively. In the two Bible passages we see the loving Father of all, extend mercy to the equally, but differently doomed, boys.

These are stories of Providence and Promise, for in them, the weak and lowly are raised to kingship. The power of the Creator to enter history is attested to and we find the ideal for the good parent.

May you and yours be inscribed in The Book Of Life for a good year—L 'Shana Tova Tikatevu . . .

—Richard Small

As the campaign dust settles . . .

commentary

Reporting on the controlled chaos we in this country refer to as a primary election is like playing Twister in a hurricane and having to count the rain drops.

As last Tuesday's 10th District deluge soaked town halls from Quincy to Provincetown, our "election team" was asked to develop a strategy that would amply cover every rival camp both Democrat and Republican.

Unlike the manpower devoted by some of the larger, daily representatives of the Fourth Estate, whose stormtrooping swarms barraged the South Shore and Cape à la Grenada, we had an army of three – more like asking the East Longmeadow police auxiliary to organize and launch the attack on Omaha Beach.

Still, we persevered, hounding town clerks, zipping from Elk's hall to Elk's hall for candidate reaction to the incoming hail of ballots, and leaning somewhat sheepishly on the radio and television.

My esteemed colleague, Tom Henshaw, a veteran of more elections than he may care to admit, sewed up our turf's northern tier — as campaign organizers are fond of calling newly redistricted Quincy and Weymouth — and kept one eye each on the McDonald state Senate and Harold Congressional races.

I armed myself with a lengthy list of names and numbers, having won pledges of immediate updates from most of the remaining campaign managers.

The rest would have to come courtesy of the electronic media.

Patsy Murray, the Mariner's intrepid Weymouth editor, would serve as field general, coordinating our movements and generally holding down the fort.

At about 9 p.m., as the first of 187 precincts began calling in their results, the juggling commenced.

The patchwork began to fill in: first Avon, then down to Dennis, up to a partial report from Quincy, back down to Plymouth.

The tallies see-sawed. Who would win? Is incumbent bashing the rage, or does experience merit a vote? Will redistricting forever change the face of Congressional politics? Is this the year of the woman candidate? Can I write my story and fill in the blanks later?

Just think. All of the speculation and analysis, the thousands of copy inches devoted by the pundits to this primary were all coming to a head.

As our midnight deadline loomed, came and passed with no story, the pressmen started grumbling and checking their watches. Where was Tom?, we wondered. Had he been swept up in the hullabaloo of a victorious constituency? Was he flattened among the wailing and gnashing of teeth of a failed campaign?

Finally, he arrived, notebook brimming with statistics and speeches fraught with just add water sentiment. The story materialize. It was 1 a.m., but a decisive victory was still unclear in the Republican Congressional race.

Should we gamble and risk a Dewey Wins! catastrophe if we err? Should we look uncertain and less professional than our insomniac competition?

At last, at 1:30 a.m. with 94 percent of the vote in, the race took a decided turn in candidate Dan Daly's favor, and the question mark was removed from the page one flat.

The races were won or lost, the stage was set for November and another story was put to bed under the threatening glare of the press crew.

As I shook off the dust from the champagne pail. . . ah campaign trail, I wondered if the real thing, the Nov. 3 election would be any less tumultuous.

- Andrew MacLellan

Railroad scoping meeting Oct. 15

letters

To the Editor:

Significant progress has been made on the restoration of commuter rail service on the Old Colony Lines. The restoration of commuter rail service on the Main Line, the Middleborough Line and the Plymouth Line has received all required environmental approvals and is now moving forward. Work on the Greenbush Line Corridor is about to take a big step forward, too.

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) and the Federal Transit Administration (FTA) have decided to move forward as quickly as possible with the preparation of the environmental studies required to provide improved transportation services to the Greenbush Line Corridor. This will require the preparation of a Supplemental Environmental Impact Statement/Report (EIS/R).

In the Fall of 1990, the MBTA decided, because of the many comments on the Draft EIS/R relating to the Greenbush Line and due to the requirement by the FTA that additional studies of alternatives to avoid impacts to historic resources in the Hingham Square area be conducted, that the environmental review of the Greenbush Line would proceed on a separate schedule from the Main, Middleborough and Plymouth Lines.

Work on the special study for the historic resources in Hingham, known as a "Section 4(f) Study" has been underway since early 1991. On the basis of these studies, it appears that alternatives considering commuter rail service in a tunnel in the Hingham Square Tunnel area may warrant additional examination along with the transportation alternatives already being considered.

Carrying out the supplemental environmental review for the Greenbush Line Corridor will involve determination of an appropriate project scope this fall; then development of a Supplemental Draft EIS/R by mid-1993; and then completion of the Supplemental Final EIS/R in early 1994. These studies are required to complete the environmental review.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS	Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) 722-1646 Room 416B	Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) 722-2800 ext.7957 Room 134
THE HOUSE AND SENATE. The House and Senate met in formal session last week. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' and senators' votes on three roll calls from the week of September 14-18.
COLA (H 6010) — House 144-0, Senate 32-2, overrode Governor Weld's veto of a $60 million cost of living increase, effective July 1, 1992, for state and local retirees. Override supporters said these 120,000 retired employees have not had a raise in four years and are entitled to this modest hike which is capped at $450 per employee. Opponents said the state simply cannot afford the $60 million at this time. In his veto message, Governor Weld said approval of this money would render impossible the approval of $110 million for state road and bridge projects. He also suggested the state could better afford to pay this increase effective next July. (A "Yea" vote is for the $60 million cost of living hike. A "Nay" vote is against it.)	Y	Y
MORE COLA (H 6010 — House 144-0, Senate 33-2, overrode Governor Weld's veto of additional language necessary to provide the $60 million cost of living increase for retirees. Override supporters said this additional action is necessary to complete the override and insure the money goes quickly to help the retirees. Opponents again argued the state cannot afford the $60 million. (A "Yea" vote is for the $60 million. A "Nay" vote is against it).	Y	Y
TECHNOLOGY (H 6073) — House 136-0, Senate 35-0 gave final approval and sent to Governor Weld a $70.9 million bond issue for the acquisition and upgrading of many of the state's major information systems. Provisions include $32.5 million for an automated eligibility determination system in the Department of Public Welfare and $1 million for the purchase and installation of computer equipment for the House. Supporters said this bond issue, combined with $21.1 million in federal reimbursements, will make major improvements and promote efficiency in many of the state's important computer systems. (A "Yea" vote is for the package. A "Nay" vote is against it).	Y	Y

Railroad meeting October 15 . . .

A scoping meeting will be conducted on Thursday, Oct. 15, at 7:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

The subject of the scoping meeting will be the alternatives to be examined in the environmental review process and the environmental impacts to be studied. All interest citizens are invited to attend.

A question and answer session with the Citizens' Advisory Committee appointed by the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs is planned for Thursday, Oct. 8, at 7:30 p.m. at Braintree Town Hall, One JFK Memorial Drive.

If you are interested in receiving scoping materials or being informed of Greenbush Line progress by being on the Greenbush Line mailing list, please notify: Wayne Duchemin, Community Liaison, MBTA - Construction, 1515 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169, (617) 722-5835, or, Joseph D'Eramo, Public Involvement Coordinator, Sverdrup Corporation, Two Center Plaza, Boston, MA 02108-1906, (617) 742-8060.

Thank you for your interest in the MBTA's Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation Project. We look forward to celebrating the completion of the Main Line, the Middleborough Line and the Plymouth Line in late 1996. We also look forward to the development of a system that will meet the transportation needs of the Greenbush Line Corridor.

Mackerel is metaphoric for added library access

port the library by coordinating volunteer activities and fund-raising, decided that it would be nice for Cohasset to have its own card, a symbol of of the town's unique character.

The Friends wanted something simple but recognizable.

"The weather vane is a very strong but symbolic object," notes John Hartshorne, member of the executive board of the Friends.

"People look at the weather vane to get information — to see which way the wind is blowing. And that's why they come to the library, to get information," he says.

So after months of planning and making decisions on print size, type and the like — the Friends with the approval of the library trustees designed a brand new card, which is now available.

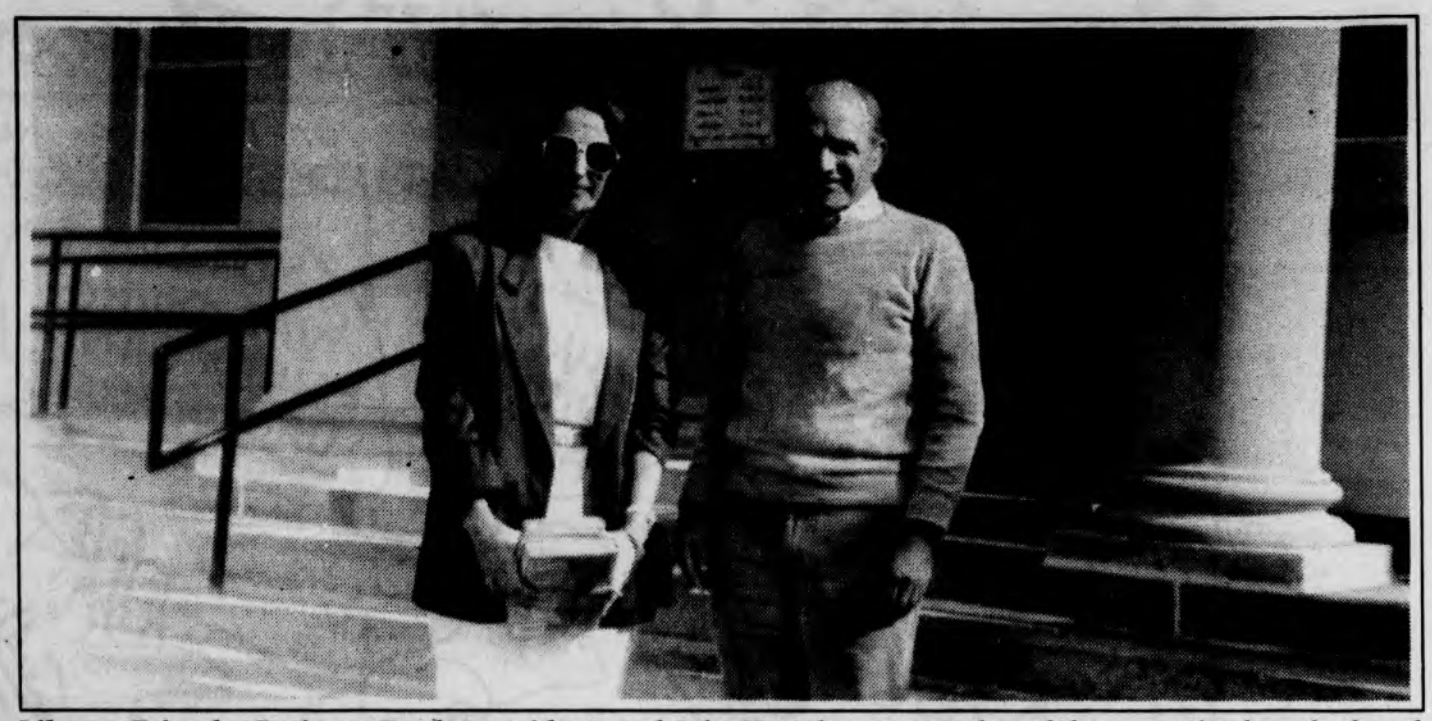
(Photo by John Hartshorne)

"We wanted it to be as crisp and classic as possible. And have all the information contained in an attractive, efficient way," notes Patience Towle, president of the Friends.

The card, which is credit-card thickness, features the mackerel weather vane and lettering with the library's name and address in teal blue on a white background.

The Friends spent nearly $1,400 or about 10 percent of its annual budget for the cards which are made of non-crack plastic.



Helping to keep the cost down was Hartshorne's daughter Ellen F. Hartshorne, formerly of Cohasset, donated her expertise and services as a graphic designer for the project.

Six thousand cards were printed and should last the library two-to-three years, says library director Richard Hayes.

Hayes explained that 70 percent of Cohasset's 2,000 households have one or more active users — so the library can expect to issue about 5,000 new cards over coming months.

To get a new card, library users must present some form of identification which proves Cohasset residency such as driver's license or utility bill.

Since cards from Old Colony Network towns can be used in all member libraries — the unique Cohasset cards will be reserved for residents only.

Library 'Friends,' Patience Towle, president; and John Hartshorne, member of the executive board, played an active role in developing the new library card featuring the mackerel weather vane logo.
(Staff photo/Mary Ford)

Plans for the library network began about six years ago, Hayes explained.

The new network survived the approval process crossing political boundaries that included the approval of 21 town meetings; 21 boards of selectmen; and 21 boards of library trustees — proving that regionalization is possible.

The library system cuts down on labor-intensive "manual" operating procedures and there will be significant savings in special functions such as the sending out of overdue notices and cataloging, Hayes says.

But the savings don't mean that libraries will stay open longer or hire additional staff because the towns' fiscal constraints have cut too deeply.

"We are still coping with layoffs and rising demands for our services," Hayes explains. "The new network will help us to provide a better product."

He noted that libraries are closed more days per week now than when the concept for the network took root in the mid-1980s.

But despite the negative side of library cutbacks — working together to develop the new card was a positive endeavor, Towle says.

"It was the most harmonious project I've ever worked on," she recalls.

"One reason it went so well, it was fun. And the end result is something everyone could look forward to — it was tangible for a change."

"I know what it's like to be unemployed."

Meet Jon Bryan,. candidate for Congress. Jon knows how difficult it is for the many people who have lost their jobs.

As a young airline pilot with a family to support, Jon lost his job many times due to recessions and a fuel crisis. So, Jon and his wife, Nancy, started an alternative energy business (A real Mom and Pop operation!), while he also attended night school.

Jon Bryan knows the importance of good jobs, and as your Congressman, Jon will support policies to help small businesses grow. Jon thinks a Congressman should support community self-help, and he'll give back the $40,000 payraise to charities in the district. Cohasset fleets led mackerel fishing industry

Mackerel was the main fishing industry in Cohasset during the 19th century, says David Wadsworth of the historical society.

Earlier, cod fishing had disappeared from the area, he explains.

Two-masted schooners, owned by various Cohasset families, fished for mackerel in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and off the coast of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island in Canada under a treaty with Britain which allowed American ships to fish in the maritime provinces.

Mackerel fishing hit its peak just before the Civil War. And Cohasset, with a fleet of 50 schooners, briefly ranked as the largest fishing port in terms of size of catch, Wadsworth notes.

The fishing industry spawned related activities that prospered such as rope making, ship building, wood carving, and the evaporating of sea water for salt which was used as a preservative, Wadsworth says.

But the mackerel schools depleted and the industry declined in the 1880s. Another reason for its fall was that the small ports, like Cohasset, didn't make the transition from sailing to engine-powered vessels.

The last Cohasset mackerel schooner, Charlotte, was seized and impounded by the Canadians in 1894.

"You had to go to admiralty court to get the fine reduced," Wadsworth explains. He said the Canadians charged fines equal to the value of the schooner which at that time was about $2,000.

The Charlotte was sold to the Canadians in 1895.

Edward Nichols was the architect to who designed in the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, which was built in 1903.

In a volume of the town's history Nichols says about the library, "The roof is of copper and is crowned by an octagonal cupola terminated by a vane in the form of a mackerel — typical of Cohasset's former industry."

Cohasset seniors concentrate as Tony McAlear explains Tao T'ai Chi, the centuries old martial art of relaxation before the exercises begin. The class meets Fridays at the senior center. (Staff photo/Alan Chapman)

Seniors study the fine art of relaxation

By Chris Kukk
Mariner correspondent

Relax, Relax, Relax...is something everyone should do in these chaotic political and economic times.

But there's no need to remind some members of Cohasset's senior community about the need for a little relaxation.

They've taken it to an art form — a martial art form.

Every Friday morning, from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m., Cohasset's senior citizens practice the centuries' old martial art of meditation known as Tao T'ai Chi.

Led by their experienced instructor, Anthony "Tony" McAlear, they are fighting the process of aging through the exercise of meditation and they're winning.

"My arthritic back is now relieved from stiffness and pain. I am able to do most of the usual yard work comfortably and with flexibility," noted an enthusiastic student.

Another stated that "it has been effective in helping me improve my health and control the stress that was wearing me down."

Tao T'ai Chi, which in translation means "The Way of Universal Energy," is really a combination of both physical and mental exercise, McAlear explains

"T'ai Chi is an exercise and moving meditation designed to reduce stress and promote a systematic relaxation to develop and maintain a balanced, energized, healthy mind and body," he says.

Before actually engaging in the practice of T'ai Chi, McAlear takes his new students through a background lecture on its history and medical applications, which range from its use in helping arthritis to controlling stress.

As the class moved from its "historic" evaluation of T'ai Chi to its actual engagement of the exercise, McAlear maneuvered his students into a circle to begin the portion of class where both "fluid motion and meditation coincide."

Throughout the class in which he continually says relax, relax, relax — McAlear guided the students in exercises that could be characterized as gradual, fluid, and balanced bending movements of the arms and legs. For example, the crane (featured in the movie "Karate Kid") was used throughout the class.

While the students performed the movements, McAlear assisted them in visualizing, what is termed as the "flowing energy of the Chi" by descriptively detailing a valley where all of nature's energy could be experienced.

From the warmth of the sun to the fluidity of the river, not a thing was overlooked in McAlear's journey into the "Valley of the Chi."

Although not everyone felt the continual warmth of the Chi Sun — as one student said, "Once in awhile there would be an eclipse" — most said that they had experienced some form of energy during the meditation and exercises.

While the class engaged in a dance of both body and mind, it provided testimony to McAlear's earlier quote by an ancient Chinese instructor which stated that "Hard will always be conquered by soft."

Tao T'ai Chi instructor, Tony McAlear (Staff photo/Alan Chapman)

Through their controlled motions and meditation (the soft) the students were seemingly able to overcome the physical demands (the hard) of both the lengthy exercise session as well as some of their own innate impediments.

In a world where stress is controlling many and even killing some — the Cohasset seniors are, once again, leading and demonstrating by example an experience that should be emulated more often in this "hurry-up" and "worried" world: Relax, Relax, Relax...

school's in

by Ed Leary

Now that the new faces are starting to connect with names, students and I are adjusting to the new relationships that each year brings, and everyone is still fresh with the enthusiasm of a new beginning, it is time for me to start a new project: writing a regular column that informs the people of Cohasset what is taking place in the classrooms throughout the school system. In the coming weeks I'd like to demonstrate in a very real sense the variety of educational experiences that the children of this town encounter at all levels.

What do the Tour de France, MIT, electronic music, and remedial math have in common? To begin the year, I thought it would be fruitful to take a look back at the past two months in order to give an idea of the types of continuing professional growth that the staff undertake during the summer. Accordingly, I asked teachers to respond to the following topic, "What I Did for My Summer Vacation" (I wonder where I got that idea from!).

In the first place, many of the staff went back to school to take courses. One that struck me was the course attended by 25 elementary and jr./sr. high school staff members on "Identification and Remediation of Learning Disabilities in Mathematics," given in association with Cambridge College. In addition to this course, Marian Atkinson and Maureen Alcott of Joseph Osgood took a second course entitled "Integration of Special Needs Students" to prepare for their third-grade classes this year.

Two members of the high school's seventh-grade team, Betty Beatson and Ken Cisneros, have been selected by the National Science Foundation and Bridgewater State College to participate in a series of regional workshops for teachers of math or science. As participants, they will develop effective techniques for teaching mathematics and science to students of various levels, using hands-on experiences and computer-assisted learning. The course will continue through nine follow-up workshops during the academic year.

Also from the high school, Dennis Walsh and Maureen Lalumiere attended "Mathematic Renewal for Secondary Teachers" at Boston College in order to explore new approaches for traditional math courses and to develop new topics for the high school curriculum.

"How can we encourage young Americans to pursue careers in science, mathematics, and engineering?" In response to this challenge, Dave Magnussen attended a program at MIT that attempted to answer this question by presenting the state-of-the-art in math, chemistry, physics and the life sciences. The organizers of the course argue that it is often a single individual, typically a teacher, that sparks an interest in technological issues leading to a science career.

Aside from their courses, many other activities testify to the diversity and versatility of the staff at the three schools. For example, Linda Stevens taught in the "Summer Arts at Derby Academy" program. For her, it "was stimulating to work with artists from the areas of the visual arts, theater, music and dance in a multicultural setting." Ron Emmons completed his sixth summer teaching and directing at the Choate Rosemary Summer Theater School, and his work with the playwright in residence will lead to a production later this year at Cohasset.

Also in the area of the arts, Colleen Foley-Wheeler had a busy time of it! She was commissioned to compose a piece for youth orchestra at UMass/Dartmouth, to be performed later this year at Ohio State University. In addition, she collaborated with a composer from Mass. College of Art to produce a text for composers of electronic music; the resulting Electronic Composer's Pocket Guide is currently being used in this semester's music classes. Her work on the Berklee School of Music's computer bulletin board will enable several composers/students/professors to visit her classes this year.

In July, Ed Leonard chaired the In-Service Committee, consisting of ten representatives from the three schools, which met to establish the format and content of the various in-service days for this year. In addition to her work on this committee, Patricia Keenan completed two graduate courses in the use of various assessment techniques to foster critical thinking skills in the classroom.

As a consultant, Joan Wool worked on an Industry in Education grant that was intended to determine how training programs can be incorporated into curriculum plans centered on emerging technology. She plans to apply the knowledge gained to her business courses and to the development of the Cohasset Schools Technology Plan. Mike Weydt, the elementary physical education specialist, also worked as a consultant in neighboring Scituate and aided in the design of an evaluation tool for their current K-12 physical education curriculum.

Finally, Paul Narkiewicz traveled to Poland to teach English to Polish students; I might add that he used Tip O'Neil's autobiography as his text! As he has done in the past, Whitey Dunn traveled to Clinch Valley, Tennessee, to participate in the Appalachia Project, a program that rehabilitates homes to make them "safe, dry and warm." To fulfill a 20-year dream, Ginny Burbank attended a performance of "Aida" in Italy and later completed the MTA leadership seminar at Williams College in the Berkshires. Jack Buckley led a bicycle tour following the Tour de France, and Cohasset's own Apple-trained technicians tested, diagnosed, cleaned, repaired and catalogued all the computers in the school system.

But that's enough of "blowing our own horn." For the rest of the year I plan to focus on specific programs, projects and classroom activities that benefit the children throughout the school system in order to give you, the townspeople, an idea of the quality education that is provided.

(Ed Leary is a teacher at Cohasset High School.)

PSO meets tonight

The Cohasset PSO holds its annual meeting at 7:30 p.m., tonight (Sept. 24) in the high school cafeteria.

Guest speaker is Candelaria Silva, who is part of the Families First program at Children's Museum in Boston. A parent education and support program, Families First was developed under the auspices of Wheelock College and the museum to provide a wide range of programs for many different kinds of parents and families.

Silva's special areas of expertise include children's values, self-esteem, and sibling relationships.

Cohasset Education Foundation names directors

By Terry Kahn
Special to the Mariner

After nearly nine months of task force meetings and planning, the Cohasset Education Foundation this week announced the formation of its first formal board of directors .

"We've been able to put together a remarkable group," said Foundation chairman Brian McKenney, following a Sept. 15 meeting at Cohasset High School.

"We have corporate executives, attorneys, academics, community leaders, small business owners, even a professional baseball player. All are parents, some are alumni, and most have more than one child currently in our schools," he added.

There are 24 board members, said McKenney, among them Cohasset school Supt. Stephen Hart, who will attend meetings in an ex-officio capacity. Other board members include Elaine Coyne, the board treasurer; Clark Chatterton; S.W. Chittick; John Flanagan; Richard Flynn: Dr. C. Christopher Ford; Dr. Steven Golden; Richard A. Henderson; David Keefe; Michael Kennedy; James Kinch; E . J . Kahn; Dennis Lamp; John F . McNamara; Judithann Murphy; David Replogle; Michael Sceery; Goodwin T. Schramm; Richard Shea; Robert Simons; and David and Holly Holway, who will serve as the Foundation secretary.

John Larkin Thompson, the retired chief executive of Blue Cross-Blue Shield, and Dr. Joseph Nedrow have agreed to serve as advisors to the board, McKenney said.

At the inaugural meeting McKenney reminded the board that the primary goals of the CEF were to promote academic excellence in the Cohasset school system and to explore new sources of funding for worthy long-range projects that fell beyond the scope of annual town-funded budgets. A fund-raising party held in connection with a Bill Cosby performance last month at the South Shore Music Circus raised more than $3,000.

"We want to be project-oriented." McKenney noted. "And we want to be innovative."

The Cohasset Education Foundation is the youngest example of a trend that began in Massachusetts in the early eighties to respond, as a 1988 study by the state Department of Education put it. "to the desire to expand the human and material resources of the schools."

In 1988 there were 26 "local educational foundations" in the Commonwealth, the Department of Education's Office of Community Education reported. By this year, the number had grown to approximately 100.

McKenney said he expected the Foundation, in its first year, to focus some attention and effort on school department plans to build a system-wide technology network that could eventually integrate both computer hardware and software throughout Cohasset's three schools. Supt. Hart told the Foundation that a contract to develop the three- to five-year plan would be awarded this week.

"My goal is to make the technology part of our curriculum," Hart said.

One element of that plan—a "technology room" with as many as a dozen computer work stations for the newly expanded library in the Joseph Osgood School — has been cited by McKenney as an example of the kind of project the Foundation would like to be able to support.

"A room like that," agreed Supt. Hart, "would turn our library into a multi-media area."

Fund-raising approaches—including corporate partnerships and matching gifts, bequests, and large foundation grants—were also discussed.

"With this local education foundation," said the CEF chairman, "it's important to find different fund-raising sources than those the schools and the town have traditionally relied on."

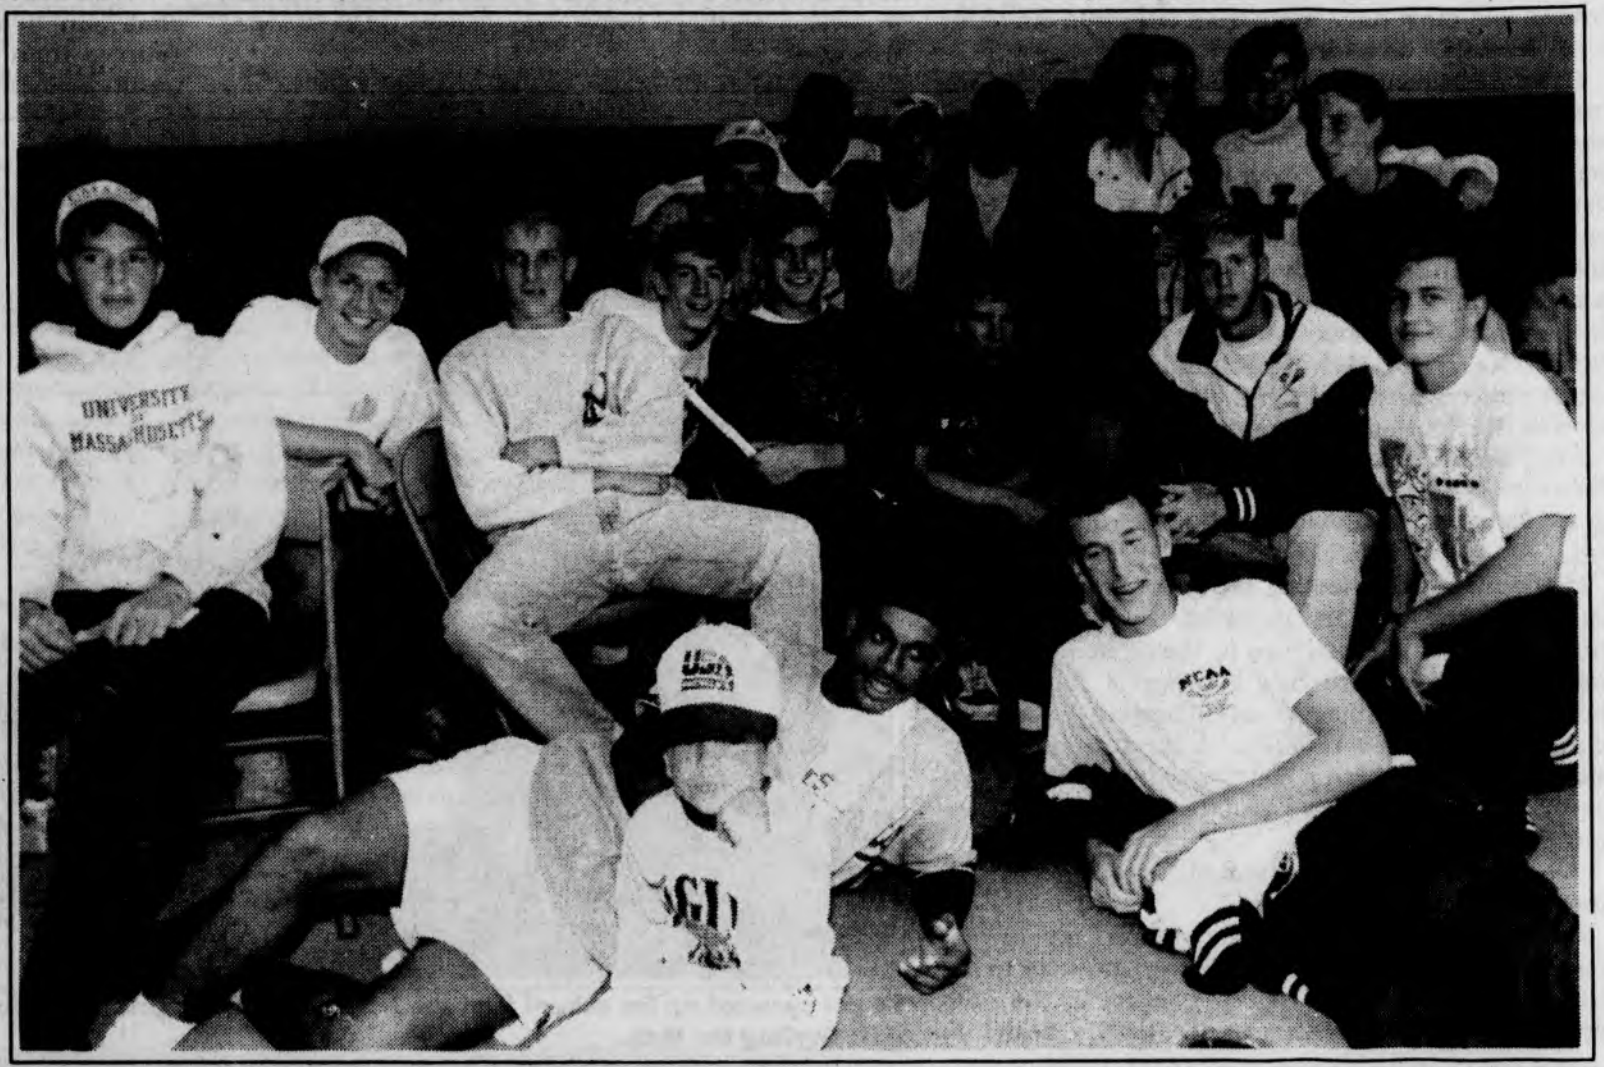
Skippers boys' soccer squad shuts out opponents

Good weather, good company, great soccer, all describe the June 12 Whitman-Hanson Jamboree.

After a disappointing scrimmage in Braintree the previous week, the Skippers saw an improved soccer team with an additional week of practice and conditioning take the field against a trio of sound competition.

The first 30-minute encounter saw Cohasset facing an individually talented group of boys from Brockton, a town with an abundance of athletes.

It was evident from the outset that an offensive attack which could capitalize on Brockton's weak organization could score and that we did early in the first period. Two excellent balls from Chuck Endris, one to Tim Brister and the other to Will Adams gave Cohasset a two goal advantage. Skippers' defense in both periods contained the talented Brockton forwards and a final breakaway by Chuck Endris on a pass from Bill Jordan gave Cohasset a decisive 3-0 advantage.



In the second scrimmage Skippers faced Weymouth's junior varsity team. They provided stiff competition for Cohasset's offense, but again with a solid defense and Chris McKenna in goal the Skippers were able to shutout the boys from Weymouth. Joe Andrade put the Skippers ahead with a sweet shot into the upper left hand corner of the net from 25 yards out late in the first period.

The final game of the day put the Skippers in "center court" against an alleged Division one soccer team, Whitman-Hanson. The boys wasted no time in scoring early in the first half with some excellent mid-field play which resulted in numerous scoring opportunities for the forwards.

A nice through ball from the mid-field and an excellent cross from Chuck Endris gave Joe Andrade two beautiful opportunities to put the ball in the net. Again, strong mid-field play and solid defense with an outstanding save in net by Chris Goodman late in the first half gave the Skippers a 2-0 final result.

All in all a very successful day on the field for the Boys' Varsity under the leadership of new coach Keith Clark.

Following the scrimmage, parents were able to meet the new coach at a tailgate get together.

The Cohasset soccer team and friends relax at the pancake breakfast, sponsored by the soccer boosters. Stay tuned to the Cohasset Mariner for lots of local sports news this fall. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald)

Positive posse on cable

At 8 p.m., tonight (Sept. 24), host Wigmore Pierson's guests on Pierson to Person are Brockton Police Chief Paul Studenski; Stanley Pollack, executive director of Teen Empowerment; Tina Freimuth, project developer/supervisor of Our Positive Posse; Atty. William Tyler, president of the Boston law firm, Rackemann, Sawyer & Brewster and the eight-member Our Positive Posse, a group of inner city youths from Brockton.

Pierson says the posse's project is to try to turn it neighborhoods around and provide positive role models for other youths.

Viewers can tune in to the discussion from 8 to 9 p.m. on Channels 3 and 53.

DanceVision to perform

DanceVision, a dance company of The Workout Club of Hingham, holds a charity performance at 8 p.m., Friday (Sept. 25) at the Milton High School auditorium. Proceeds benefit the Milton High School SADD chapter. Tickets can be purchased at the door and are $5 for students and $7 for adults.

On April 2 and 3, DanceVision held a benefit performance at Cohasset High School and raised more than $1,400 for the Bell family of Cohasset.

For information about booking DanceVision for charity events please call Donna or Daryl at the Workout Club, 740-4909.

Tag sale, Sept. 26

Tag Sale on the Common. Crafters and Tag Salers welcome! Saturday, Sept. 26, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Cohasset Common.

This year marks the 5th Annual Tag Sale on the Common!

Tag Sale guidelines:

- Sale space fee is for a 6 x 10 area.
- Provide table(s), chair(s), etc. for display.
- Have cash box and change.
- Responsible for cleanup of sale area.

Setup on the Common begins at 7:30 a.m. Food is available at a Community Center concession stand on the Common or by local merchants in the downtown area. Rest rooms will be open in the Community Center building. The Community Center must receive a check in order to reserve a space. For further information, please call the Center at 383-0088.

Groundbreaking day set

Don't miss the community family celebration planned from noon to 3 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 4 (rain or shine) at the Minot Ledge Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island.

The event includes a ground-breaking ceremony with the South Shore Band in honor of the renovations of the assistant lightkeepers residence. When complete, the structure will include two apartments and a community room.

A catered buffet, compliments of Arthur Roebuck and others, is also featured.

Donations are $5 per person on the day. But please call 383-0505 if you plan to attend, so organizers can estimate a head count.

Scouts win awards

The Girls Scout Silver Award recognizes the efforts of the Cadette Girl Scout in a wide range of experiences. The elements of the award are skill building, leadership development, career exploration, self-development, and service.

Sept. 18 called for a celebration. Mary Jeanette Murray, State Rep. and Martha Gjesteby, selectman, congratulated Angela Parisi and Janet Hoyler for achieving the highest Cadette award.

Angela and Janet each gave over 125 service hours to area communities; achieved the Dreams to Reality Patch, Girl Scout Cadette Challenge, Leadership Award, and earned three interest project patches.

Their service project was called "Recyclemania."

Both girls spent many hours researching and planning this council-wide event. Girl Scouts from Cohasset to Belmont participated in this program.

The program consisted of four stations. One on renewable and non-renewable resources; how to make recycled paper; what is recyclable; "let's have a relay race," and best of all make a musical instrument out of recyclable materials.

The girls formed a marching band and played "She'll be coming around the mountain, when she comes."

Band concert, Oct. 4

The final recreation commission band concert of the year will be held Sunday, Oct. 4, at noon, on Government Island, in conjunction with the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Corporation's Open House.

Performing is the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Mr. Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Early release today

Sept. 24 is an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

SCHOOL	BUSES DEPART
Junior/Senior High School	12 p.m.
Deer Hill School	12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the junior/senior high school.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff at the elementary schools and the junior/senior high school to attend an in-service program on cultural norms.

METCO families needed

The Cohasset METCO Program, which welcomes 48 students who reside in Boston to its town and school each year begins its 25th year this fall.

The annual METCO dinner is scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 25, and all METCO families and host families are welcome.

The METCO Committee, a subcommittee of the Cohasset Parent Student Organization, will host family selection during the week of Sept. 28. Host families are needed for students at the Osgood, Deer Hill, as well as the Junior Senior High Schools. Some of the students are new to the program and some are returning.

Cohasset residents wishing to host a student or learn more about the program may call any of the METCO class reps: Grades 1 and 4—Sherry Anderson (0587); grades 3 and 5—Angie Walsh (2151); grades 6, 7 and 8—Susan Pile (6088); grades 9 and 10—Dayle Dickinson (0892) and grades 11 and 12—Joan Kovach (6358). Currently there are no second-grade students.

Cohasset worship

Upward Bound Adult Christian Education is at 9:45 a.m., this Sunday at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave. This week's topic is "Religion's place: church and state" and is led by Gloria Bamford and Ron Krzywonos.

Worship service is 11 a.m. this week only. Church school and nursery care are also at 11 a.m.

Sunday there's an all-church picnic at noon following services. All are welcome.

Regular Sunday church school and nursery classes now include infants-to-eighth graders and meet at 10 a.m. Sunday during the worship service.

For further information, please call the office at 383-0345 or Kim Maynard, C.E. director at 383-2707.

Seventh-to-12th grade parents' meeting is at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 27 at the church to discuss formation of two youth groups. If you have any questions, please call the office at 383-0345 or Ami Argus, youth director at 383-9325.

Members of St. Stephen's parish go on a picnic at Fran Wakeman's, 257 Atlantic Ave., after worship service this Sunday, Sept. 27.

Picnic clothes may be worn to services.

Food will be served at 1 p.m. Please bring blankets, lawn chairs, and sports equipment.

Supper groups called "koinonia," which means community, are forming at St. Stephen's.

The groups are a great way for church members to get to know one another better.

Sullivan wants town funds to repair Gammons culvert

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

The jury is still out on whether the town should pay to repair the Gammons Road culvert — a small bridge on a private way off of Jerusalem Road.

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan, who moved to 21 Gammons Rd. in September, brought the issue before the board several weeks ago after several neighbors told him about the crumbling culvert.

Selectmen Merle S. Brown and Rocco F. Laugelle didn't like the idea of using public money for the repairs.

"I have a slight problem with this," Selectman Merle S. Brown said.

"This is a private way, and there are many private ways in town. Do we pay for their repairs?" he asked.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle agreed with Brown.

"We have many projects and this is not a case of extreme emergency," Laugelle said.

Crossing the culvert is not necessary to using Gammons Road, Laugelle said, because Joy Place also provides access to the road.

Executive Secretary Gregory J. Doyon said the distinction between a public way and a private way is that the town is responsible for the maintenance of a public way and is not responsible for that of a private way.

However, he said, there is a by-law which allows the town to make repairs to private ways.

He said selectmen review requests on a case by case basis.

Doyon said while the danger of the bridge "caving in is not imminent," recent storms exacerbated the damage.

"There was gradual damage done to the bridge, to the granite supporting it. And one side was hit by a car recently and then there was the October storm and Hurricane Bob," Doyon said.

Sullivan, who said his personal involvement limits how strongly he can advocate for public funding of the project, said the crumbling culvert presents a public safety issue.

"Personally, I'm more concerned with the tide and sweeping children out with it," he said.

"I think the board should give strong consideration to paying for this."

He asked that the board appoint an independent third party to determine if the culvert presented a safety problem in its present state.

Civil Designs Inc. provided selectmen with a $5,100 estimate for the engineering costs of the project. Doyon said selectmen are waiting for an estimate on the cost to actually perform the repairs.

Town counsel Richard A. Henderson said the town might be able to avoid part of the $5,100 engineering costs — most of which would go toward permiting fees.

Henderson also noted that a vote by town meeting would be needed to appropriate the money for the repairs.

Sullivan said if the town does not appropriate the money, and the residents of Gammons Road do not pay for the repairs, there is a third option.

"There is another option. We could potentially have to close it," he said.

Candidates turn up the volume . . .

Democrat Brian McDonald to a debate while McDonald blistered Hedlund for what he perceived as the "miserable failure" of his sticker campaign for votes on the Democratic primary ballot.

Barbara Bush, whose husband, George, just happens to be running for reelection as President, was due in town at 1:30 p.m. yesterday after the Cohasset Mariner went to press to deliver a brief talk on volunteerism to an invitation-only crowd in the hospital dining room.

She was named a life member of the Friends of South Shore Hospital; honor the hospital's oldest and youngest volunteers; and toured the patient care sections of the hospital.

"We are pleased that Mrs. Bush's schedule permits her to visit South Shore Hospital to show her support for the nation's health care professionals and the thousands of hospital volunteers who assist them," said hospital president David T. Hannan.

The hospital, which has been involved in a controversy with Weymouth over its tax-exempt status, has been a magnet for official visitors from Washington lately. Studds and Cong. Henry Waxman of California recently toured the wards.

Meanwhile, Studds noted that his landslide victory over Harold, the state senator from Quincy, gave him the largest total vote (57,652) of any candidate in a Democratic primary last week, according to the Washington newsletter Hotline..

Studds lost only six of the 41 communities in the 10th Congressional District — Quincy, Weymouth, Brockton, Abington, Avon and Holbrook — all of them new to the revamped district. Quincy, Avon and Holbrook were in Harold's old senatorial district.

Studds' office gleefully pointed out that their candidate carried 86% of the vote on the Cape and well over 90% of the vote on Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket. The tally in Chilmark on the Vineyard was 251 to 2.

On the eve of the voting, Studds, who campaigned on the theme that, if elected, he would become chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee with a finger in the expensive Boston Harbor cleanup, became acting chairman on the death of Cong. Walter Jones of North Carolina.

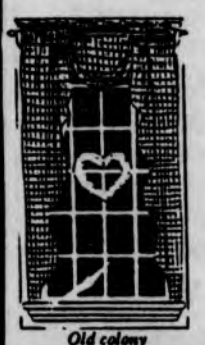
The 10-term congressman from Cohasset now faces Dan Daly of Hingham — winner of the GOP primary over Michael Crossen of Mashpee and Robert King of Plymouth — and Jon Bryan of Barnstable, a Republican turned independent; and the Independent Voters Party's Michael Umina of Mashpee, in November.

Hedlund's last minute sticker campaign for Democratic votes, backed by Weymouth Selectmen William Barry and Donald Hunt, was good for 97 sticker votes and 36 write-ins in Weymouth.

McDonald said the result of the campaign was an "embarrassment," to Hedlund, particularly after Selectman Joseph Piper withdrew his support, saying he was not aware that he was endorsing a sticker campaign.

"Some who signed the letter claimed not to have signed it," McDonald said. "It outraged the town clerks and it confused and angered many voters, all to achieve an astonishingly low rate of return."

Hedlund, who was unopposed in the Republican primary, kicked off the second half of the fall campaign by challenging McDonald to a debate. He said he issued the challenge before but it was not taken up.



"As recently as last month and also during my campaign two years ago," he said, "I offered my opponents an opportunity to debate me on any topic, anywhere, in front of any group and under any circumstances.

Legal snafu looms over Doane St. bridge

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Although no bid has yet been awarded, owners of a Belmont-based construction company have filed an appeal with the state over the Doane Street project.

It is not clear whether possible legal entanglements could sidetrack the bridge repairs which must meet a March 15 construction window issued by the conservation commission.

Reached by telephone Tasco Construction, Inc. co-owner Gary Tashjian said he would not take 'no' for an answer. Tasco Construction submitted the second lowest bid for the project.

"I'm going all the way with this," said Tashjian.

Under state procurement laws, the town is required to accept the lowest bid that complies with the contract specifications.

But because of an irregularity in the filing procedure, Tasco Construction is crying foul about the prospect of losing the job to the lower bidder.

Tasco's bid of $157,110 is nearly $30,000 more than the $129,561 bid submitted by J. D'Amico, Inc.

But J. D'Amico, Inc. submitted improper contractor prequalification certificate forms and not the specific prequalification approval forms required for this project when obtaining the contract proposal, town officials said.

Tashjian says the town cannot accept the low bidder — J. D'Amico, Inc. — because it didn't follow the rules.

New pistols give Cohasset police more fire power

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

The Sig Sauer .40 caliber semi-automatic pistol is so new only one police department in the country has them — Cohasset's.

Sgt. Richard B. Abbadessa said the "cutting-edge" in firing arms arrived Sept. 16, and transitional training for members of the department is on-going.

Abbadessa said the police decided to purchase the Sig Sauer semi-automatic pistols after comparing the firing power of several different brands.

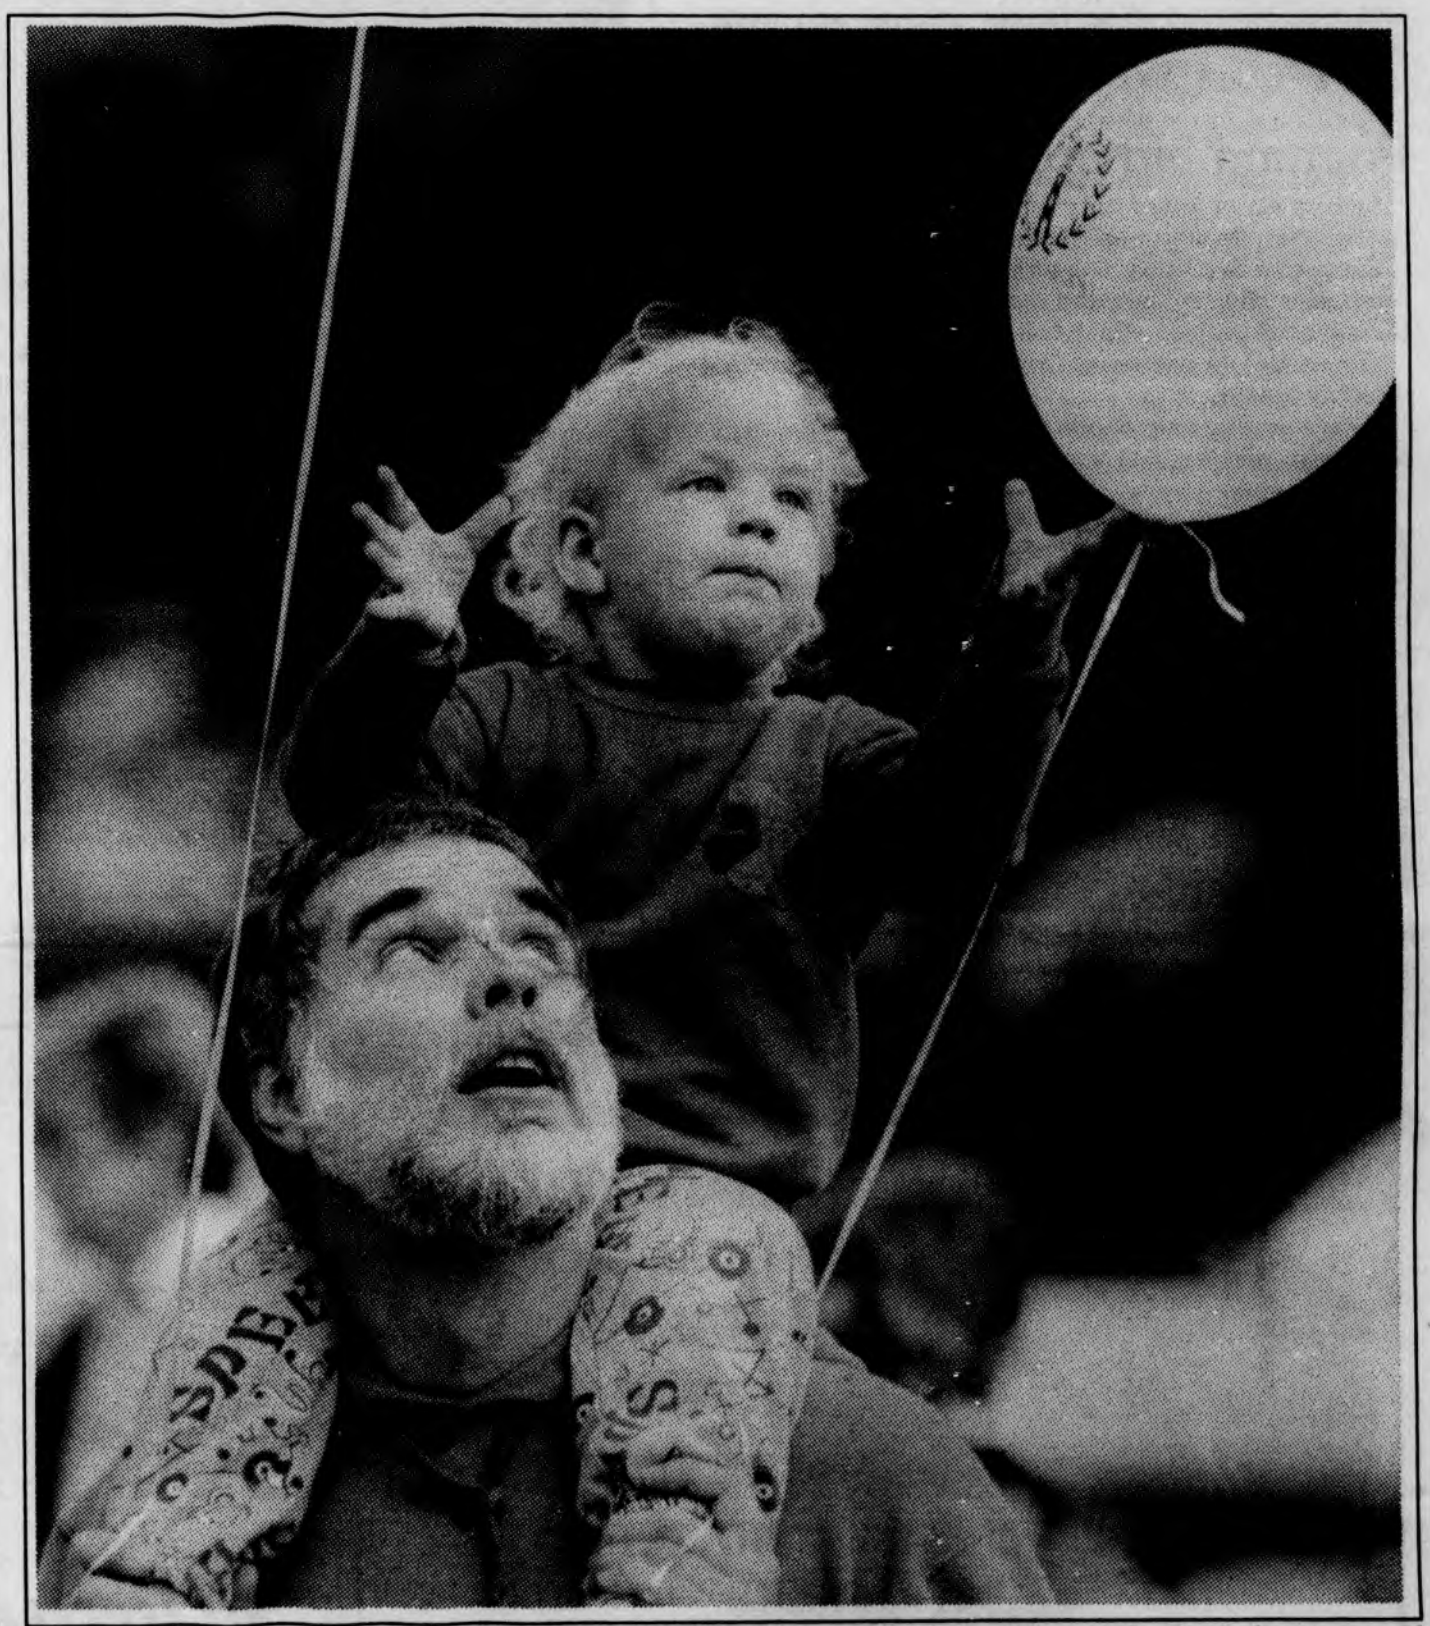
"A group of six (police officers) tried other semi-automatic weapons," he explained.

"We found this to be the best," Abbadessa said.

The town now joins the ranks of other area towns by switching from revolvers to semi-automatic pistols.

"Most police departments are going semi-automatic like Hingham and Weymouth," Abbadessa said.

"About two-thirds have already switched over," he added.



The Sig Sauer can fire twice as many rounds as the department's former revolvers.

"The semi-automatics are clip-fed and holds thirteen rounds (shots)," Abbadessa explained.

"The revolvers hold six shots, and then have to be reloaded," he said.

He also noted that a semi-automatic pistol is quicker

Town may take a hard line with graffiti vandals

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Signals have been sent from Beacon Rock for a century or two.

But the more recent variety has town officials poised for action.

Graffiti — much of it the four-letter word kind — mars one of Cohasset's historic places.

"Beacon Rock, a monument in town, is besmirched very badly and it's not the first time," said John Hartshorne of president of the Gulf Association.

Beacon Rock, which is behind the Lightkeepers residence on Government Island, ascends about 80-ft.

At its pinnacle once stood a triangular structure which was used to send signals by semaphore to the lightkeepers at Minot's Ledge Lighthouse.

Joseph McElroy, who is president of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation — the group coordinating the renovation of the lightkeeper's residence on the island — asked that the rocks could be cleaned up in time for Sunday's ground breaking ceremony at the site.

After hearing from Hartshorne and McElroy, selectmen could decide to make future graffiti vandals pay.

The board asked town counsel to see if the town can increase the penalty (now at $200) for defacing public

Developer withdraws variance request

For the time being, abutters to the old Curtis Estate can breathe a sigh of relief.

Jerusalem Rd. Ltd. Partnership, owners of the property, will not build a seven-foot wall along Jerusalem and Black Rock Roads after all.

Acting on behalf of the developer, the attorney for the Jerusalem Road Ltd. Partnership asked the zoning board of appeals for permission to withdraw without prejudice the owner's application for a variance to build a wall in excess of five feet.

Plans were to back fill the wall so it could house a septic system for the house at 15 Black Rock Road.

Board members hearing the case, chairman Myrna Putziger, Barbara Power and Anson Whealler voted unanimously to grant the request Monday.

Reached by telephone Attorney Lawrence Kellem, representing the developer, declined to comment on the matter.

Putziger explained a request to withdraw an appli-

Cohasset's week

Register to vote

The board of registrars of voters is in session at town hall from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 3 and from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 6 to register voters for the state election Nov. 3.

A special town meeting is Nov. 16. The last day to register for the meeting is from noon to 8 p.m., Nov. 6.

Ahearn is appointed

Selectmen appointed Austin Ahearn to the Council on Aging Monday.

"I was asked by one of the (COA) board members to apply for this to balance out the board," Ahearn told selectmen.

"I guess I'm considered an old-timer and they need someone on the board to fill that. I'm a senior citizen and I understand them (senior citizens) and their problems.

"I'll work hard," he said.

Painting bid approved

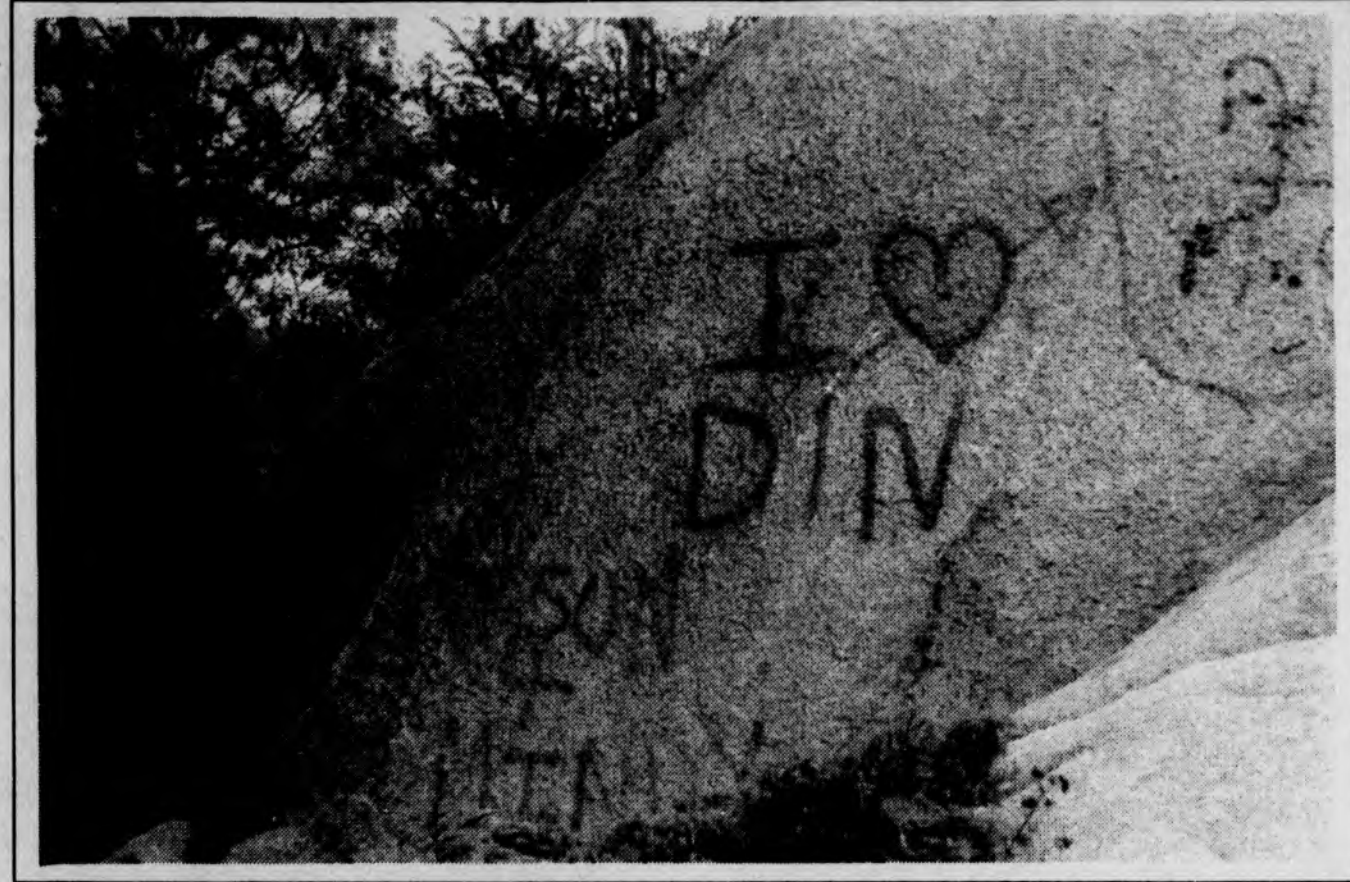
Selectmen awarded the town hall repainting project to Paul Gentile who was the low bidder at $11,985.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said Gentile's references checked out and his bid met the specifications for the project, which will begin in about a week.

The entire 'old' section of town hall will be repainted, selectmen said.

Voters appropriate funds for the project at the annual town meeting last spring.

Air conditioner quieted



Thanks to some new shrubbery, the air conditioning unit which is outside the town hall won't be bothering its neighbors.

Selectmen approved payment of $456 to Kress Nurseries Inc. for six arboreta which have been planted around the air conditioning unit.

The money comes out of the town hall's gift account, which contains funds donated by various parties over the years to improve the town hall common area, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

Doyon said he has already received calls from neighbors saying the plantings helped reduce the noise.

He said the shrubs also make the area "look better."

Flu clinics at town hall

Selectmen gave the go ahead to the Social Service League to conduct flu clinics from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., Oct. 24 and 31 at town hall.

Accountant gets $35K

J. Michael Buckley, Jr., the new town accountant, will get a starting salary of $35,000. As an incentive, he will also receive an additional payment of $1,000 once he earns his state accounting certificate, selectmen said.

In the three-year contract, Buckley receives an increase of one-to-four percent each year. Increases will be figured on Buckley's base pay not including the $1,000 incentive, selectmen said.

Buckley, a Pembroke resident, starts Oct. 19.

Buckley was chosen for the job from a field of about 90 applicants.

The was the second go-round for selectmen. In June, the board could not agree to hire any of the finalists interviewed because the applicants lacked municipal experience. At that time 86 people applied for the position and the board interviewed four finalists.

He replaces the former town accountant Mary Gallagher, who left in March to accept a position in Scituate. In the interim, selectmen hired Donald Jensen as a temporary town accountant at the rate of $35 per hour to close out the books for FY'92

Buckley is the town accountant in Westport and former assistant town accountant for Hingham.

Legal snafu looms over Doane St. bridge fixup

"He is not an official bidder and that is all there is to it," he said.

Tashjian said the town's action could jeopardize state funding for the job and may require the town to pay both companies.

"They'll be paying for the job twice and may even lose funding for the work," he said.

Recent state assurance of payment for Doane Street bridge repairs ended a 10-year battle by abutters to get the bridge fixed.

Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson said if it was determined the town acted in bad faith, the town could be required to pay the protesting contractor his profit margin for the job.

Although anxious to get the project underway, selectmen postponed awarding the bid Monday until they had a chance to review Henderson's four-page written opinion on the matter.

In summarizing, Henderson said it was his view that the town could waive the requirement of obtaining the state forms because the contractor in question has prequalified with the state.

"But you might want to wait a week until the (Dept. of Labor and Industries) sets a hearing date," he said referring to Tasco's filing an appeal.

As another option, Henderson said, the board could reject all bids that exceed the contract estimate for the job. The state has authorized about $152,000 for the repairs.

Tashjian's brother and partner Jerry Tashjian told selectmen Monday that J. D'Amico didn't "go through the right channels."

"There is no way he should be legal to get the job," he said.

There was also an irregularity with Tasco's bid which arrived in a partially unsealed envelope and the bid security was not attached in a separate envelope to the outside of the proposal envelope as instructed.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said the envelope was "barely stuck by a corner."

Although no member of Tasco Construction was present at the bid opening, Jerry Tashjian addressed the envelope issue at Monday's selectmen's meeting.

"It was received and stamped (by the selectmen's office) — it's in the ball game," he said.

Selectmen Rocco F. Laugelle and Merle S. Brown at first supported awarding the bid to J. D'Amico.

But Selectman Michael H. Sullivan warned that might backfire.

"I agree these are nitpicking issues but it puts (the town) in a vulnerable position," he said.

Henderson said there was clearly "a procedural irregularity" with J. D'Amico's filing but felt the town would "ultimately prevail" if they awarded the contract.

Other bidders for the project were: Sylvester A. Ray, Inc. $159,967; and N. Cibotti, Inc., $183,547. The bids were opened at noon, Sept. 16.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE
Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

ON INCLUDING EXTRAS

QUESTION: When selling a home, is it a good idea to leave a lot of personal items for the new buyer as frosting on the cake or do you advise selling personal items that you really don't need?

ANSWER: Frost the cake! It's a good idea to include as many extras as possible. Draperies that you won't need, shelving, porch furniture that you won't have use for, or maybe that extra lawn mower are some examples. Make sure the agreement spells out what goes and what does not. Whatever you do — do not try to sell such items to the buyer. The sale of a home is a big enough negotiation without muddying the water.

No action on Gammons Rd. culvert repair

Permit fees could drive the cost of repairing the Gammons Road culvert up fourfold, selectmen say.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said he obtained a quote from an area contractor for $1,500 to repair the culvert.

But engineering permitting could cost upwards of $5,000, he said.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle suggested the residents of Rice Island join forces to get the job done and leave the town out of the picture.

Gammons Road is a private way onto Rice Island, a peninsula jutting into Little Harbor.

"It would be much more simple (for them) to do the job than for what the town has to go through," Laugelle said. He was also concerned that fixing the culvert would set a precedent for other private ways.

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan said the road was used extensively by the people in town. A resident of Gammons Road, Sullivan noted he would have "no problem" paying his share of the allocation if the area residents had to pay for the repairs themselves.

But Sullivan objected to the suggestion on philosophical grounds.

"From a philosophical, practical standpoint, it (private way) is used my many people in town and it's not benefitting anyone privately," he said.

The board decided to table taking any action on the matter until they have more information about the fees involved and if any of them can be avoided.

For example, Sullivan says the repairs would all take place above the water line so he questioned the necessity for a waterways license.

Developer withdraws variance request

cation requires an affirmative vote of the board.

It may behoove an applicant to avoid a denial.

"This (request for withdrawl) is often the case when an applicant anticipates the board may not be disposed to approve the application — not to get a denial," she said.

By law, there is a two-year waiting period before an application can be filed again after a denial unless there is a "material difference" in the applications, Putziger explained.

The law is designed to prevent repetitive applications for the same relief, she said.

For example, if the board denied an application for a variance for seven-foot wall, the applicant would not be allowed to reapply for a 6-1/2 foot wall within the two-year time frame, she said.

Abutters were opposed to the proposed wall which, they said, would be a safety hazard and an eye sore.

cohasset's week

Special Town Meeting

The date for the Special Town Meeting is Nov. 16.

The warrant opens on Oct. 5 and will close Oct. 13. Selectmen will vote to accept the articles submitted for the warrant on Oct 19.

Fire Chief attends seminar

Fire Chief John Nadeau will attend a symposium sponsored by the Society of Executive Fire Officers in Bakersfield, CA Oct. 24 - 28.

Because selectmen have stipulated the town will not pay for professional development seminars outside the state, Nadeau will pay his own expenses for the trip.

The symposium will focus on leadership and business practices, marketing and fire service specific challenges.

Engineering bill tabled

Selectmen tabled action on payment of a $1,987.50 engineering bill from Civil Designs Inc. for storm repair and some work on the Gammons Road site until they get some clarification.

Selectman Merle S. Brown said the board had decided only to allow $500 for engineering studies on the Gammons Road culvert not $900. He said the previous bill was for $600 work at the site and the current bill adds $300 to that.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said he would look into the matter.

Gammons Road is a private way.

Town to crack down on graffiti vandals . . .

places.

"It seems to me the penalty should be what it costs to put it back the way it was before," Selectmen Chairman Jane O. Geodecke said.

Border Street resident Roger Porter, who lives across from Beacon Rock, paid $500 last year to have the graffiti removed because it was an eyesore.

"The first time paint was erased back to the Vietnam War and it took most of the day," he explained. "This paint is fairly fresh and should come off easier."

Porter explained that the cleaning company used a paint stripper and steam to remove the paint.

Because the graffiti is relatively new, Porter estimated the town could have both Beacon Rock and the ledge at the mouth of the Gulf River cleaned for about $500.

'We ask that you heighten awareness of graffiti as a public offense with a consequence. It's not a game, it's a shame and it is very expensive to correct.'

— John Hartshorne, president of the Gulf Association

But selectmen said financial logistics would prohibit freeing the money up in time for Sunday's celebration at Government Island.

However, the board voted unanimously to ask for a transfer from the town's reserve fun of $500 — which must be approved by the advisory board.

Goedecke cautioned that the town cannot afford to continually clean up the rocks.

But the board hopes that with the increased use of Government Island, vandals will abandon Beacon Rock.

Hartshorne said graffiti hurts the town.

"We ask that you heighten awareness of graffiti as a public offense with consequences," he said. "It's not a game, it's a shame and it is very expensive to correct."

Groundbreaking day set

Don't miss the community family celebration planned from noon to 3 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 4 (rain or shine) at the Minot Ledge Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island.

The event includes a ground-breaking ceremony with the South Shore Band in honor of the renovations of the assistant lightkeepers residence. When complete, the structure will include two apartments and a community room.

A catered buffet, compliments of Arthur Roebuck and others, is also featured.

Donations are $5 per person on the day. But please call 383-0505 if you plan to attend, so organizers can estimate a head count.

How Beacon Rock got its name

At the pinnacle of Beacon Rock — which climbs 80 feet above Government Island — once stood a signal tower shaped like a pyramid, says David Wadsworth, senior curator with the Cohasset Historical Society.

The structure stood about 10 feet high and probably held moveable arms or flags, which could be maneuvered from the ground. The arms or flags were used to signal by semaphore to the lightkeepers on duty at the Minot's Ledge Lighthouse.

Semaphore is a communication system in which arms or flags are placed in different positions to signify letters and to spell out words.

An instruction book on semaphore was recently found in the lightkeeper's residence during renovations to the structure.

Wadsworth explained that the rock apparently was named "Beacon" because of its ability to signal to the lightkeepers in the days before the telephone.

He said the shallow cuts in the rock where the legs of the tower structure once stood are still visible.

There also used to be a small observation glass structure on Beacon Rock where one could get out of the rain and still observe the lighthouse, he said.

Wadsworth said the tower remained on the rock well into this century.

Local residents can get a look at the top of Beacon Rock Sunday during the ground breaking ceremony for the Cohasset Lightkeeper's residence renovations. Boy Scouts will lead tours up the rock, organizers say.

❑ We knew he would do it! A standing ovation for Stephen Pozatek, son of Zig and Ellie Pozatek. He is a member of the 1992 Middlebury College varsity men's tennis team. Steve is a sophomore and a returning letterman.

Last year, he and his partner, John Hosbein, advanced to the finals in No. 1 doubles at the NESCAC championships. Stephen is expected to be a valuable asset to the 1992 Panther squad. Middlebury, ranked ninth in the Northeast last year by the ITCA, had its season opener in the Great Dane tournament Sept. 19 at the University of Albany.

❑ Be sure to set aside Sunday, Oct. 4, for a community family celebration! That's the day of the Groundbreaking Ceremony at the Minot Ledge Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island and Cohasset community service organizations, town officials and South Shore Regional Vocational School will all participate.

Simon Payne was recently named dormitory prefect at the McCallie School.

David Crossland will sing "Minots Light" and other ballads, there will be tours, and a catered buffet, compliments of Arthur Roebuck and others. Donation will be $5 per person (at-site) and they would like a head count, so please call 383-0505.

It should be great (it will be held rain or shine) so sign up now!

❑ It certainly is hard to picture the upcoming town meeting without Moderator Bill Weeks at the podium! A fine man, a fair man, a great moderator, and one who knows most of the citizens of Cohasset...those will be hard shoes to fill!

Thanks go to you for 12 years of hard work. You deserve applause and praise for all of your efforts, Bill!

❑ Finally, we are happy to report that Sarah Kirk gets better with each day!

❑ We extend a huge Cohasset welcome to Samantha Cove Liberty this week, who joined us on September 19.

She weighed in at seven lbs. 12 ozs., and you can bet that Mom, Heidi, and Dad, Page, are thrilled! To say nothing of Donald and Sandy Pratt (maternal grandparents) and Franklin P. Liberty (who lives in Park City Utah, but will certainly make a trip to see his beautiful granddaughter we'll bet).

Best wishes to you all!!

❑ Speaking of birthdays, its certain that Charlie Henry had a great 50th this week!! There was a surprise party for him last weekend at Pier 44, undoubtedly a grand time was had by all!

Here's to many more Charlie!

❑ Had a note from Sharon Becker this week, reports that they adore Florida, their town and its people. Sharon is getting right into the swing of things, joining the Garden/Nature Club, and is thrilled to say their planting season is just beginning. How nice!!

❑ It seems as though politics will continue in the Murray family...little Jennifer Curley, granddaughter of Mary Jeannette Murray and daughter of Jim and Lillian Curley, met First Lady Barbara Bush when she was in Hingham last week. There was even picture-taking there!

Jim, Jennifer and Mary Jeannette all had a great time!

❑ Simon Payne, a senior boarding student at the McCallie School in Chattanooga, Tenn., has been named a dormitory prefect for the 1992-1993 school year. Prefects assist faculty members in the dormitories and help other boarders during the school year. Selection as a prefect is a high honor that reflects the confidence placed in a student by McCallie's faculty.

Simon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony John Payne and is a manager for the school's baseball team.

Deputy Secretary of State James W. Igoe honors Nick Terry of Cohasset for his outstanding service as a volunteer State House Tour Guide.

❑ Ellery Clark is just back from Atlanta, where he has been guest of the 1996 Atlanta Olympic Committee which has been celebrating the forthcoming centennial Olympiad of the modern games.

Ellery Clark Sr., a double-winner at the 1986 games, is being honored by a special Georgia Railroad exhibit of his memorabilia from those games, to be shown to Georgian school children this month.

President Bush spoke at the opening ceremonials, where the 1992 Olympic Flag from Barcelona was hoisted at the new Atlanta Dome. The railroad showed the Olympic Memorabilia, again raised the Olympic flag as Atlanta vigorously began opening preparations for readiness for the 1996 summer Olympics.

Ellery Clark, Jr. is hoping to carry the Olympic Torch at that Time, wouldn't that be great!!

❑ Deputy Secretary of State James W. Igoe honored Cohasset's own Nick Terry for outstanding service as a volunteer State House Tour Guide. Citations of recognition were awarded to high school students who participated in the Junior Guide Program at a State House reception recently.

❑ News from the Beechwood Congregational Church this week. They are celebrating 125th Anniversary of Services during the month of October. They will also be holding their annual Harvest Supper Oct. 7. If you want reserved seats call 383-0808, the tickets are $3 for children and $5 for adults.

Priscilla Thompson

Priscilla E. Thompson, 89, of Cohasset, a retired practical nurse, died Sept. 26 at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home after a long illness.

Miss Thompson was a practical nurse for many years and worked for L.Q. White, Cohasset Hardware and the Rust family until her retirement.

She was born in Brockton and lived in Cohasset Housing for the Elderly before moving to the nursing home. She lived 60 years in Cohasset.

Miss Thompson was a 1922 graduate of Brockton High School.

She leaves a nephew, Ralph Basset of East Weymouth; four nieces, Barbara Ross of Warwick, R.I., Jane Larson of Saginaw, Mich., Hazel Keith of San Diego, Calif., and Helen McCarthy of Oldsman, Fla.

A memorial service will be conducted at 11 a.m. Oct. 2, at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., by the Rev. Cliff Cutler of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church of Cohasset.

Donations may be made to a charity.

Theresa Williams

Theresa L. (Brown) Williams, 82, of Cohasset, a former employee of the Williams Brothers Trucking and Landscaping Co., died Sept. 26 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, after a short illness.

Mrs. Williams was born in Cambridge and attended Cambridge schools. She lived in Cohasset 50 years.

Wife of the late Frank H. Williams, she leaves a son, Frank H. Williams II of Cohasset; two daughters, Diane Williams Poole of South Dartmouth and Beverly Sinatra of Swampscott; a sister, June Carroll of Idaho; five grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren.

A funeral service was conducted Sept. 30 in the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., by the Rev. Gary Ritts of the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Burke/Lahive

Mr. and Mrs. David Lahive

At a June 27 wedding at St. Paul's Church in Hingham, Lynne E. Burke, daughter of Francis and Joan Burke of Hingham, became the bride of David J. Lahive.

He is the son of David and Janet Lahive of Cohasset.

The Rev. John Reardon officiated the double-ring ceremony. A garden reception followed at the Burkes' Hingham home.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by Usa Dillon of Hingham as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Nicole Fortado of Plymouth and the bride's sisters Kathy Burke of Hingham, Mary Roth of Norwell, Anne Burke of Cambridge, Joan Burke of Cambridge, Tina Burke of Nantucket, Denise Burke of Hingham.

The groom's brother, Mark Lahive of Washington, D.C. served as best man. Ushers were Mike Malloy of Biddeford, Maine, Richard Yost of Saco, Maine, Jay Forte of Orono, Maine, Steve Holman of Arlington, Massachusetts, Mike Andrews of California, Paul Horgan of Pennsylvania, and the groom's brother Mike Burke of Hingham.

The flower girls were Alix Howie and Christina Roth. Ring bearers were Christopher Riley and Matthew Riley.

The bride is a graduate of Hingham High School and holds a bachelor of arts degree in history from Merrimack College. She is employed as a social studies teacher at Matignon High School in Cambridge.

The groom is a graduate of Cohasset High School and holds a bachelor of arts degree in public management from the University of Maine in Orono. He is employed as a commercial loan officer at Framingham Savings Bank in Framingham.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside in Hingham.

Red Tape

One of the questions on the Nov. 3 ballot asks voters to approve an initiative petition for a law which would promote packaging reduction and recycling.

Although the idea to reduce waste, to reuse and to recycle is commendable — and certainly is the right thing to do — this proposal, if enacted, would create an incredible amount of red tape.

Worse, it could cost jobs — and businesses — in a state that has suffered a lot in this recession.

Furthermore, if enacted, the proposal would add costs to the various products which would have to be borne by the consumer.

A political action group, the No on 3 Committee, points out the proposed law would require packages to be made of recycled materials in increasing percentages — 25 percent by July 1, 1996, 35 percent by 1999 and 50 percent by 2002.

Packages would have to be shrunk in size by at least 25 percent every five years, or they must be reused for the same purpose at least five times.

There would be some exemptions to this proposal, such as the wrapping for tamper-resistant seals or packaging as specified by the federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act or the portion of packaging, like flexible film, which touches food.

And, conditional exemptions could be granted upon review, but increased cost will not be constitute a valid consideration for granting an exemption.

Thirty-four billion dollars worth of products and goods sold and used in Massachusetts would be affected, according to Clayton Environmental Consultants, a research firm.

These would include agricultural, industrial, commercial and consumer products that are stored, displayed, shipped or sold in some form of packaging.

The initiative requiring the use of recycled materials could increase packaging costs by at least 10 percent, but even if the cost increased by just one percent in the cost of the finished product, that would translate to an added production cost of more than $300 million, which would be passed onto the consumers.

The final section of the bill calls for three advisory committees to be established. One would draw up regulations; another would determine the impact of the new law on business and the workforce and would establish an employment training and placement program for those whose jobs have been affected by the proposed law.

The group also would be charged with seeking and attracting new recycling and packaging businesses to the state.

A third committee would seek out recycling markets and establish links among generators and collectors to promote further recycling and reuse, not only in Massachusetts but in the New England region.

Already local communities have begun serious recycling efforts of household waste, and the proposal the South Shore Coalition will present to voters at next spring's annual town meeting would promote further recycling — to the advantage of us all.

And the idea of the state Executive Office of Economic Affairs establishing a committee which would seek out recycling markets and promote the use of recycled products is one component of Question 3 that should be salvaged.

It is also a principal recommendation from the regional solid waste management study which has been adopted by the coalition.

We would do well to take more responsibility for properly disposing of our solid waste — because it is the right thing to do — rather than creating more red tape which would worsen our economic environmental woes.

A Week in the Life

Nine days ago, I left my apartment in New York City on a bus bound for the woods of New Jersey. I really had no idea as to exactly where I was going or what my experience there would be, but I had strong feelings that spending these eight days at camp was something I needed to do. My purpose was to design and implement an art program there for children and their families affected by HIV infection.

I went into this experience with my own thoughts about what it is to have AIDS; much of which was probably similar to the way most non-infected people consider the disease. I had never before known or even met someone dealing with AIDS, and therefore the sense of reality I had in regard to this virus was very detached.

The camp is a project developed by Herbert G. Birch Services which operates its programs out of Queens, New York. The first camp was run in August of 1989 for seven children with AIDS and their families. All of the families came from the South Bronx. The original purpose, which has since been upheld, was to provide respite, recreation, training and support to the children's primary caregivers (biological or foster mothers and siblings) and a camp experience for the children.

I was fortunate enough to be part of a staff consisting of approximately 35 volunteers who came together to make this project happen. We all took a week away from our different lifestyles and separate parts of the country to create an incredibly unique environment for these children and their families. It was like a bubble; by working together we were able to form a microcosm, completely separate and secure from all the discrimination, ignorance and fear about AIDS that exists in our society and that these families are forced to deal with on a day-to-day basis.

It is difficult to fully explain how incredible these eight days have been. The time I spent with the children and with everyone involved has affected my life in so many ways. I found it amazing that a group of people, never having met one another, could come together and achieve such a goal. My contribution was the excitement and love I have for art; what I got back from this experience was immeasurable and came in many forms. A project I did with the group of five to eight year-olds was to make magic wands. The powers that each child's magic wand had depended on the way he or she made it. On the last night of camp there was a talent show and these children each demonstrated his or her magic wand on members of the audience. One by one they came through the 'magic door' and spoke about their wand. One eight year-old boy I remember in particular who is very sick, weighing only 35 pounds, came through the door and whispered, "My wand has the power to make everyone smile." That image is something I will value for the rest of my life.

I now have a perspective that allows me to see this disease as it is. AIDS is real; it is real and it is destroying too many lives. Families are being torn apart as parents bury their children. I can only imagine how difficult it must be to live with AIDS in a society that is afraid of you.

I am now back in the city, nine days later, and I write home to all of you because it is a place to start. That bubble I've been in for the past eight days needs to be enlarged.

Allie Redfield

Allie Redfield graduated from Cohasset High School in 1988 and is currently in her senior year at New York University where she is studying art education.

In addition to the camp experience with HIV positive children she had last summer, Allie also volunteered time for AFS (on orientation for departing students) and with Susan Rodgerson of Cohasset on an Artist's for Humanity project involving a group of Boston's inner city youth.

Note from Cohasset

Morning in late September: gray sky swallowing its dimmed stars;
gulls swoop and whine, casting shadows;
in the east, the foghorns groan:

on a rock, forty birds (perhaps!) in clean, white robes wait for the sun's warm touch;
one airplane in a dazzle of noise drowns out the cacophony of the jays.

Soon, very soon, the cold waters of winter will rush over these mud flats and this marsh, and the neighbor's cat, finally,
will disappear inside his house.

Even the kingfisher seems confused as he perches on the post, contemplating what to do.—

I think of you, gathering your blooms, growing your dark hair long,
and talking incessantly as if nothing were wrong.

letters

(Editor's note: The following letter was sent to Irving Gadow, Cohasset harbormaster).

Dear Irv,

The Commodore has asked me to write you in thanks for your help on the club's behalf this past summer.

Your unending support shown to our staff and therefore to our entire organization is greatly appreciated. Cohasset harbor has never been better organized or better operated than it has been this past season.

We all at The Cohasset Yacht Club look forward to working with you in the future.

Thank you again.

LWV to sponsor candidates' debate Oct. 4

The Scituate, Weymouth and Hingham League of Women Voters will sponsor a debate for candidates for Congressman, state senator and representative from 2 to 4:30 p.m. at Cohasset High School.

The following have been invited:

• 10th Congressional District — Gerry Studds, Democrat; Daniel Daly, Republican; Jon Bryan, unenrolled, and Michael Umina, Independent Voters.

• State senate — Robert Hedlund, Republican, and Brian McDonald, Democrat.

• State representative — Frank Hynes, Democrat, and Ronald Wheatley, Republican.

• Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, a Republican, is unopposed.

Substantial costs could be eliminated if the town's fire alarm boxes were dismantled.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS	Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) 722-1646 Room 416B	Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) 722-2800 ext.7957 Room 134
THE HOUSE AND SENATE—The House and Senate met informally last week and there were no roll call votes. Formal sessions are scheduled to resume this week. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on five previously unrecorded roll calls from House debate on the fiscal 1993 state budget which was signed into law by Governor Weld July 20.
(House) PRIVATE VENDORS (H 5600)—House 93-56, rejected an amendment requiring private vendors who provide more than $40,000 in goods or services to the state to be deemed a state employee for ethics purposes only. Amendment supporters said many of these vendors are abusing the system with excessive salaries and relatives on their payrolls. They argued the amendment will simply hold them accountable. Opponents said these are private companies which should not be subject to the State Ethics Commission. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it).		Y
(House) BREAST CANCER (H 5600)—House 78-74, approved an amendment reducing funding for AIDS prevention and treatment by $5.1 million (from $25.7 million to $20.6 million) and using the $5.1 million to fund breast cancer research. Amendment supporters said this would take some of the increased funding designated for the AIDS epidemic and use it to help research breast cancer which affects thousands of women. Opponents said it is ill-advised and unfair to pit AIDS victims against breast cancer victims. The House later, on a voice vote, approved an amendment reducing AIDs funding by $3.1 million and providing $3 million for early breast cancer detection, mammography access for the uninsured, a public awareness program and research. (A "Yea" vote is for reducing AIDS funding by $5.1 million and for funding breast cancer research with $5.1 million. A "Nay" vote is against reducing AIDS funding by $5.1 million and against funding breast cancer research with $5.1 million).		Y
(House) BUDGET GROWTH (H 5600)—House 118-33, rejected an amendment requiring a two-thirds vote in order for the state budget to increase more than the rate of inflation. Amendment supporters said this will insure fiscal responsibility and prevent excessive spending. Opponents said the amendment will tie the hands of the legislature and eliminate all flexibility. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it).		Y

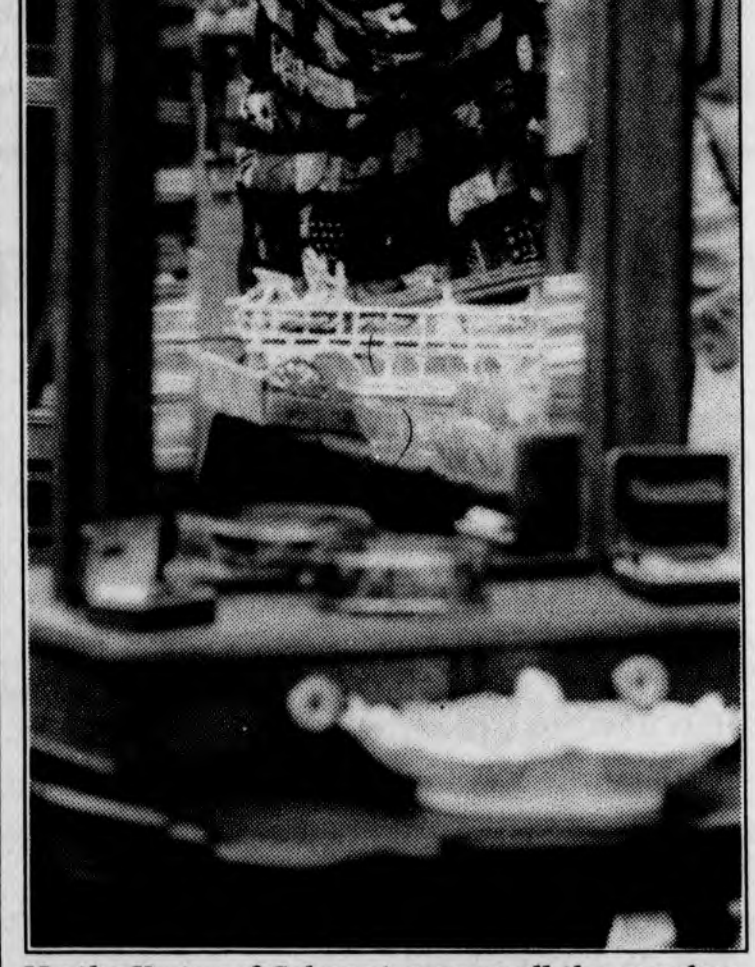
Community Center tag sale is a shopper's delight!



Staff photos/Alan Chapman

Georgine Butman serves up burgers to Brendan Mulcahy at the Second Congregational Church food booth Saturday. Georgine said the booth sold dozens of burgers, hot dogs, and 15 dozen donuts along with too many pots of coffee to count.

Cohasset Historical Society member Eleanor Smith waves to folks at the tag sale from the society's booth which featured old and new items.

Martha Narten of Cohasset peruses all the merchandise available at the fifth annual Tag Sale sponsored by the Community Center.

Left, at the Council on Aging bake sale, Ann Leonard and Libby Pompeo show off a homemade apple pie! Below, Lauren Dooley and Carolyn Pratt display one of the sweatshirts for sale at the Community Center booth.

The fifth annual Tag Sale sponsored by the Cohasset Community Center attracted 35 vendors offering everything from antique treasures, old clothes and postcards to Champion sweatshirts and stenciled tote bags.

The event is an annual fund-raiser for the community center, which charges $25 per table to the vendors.

"We charge for the space but the vendors keep all their proceeds," explains Diane Dooley, Tag Sale coordinator.

Dooley said most folk visiting the sale came before the downpour.

"It was a good all-around flowing crowd," she said "We got four hours in. It rained about 1 o'clock."

Historical tour, Oct. 11

The Cohasset Historical Society holds a tour of historical areas of the town Sunday, Oct. 11. Originally scheduled for Oct. 4, the tour has been rescheduled for the following week.

Subjects of the bus tour will be "Old King Street" and Beechwood, to the junction of Beechwood and Doane Streets, then to the North Scituate mill of Mordecai Lincoln, built in 1695. The ancient Colonial boundary between the Massachusetts Bay Colony and Plymouth Colony passes just a few feet from the early grist mill and is marked at that site.

Historical houses and sites along the "ancient ways" of Beechwood and King Streets will be noted, and there will be an opportunity to visit the Lincoln mill and nearby house of Mordecai Lincoln.

The tour meets at the Society's Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, at 2 p.m. Admission to the tour will be $5 and may be obtained at the time of the tour or beforehand at the Lothrop House.

The Society's telephone is 383—6930.

Newcomers reorganize

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club holds monthly meetings the first Tuesday of each month at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church of Scituate, 381 Country Way, Scituate. Meetings feature guest speakers and selected outings. Club officers for the 1992-93 year are:

President, Carol Skou; 1st Vice President, Sarah Markert; 2nd Vice President, Tanya Stenson; Treasurer, Patricia Mitchell; Corresponding Secretary, Judy Enos, Historian, Jean Muir; Membership-Cohasset, Dolores Rayment; Membership-Scituate, Kathy Dike; Hospitality, Florence Chin and Nancy Stoll; Telephoning, Mary Buckley and Karen Tierney; Newsletter, Anne Sexton, Publicity, Corrine Wagner; and Adult Socials Coordinator, Patty Smith.

The club offers members a variety of social activities ranging from book and bridge groups to moms and tots playgroups and the gourmet dinner group. All new residents of Scituate and Cohasset or residents experiencing a change in life-style are invited to join. For more information please call Carol at 545-3637.

Democrats organize

At the September meeting of Cohasset Democratic Town Committee a Coordinated Campaign Committee was formed to work toward electing Democrats to office on Nov. 3.

This committee will coordinate the local campaigns for Bill Clinton and Al Gore for President, Gerry Studds for Congress, and Brian McDonald for State Senator.

Jamie Langmaid, town coordinator for the Clinton/Gore campaign, will chair this committee which includes Margy Charles, Ron Goodwin, Dan Kearney, Pat Laugelle, Randy Nash and Jim French.

They will be responsible for handling the volunteer effort in Cohasset which will include phonebanking, visibility and literature distribution.

If anyone would like to get involved in this town-wide effort for the Democratic candidates please call Jamie Langmaid at 383-6433.

Furniture restoration

The Cohasset Recreation Department accepts telephone registrations for a furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country workshop, by calling the recreation office at 383-6791.

Sessions are four weeks in duration, meeting on Saturday mornings from 9 to 11:30 a.m., at Cohasset Town Hall basement. The fee for the 10 hour program is $53 per person, and classes are restricted in size to allow for individual attention.

Participants should select a piece of furniture that is relatively portable for class work. A chair or small table is ideal. Participants will not only learn the arts involved in restoration and refinishing, but will also have a completed piece of furniture by the end of the session.

Fifth birthday show

Thursday, Oct. 1, Host Wigmore Pierson's special guests on Pierson to Person will be Gov. William Weld, Senate President William Bulger, House Speaker Charles Flaherty, Sen. Robert Hedlund, State Reps Mary Jeanette Murray, Janet O'Brien, Frank Hynes, and the show's first guest in October 1987, Cohasset Town Moderator William D. Weeks.

Politics, Pierson's bloopers, short tapes of past shows will highlight this 5th anniversary program.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m., from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hingham; on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset.

For further information about upcoming guests and additional show information, call the Pierson Show's Executive Producer, Robert Belliveau at 545-2500.

Band concert, Oct. 4

The final recreation commission band concert of the year will be held Sunday, Oct. 4, at noon, on Government Island, in conjunction with the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Corporation's Open House.

Performing is the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Mr. Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Christmas pageant auditions

Cohasset Dramatic Club holds auditions for Barbara Robinson's hilarious and heartwarming play, "Best Christmas Pageant Ever" at the Cohasset Town Hall Sunday, Oct. 4, from 2 to 5 p.m. (children) and 7 to 9 p.m. (adults), and Monday evening, Oct. 5, from 7 to 9 p.m. (children and adults).

Callbacks, if needed, are Tuesday, Oct. 6, 7 to 9 p.m. To be cast are four men, six women, eight boys and nine girls, plus a chorus of extras.

Men's roles: father, solid family man, 35 to 38; Rev. Hopkins, 40-ish; two firemen any age. Women's roles: mother, 35-ish; four church women 35 to 60; boys' roles: age ranges 8 to 13, girls: ages 5 to 12.

Scripts are available at Paul Pratt Library, Cohasset, for three-day checkout only. Director is Deborah Carleton of Scituate, who is known for her own acting and singing talents as well as directorial skills, especially with children, having successfully directed 250 of them in Wompatuck Elementary School's spring production of "The Wizard of Oz." For further information, call Ms. Carleton at 545-5737.

Performance dates are set for Dec. 4 and 5, 10 to 12, at the Cohasset Town Hall.

CDC play opens

The Cohasset Dramatic Club opens its 72nd season Friday, Oct. 16, with the first of five 8 p.m. performances (repeated the 17, 22, 23, 24) of Frederick Knott's drama-thriller "Wait Until Dark!" at the Cohasset Town Hall Stage.

Dramatists Play Service accurately touts it as "a rousing example of the school of chilling menace that deserves its popular welcome."

Tickets for this now-classic thriller, directed by veteran Bob Champagne, are $8 to the public, and free to CDC patrons. To reserve a ticket or to get info re '92-'93 patronage or active membership (painters and carpenters are always needed), please call 446-6601.

The Thursday, Oct. 22, show proceeds will benefit the South Shore Habitat for Humanity organization.

Fashion fund-raiser set

The opening fall fund-raiser for the Friends of the South Shore Hospital, Inc. presents a Fashion Show & Luncheon, Wednesday, Oct. 7, at the Barker Tavern, Scituate, featuring Appleseeds of Cohasset.

It begins with a "Happy Hour" at 11:30 a.m., followed by the luncheon at noon, and the show at 1 p.m.

Tickets are $18 per person, including tax and gratuities. The menu offers a choice of: grilled chicken or broiled scrod, with vegetable, potato, rolls and butter, tea/coffee, and vanilla ice cream and strawberries.

For reservations, please send a check to the Treasurer: Mrs. George Buttrick, 26 Westmoreland Rd., Hingham, 02043, made payable to: The Friends of the South Shore Hospital, Inc., indicating your entree preference.

Free flu shots

Flu (short for "influenza") is a very contagious infection of the body's respiratory (breathing) system. Symptoms of the flu include fever, muscle aches, headache, stuffy head, runny nose, cough, sore throat, and general weakness. These symptoms range from very mild to very severe, and most people get better within a week.

There are vaccines to prevent flu. Flu viruses change so often that new vaccines must be made each year to prevent this year's flu strains. If you want to protect yourself from the flu, you must get a flu shot every year. Last year's vaccine will not protect you this year.

It is very important that people who are at risk for dangerous flu complications—and people who live or work with them—get a flu shot every year.

Who should get a flu shot?

- People aged 65 or older
- People whose immune systems are weakened (by cancer treatments, organ transplants, or AIDS, for example)
- People with chronic medical problems (such as heart disease, asthma, kidney disease, diabetes, or lung disease).

People who are allergic to eggs should not get a flu shot.

The Social Service League and the Board of Health will be holding their Annual Flu Clinics Saturday, Oct. 24, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., and Saturday, Oct. 31, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Town Hall. The flu shot is free to all Cohasset residents.

For more information call the Social Service League office (Mon. - Fri. 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.) at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Free passes available

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Woolf of Cohasset have generously donated two complimentary passes to the Historic Deerfield Museum Houses in Deerfield where there are 12 handsome 18th and 19th century houses open to the public. Inside are wonderful tall clocks and high chests, silver tankards and bright embroideries, looking glasses and imported Chinese porcelains once used and enjoyed by residents of the Connecticut River Valley.

The passes are available at the library.

Located in the Connecticut River Valley, Deerfield is approximately two hours from Boston, a beautiful drive this time of year.

The museums are open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., except for Thanksgiving, Christmas Eve, and Christmas Day.

Directions to Deerfield which is 90 miles west of Boston: from Rte. 1-91: take Exit 24 northbound (or Exit 25 southbound). Then go six miles north on Rtes. 5 & 10 and turn left onto the village street. Go 1/2 mile to the Hall Tavern, directly across from the Deerfield Inn and the Museum Store, for information, parking and a picnic area.

Fall library hours

to load, more accurate to shoot and has less recoil than revolvers.

Abbadessa, and Patrolman Frederick H. Grassie, attended a two-day seminar at the Sig Sauer factory in Exeter, New Hampshire on how to maintain the pistols.

"We went to the Sig Armorer School for an intensive course," he explained.

"We learned how to assemble and disassemble the weapons and repair minor problems," he said.

The instructor made those attending the class disassemble the guns into 50 separate pieces, Abbadessa remembered.

The pieces were mixed together in a box and the instructor then asked the participants to reassemble their guns.

Although the teacher's expectations and methods were demanding, Abbadessa said, it was worth it.

"It really taught us," he said.

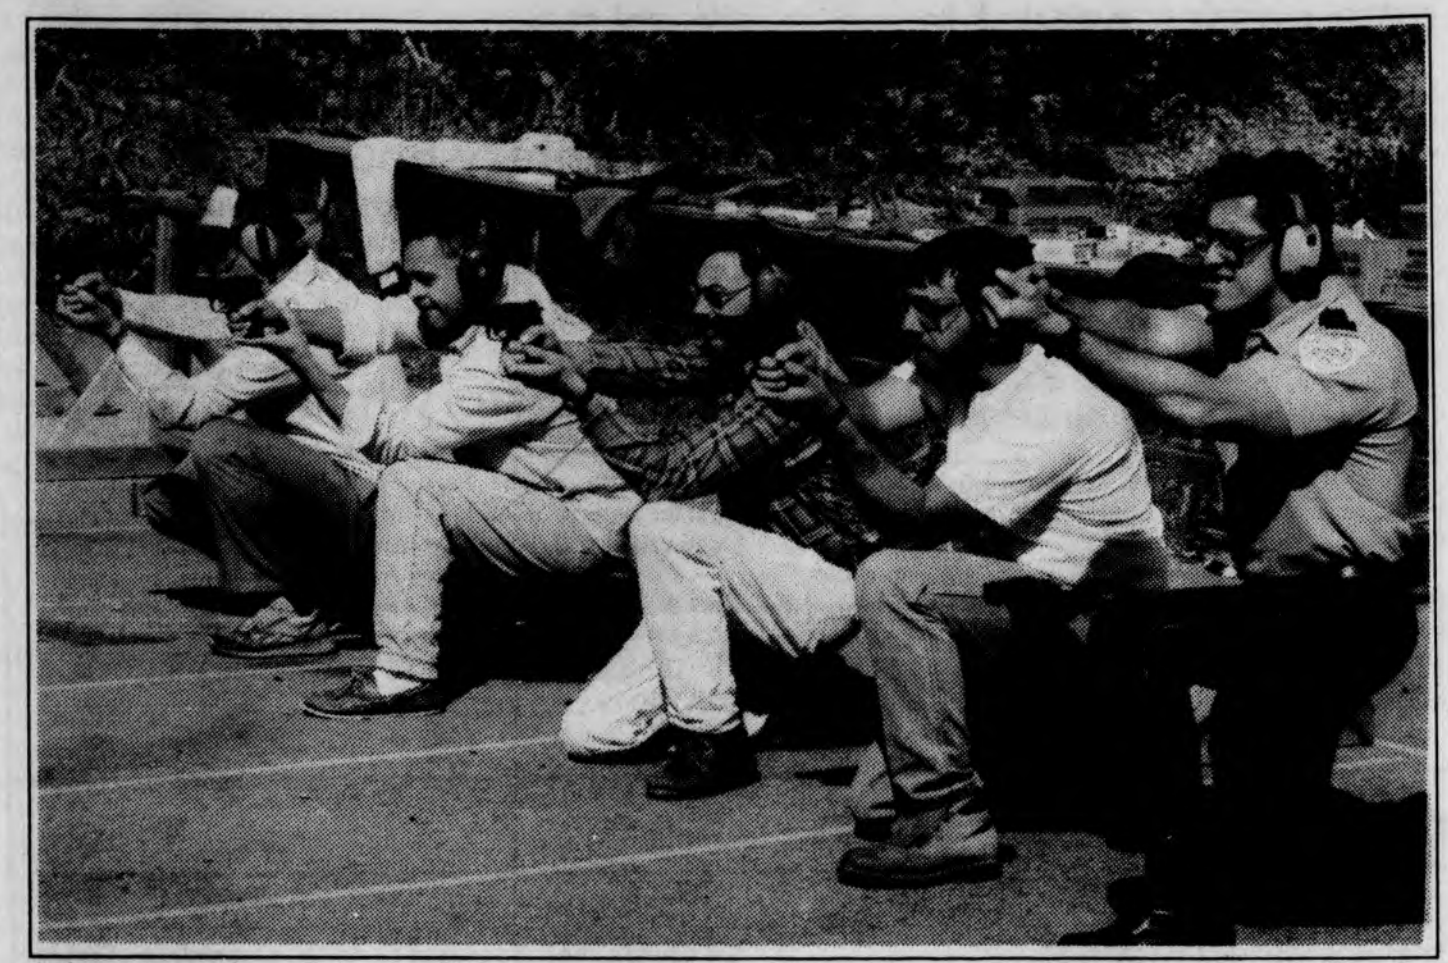
The two, who are both firearm instructors for the town of Cohasset, are passing on their knowledge to other members of the department.

"We are conducting transitional training," Abbadessa said.

The training consists of 16 hours of classroom work and eight hours of range shooting, he explained.

"The officers are being trained on their own time," Abbadessa said.

He added that the aquisition of the guns was marked by volunteer efforts.



He noted that the Scituate Rod and Gun Club donated use of the range to the Cohasset Police for their transitional training.

"They gave us exclusive use of their outdoor gun club, and we owe them a debt of gratitude for that," he said.

Abbadessa added local citizens to the list of people he wants to thank for the guns.

The money to purchase the guns was raised through private donations.

Prior attempts to upgrade the department's weapons were thwarted because there was no money in the budget, Abbadessa said.

Residents donated $14,000 to the police so they could upgrade their weapons.

The department purchased 18 pistols at a cost of $11,000.

The money left over from the purchase of the firearms was used to buy leather accessories, like holsters and magazine pouches which need to be specially fitted to the Sig Sauer, Abbadessa said.

Patrolman Thomas O. Da Silva said the newer weapons also give police a greater sense of confidence in their ability to protect citizens.

"Now we have better guns," he said.

"Before, a guy could shoot 18 rounds at you and you would have to reload three times."

With the new semis, an officer would have to reload just once.

"I hope we never have to use them, but if we do, we know what's there," Da Silva said.

Lady Skippers field hockey off to perfect start

By Paul McAleer
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset High School field hockey team got off to its best start ever, 3-0, including two victories against league rivals.

After an easy 11-0 route of Notre Dame in their opener, the Skippers beat East Bridgewater 1-0 last Wednesday on a goal by Katie Ridge on an assist by co-captain Danielle Shaughnessy.

During the first half, the Skippers were flat, coach Debbie Boswick said, but came back strong in the second half and really got things going.

The big key for this victory had been outstanding defense of Christine McMackin and co-captains Bridgette Corkery and Caryn Murray, Boswick said. Freshman goalie Gina Rosano faced only one shot during the game.

On Friday night the team got its first victory in years against Norwell with a 2-0 score on a pair of goals by Shaughnessy with an assist by Corkery on the first and an assist by freshman Niki Peterson on the second.

Although the Skippers managed only two goals, Coach Boswick said they dominated, putting 20 shots on goal, but the Norwell goalie was tough.

The team has games coming up on Thursday at Carver and Monday at Scituate.

The junior varsity team and coach Kate Ridge has also gotten off to a great start, going 2-1.

Fast tempo fells squad

The girls soccer team has brought their record to 2-1, after splitting a pair of games between Abington and East Bridgewater.

In a night game on the 21st, they lost at Abington after Abington managed the only goal of the game midway through the first half.

Coach Kennan Startszel said Abington carried the play but the Skippers provided good opposition.

Last Wednesday in their home opener against East Bridgewater, the Skippers managed a 1-0 win on a goal scored with 10 minutes left in the first half by senior co-captain Kathleen O'Brien and an assist by sophomore co-captain Katie Carroll.

The second half was tough for the team as East Bridgewater came out and played a very aggressive and physical game and tried to overpower the Skippers, who rely on slower tempo and a more skilled game, Startszel said.

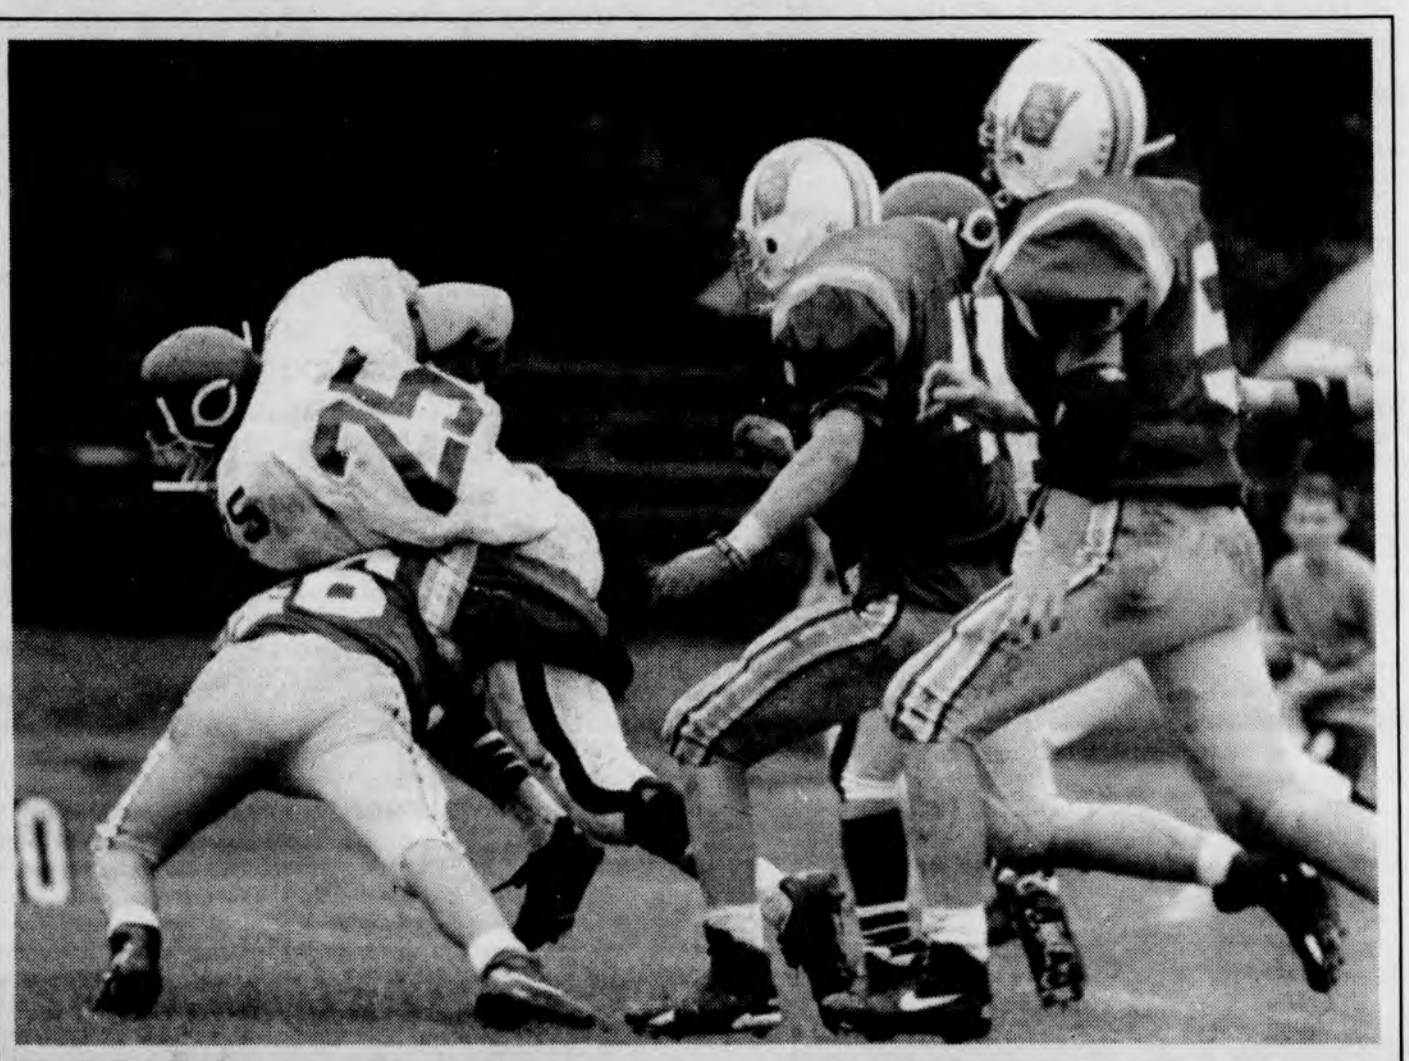
Jones hurt in tough loss

The football team was not only dealt a tough 14-12 loss on Saturday at Norwell but they also suffered the possible loss of star tailback Ray Jones for a game or two.

Offensively, the team came on strong in the first half, capped by Jones' 14 rushes for 155 yards and two touchdowns, but then in the second half, after losing Jones with two seconds left in the first half, things changed, Coach Ted McDermott said.

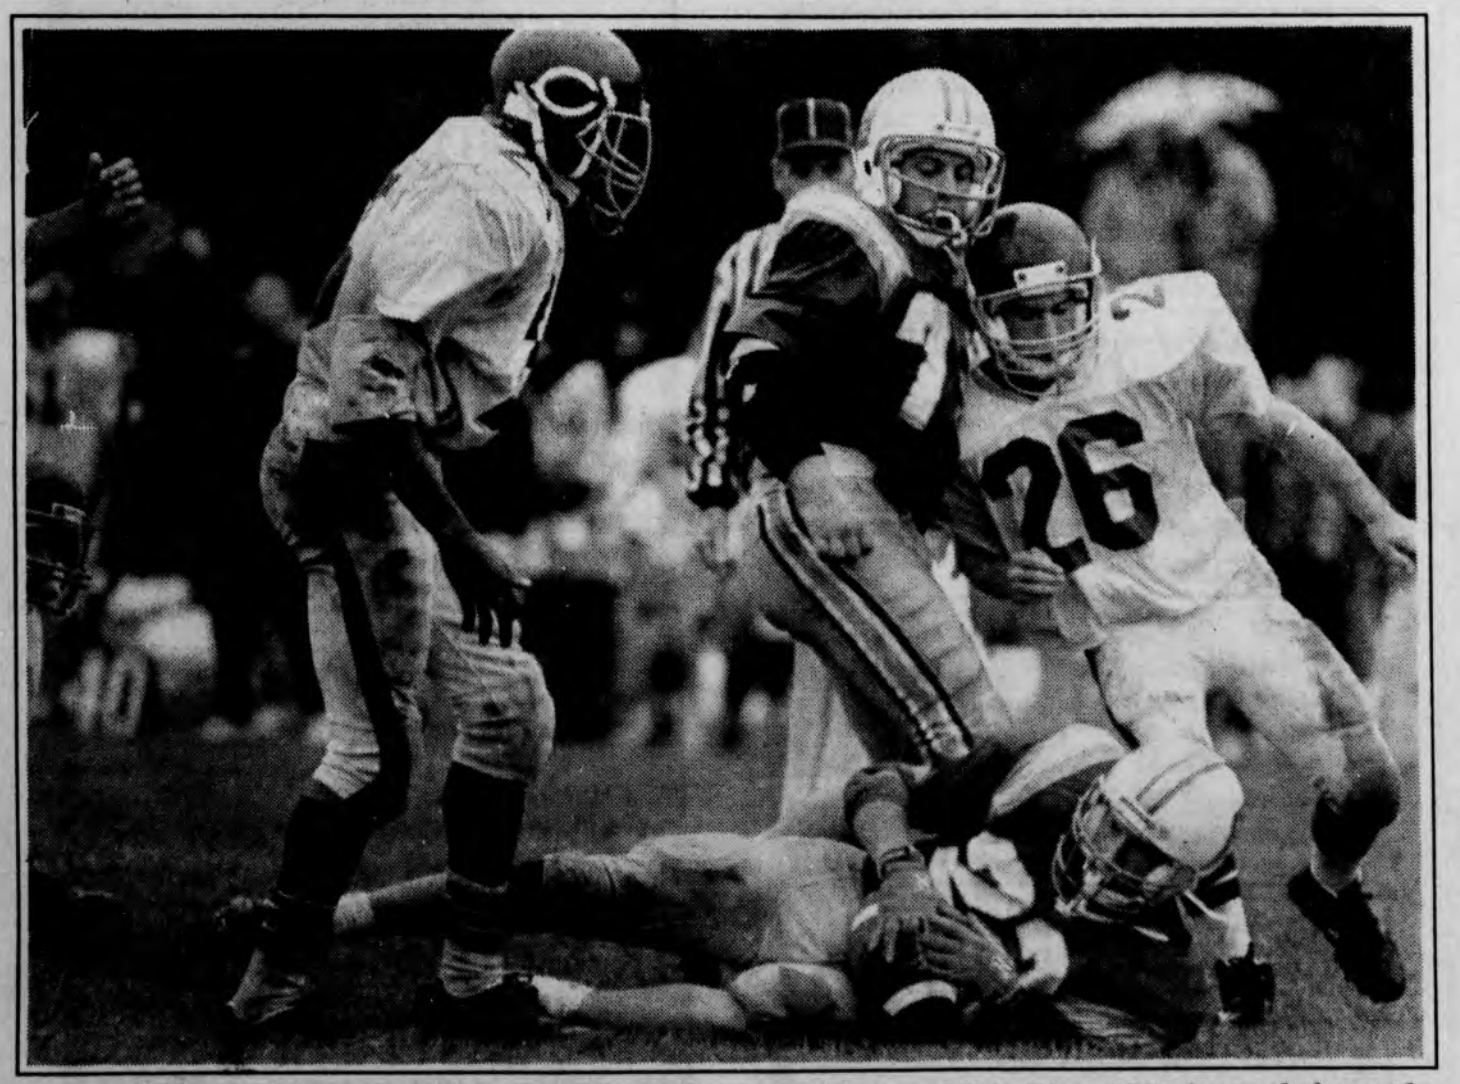
"Basically, the wheels fell off the wagon," he said. "In the second half, I believe we had two first downs."

After watching the films, it appears as though Jones rolled his ankle when he collided with a Norwell receiver and is listed as probable for Friday night's game at Hanover, McDermott said.



"We have seven games left after Friday and if he's not 100%, he will not play," McDermott said.

The defense, in contrast, played much better in the second half than the first.



"In the first half, our defense was on the field much longer than I would have liked and they allowed two time consuming drives, one of which resulted in a touchdown," McDermott said.

"In the second half, give them credit in that they held them till late in the fourth."

The loss of the game, which makes their record 0-2, and the loss of Jones does not appear to have the team down, as they practiced hard on Monday and Tuesday, McDermott said, and they are staying focused and not looking past this Friday's game.

Tailback Ray Jones bulls his way through the Norwell defense. Despite a valiant effort, the Skippers were dealt a tough 12-14 loss by the Clippers Saturday. (Staff photos/Buzz Wadsworth)

Gymnastic classes still have openings

The Cohasset Community Center Gymnastics Program is now in its 14th year. At one time, the gymnastic classes were all recreational, but, with the new addition just a few years ago, the program has grown rapidly. The center has a well-equipped gym with compulsory team levels 4, 5, and 6 and AAU Optionals as well.

The gymnastic staff consists of coaching director Ruthann Sargent, assistant coaching director Patti Donahue, and instructors Karen Clemente, Tifany Zanniboni, and Tara Gallagher.

Registration is now going on. There is still room in the following classes:

MONDAY

Tumble Bugs (age 3) mixed boys and girls - 11:15 a.m. to 12 p.m.; 12 to 12:45 p.m.; 12:45 to 1:30 p.m.

Tumble Tots (age 4-5) mixed - 2 to 3 p.m.

TUESDAY

Tumble Tots (age 4-5) mixed - 1 to 2 p.m.; 2 to 3 p.m.

Boys (age 6-9) - 4 to 5 p.m.

WEDNESDAY

Preschool Boys Tumble Tots (age 4-5) - 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.

Preschool Girls Tumble Tots (age 4-5) - 2:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Beginner Girls (age 6-9) - 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

THURSDAY

Preschool (age 4-5) mixed - 10 to 11 a.m.; 11 a.m. to 12 p.m.; 12 to 1 p.m.

Preschool Girls Tumble Tots (age 4-5) - 1 to 2 p.m.

Tumble Bugs (age 3) - 2 to 2:45 p.m.

Beginner Intermediate Girls (age 9-16) 3 to 4 p.m.

Preschool Boys - 1 to 2 p.m.

Beginner Boys (age 6-8) 2 to 3 p.m.

Beginner Girls (age 6-8) 3 to 4 p.m.

Please call the Community center today to sign up 383-0088.

Little League tryouts

Tryouts for the 1993 Major League Division of the Cohasset Little League are Sunday, Oct. 4, from 1 to 4 p.m. All youngsters whose tenth birthday takes place before Aug. 1, 1993, and who do not have their 13th birthday before that date are eligible to try out. Players already on a major league roster are not required to attend the tryouts.

The tryouts will take place, as follows:

Ten year old – 1 to 2 p.m.; 11 year old – 2 to 3 p.m.; and 12 year old – 3 to 4 p.m.

All players are required to register prior to that date. In the event of cancellation due to inclement weather, the tryouts are Monday, Oct. 12, (Columbus Day) from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

cohasset worship

The Beechwood Congregational Church will be holding its annual Harvest Supper on Wednesday, Oct. 7 at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $6.50 for adults and $3 for children. To make reservations please call 383-0808. A harvest auction will follow.

As part of Beechwood Congregational Church's 125th anniversary celebration, a special Bible Study series will be held Tuesday evening at 7:30. Oct 6 - The Bible as Literature; Oct. 13 - The Bible: Fact/Fiction/Friend or Foe?; Oct. 20 - Anatomy of Faith; and Oct. 27 - The Church in the Secular World.

On Oct. 25, a benefit recital will be held at 4 p.m. in the church sanctuary.

Featured artists from the New England Conservatory in Boston will be: Ellen Brown, soprano; Laurie Szablewski; mezzo-soprano and Sheila Kibbe, pianist. They will perform classical pieces by Bach, Handel, Shubert, Caplet, and American composers. A free-will offering will benefit the Building Fund.

The following activities are planned for the week at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Avenue:

8 p.m., tonight (Oct. 1), new member orientation; 8:15 a.m., Sunday Oct. 4, Upward Bound Adult Christian Educ., continuing Faith and Politics series, "Issue: Family Values and Honesty," led by Eleanor smith and Althea Stamp.

10 a.m., worship service: communion Sunday, new member Sunday; sermon: "Worldwide Issues: Peace and the Environment." Church school and nursery care.

The Second Congregational Church joins with other United Church of Christ congregations to receive the "Neighbors in Need" offering, Sunday, Oct. 4.

This year's gifts will support a variety of national programs in health care, inclusiveness, economic justice, family renewal, as well as American Indian Ministry.

The New North Church, 1 Lincoln Street, Hingham holds its 5th annual Steeple Climb and Apple Festival Saturday, Oct. 17, from noon to 3 p.m.

The bell tower of the historic 186-year-old meetinghouse will be open to area residents who are willing to put up with a little dust to enjoy a commanding view of Hingham Square and autumn color on the surrounding hills.

Eight CHS students named AP scholars

Eight students at Cohasset High School have been named AP Scholars by the College Board in recognition of their exceptional achievement on the college-level Advanced Placement (AP) Examinations. Only about 11 percent of the 388,000 students who took AP Examinations in May, 1992, performed at a sufficiently high level to merit such recognition.

Six students qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning grades of 3 or above on four or more AP Examinations, with an average exam grade of at least 3.25. The students are: John Brister, Cecilia Candia, Jason Hunter, Rebecca Kirk, John Kisiel and Carole Smith.

Two students qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP Examinations with grades of 3 or higher. The AP Scholars are: Kathleen O'Sullivan and James Yess.

AP Examinations, which students take in May after completing challenging college-level courses, are graded on a 5-point scale (5 is the highest). Most of the nation's colleges and universities award credit and/or placement for grades of 3 or higher, and more than 1,300 institutions award a year of credit to students with a sufficient number of qualifying grades. There are 29 AP Examinations in 16 disciplines, each consisting of multiple-choice and free-response (essay or problem-solving) questions.

The College Board is a national, nonprofit membership association of more than 2,800 schools and agencies in higher and secondary education committed to promoting educational opportunity and improving academic standards.

Cohasset/Getxo exchange

Eight Cohasset High School students are participating in a home-stay exchange program with the Julio Caro Baroja Institute in Getxo, Spain.

Sept. 15, the eight Spanish students arrived in Cohasset and were greeted by their host families.

Sixteen other students will be hosted by Scituate High School students and their families. This year Cohasset and Scituate will be participating jointly in the exchange, a venture that proved very successful in last year's French exchange.

Joseph Federico of the Cohasset Foreign Language Department and Emilie Green of Scituate are the coordinators of this year's program.

The Spanish students will attend classes on selected days with their host friends. On other days they will be taking part in a variety of field trips in and around the Boston area.

The purpose of this exchange is to live another's culture and to learn the "foreign language" through immersion. The students will gain a whole new perspective on themselves and their own country.

Cohasset students will visit the Basque region of Spain for two weeks over the February vacation in 1993. They will live in Spanish homes and attend some classes. They hope to visit Madrid for two days as well.

METCO families needed

The Cohasset METCO Program, which welcomes 48 students who reside in Boston to its town and school each year begins its 25th year this fall.

The annual METCO dinner is scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 25, and all METCO families and host families are welcome.

The METCO Committee, a subcommittee of the Cohasset Parent Student Organization, will host family selection during the week of Sept. 28. Host families are needed for students at the Osgood, Deer Hill, as well as the Junior Senior High Schools. Some of the students are new to the program and some are returning.

METCO students commute daily to Cohasset. Host families act as a liaison to the community for the Boston student and their families, and host the elementary students for home visits on stay-days, and whenever else they wish. Stay-days will begin Nov. 5 and will be held the first early release day of each subsequent month for Deer Hill and Osgood students.

Cohasset residents wishing to host a student or learn more about the program may call any of the METCO class reps: Grades 1 and 4—Sherry Anderson (0587); grades 3 and 5—Angie Walsh (2151); grades 6, 7 and 8—Susan Pile (6088); grades 9 and 10—Dayle Dickinson (0892) and grades 11 and 12—Joan Kovach (6358). Currently there are no second-grade students.

Rules for tardiness

Parents of students at the Cohasset Jr. Sr. High School should be aware of the new tardiness to school policy (as outlined in the new student handbook).

A student is allowed five unexused tardy points (days) without penalty.

On the fifth tardy point, a warning will be issued.

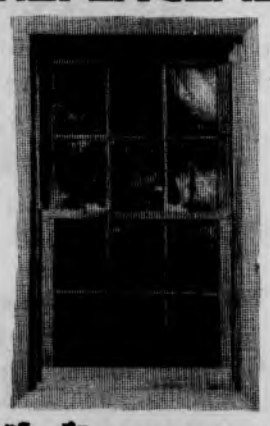
On the sixth tardy point (and subsequent points) the student will be assigned office detention.

Parents are urged to review the tardiness to school and class policy as outlined in the student handbook. All students received a handbook, but if you have not yet seen one, please ask your son/daughter for the copy.

Write all about it

Jack Stebe from Draper Laboratories in Cambridge gave a presentation Tuesday, Sept. 22 to the Deer Hill School Student Body. Stebe shared with the students his educational and career experiences leading to his present position at Draper Lab.

Students from Mr. Frank Deakin's 5th grade class were engaged in interviewing and reporting on Stebe and his presentation. The enthusiasm of these fifth grade reporters stems from a project initiated by Mr. Deakin to encourage the writing of community and world events.



Whenever a story, written and submitted by a student about events such as The Draper Lab presentation, is printed in The Mariner or other papers, that student earns a press pass.

This pass allows the student to leave the classroom to report on a happening around the school.

Published stories are not limited to a curriculum enrichment event. They may be about other independent guests or one's peers.

This incentive has spurred on the following members of Mr. Dekion's class to participate in the reporting: Maura Duffy, Grace Gardener, Scott Monausa and Jake Nohe. No doubt, many will be following this creative lead in search of the illustrious "press pass."

Vol. XIV, No.52 | Thursday, October 8, 1992 | 1-800-649-6661 | 50 cents

Cohasset's Mike Connors goes into the air over an opponent to head the ball forward toward the Scituate goal in the Skippers' 3-0 blanking of the Sailors last week. At left, is teammate Tom Brister. For more photos and high school sports news, please see pages 14 and 15.

Full-time firefighters scolded by selectmen

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset's veteran firefighters defied management of their department by interfering with training of the call force, selectmen say.

So the board took quick action Monday to backup the town's new fire chief by issuing a strong reprimand to the full-time firefighters for refusing to help train call firefighters — actions which forced the chief to seek outside training from the Plymouth County Fire and Rescue Association.

However, reacting to pressure from the Professional Firefighters of Massachusetts — which included a threat to disrupt the training activities — Plymouth County Training refused to conduct the training, selectmen said.

State union officials categorically deny both applying pressure and making threats.

Neither selectmen nor Chief John Nadeau would name names — except to say that several of the town's 24 full-time firefighters are involved.

Disc jockey is suspended one week

WBCN Disc Jockey Bradley Jay is back on the air.

Jay was suspended after his live show Monday, Sept. 28, during which he and other radio officials exploited four Cohasset cheerleaders. Jay was back on the air Monday, Oct. 5.

Station officials still refuse to comment.

Mariner calls were screened through an intern at the station.

Bradley's show "Sex Palace" featured cheerleaders from a North Shore town a week before the Cohasset cheerleaders appeared.

According to listeners, during the prior show featuring cheerleaders, Jay did not prod his guests into participating in vulgar cheers about a rival team. Excerpts of those cheers — which promoted the station and were not crude — were played during the following

Scientists differ on effects of MWRA harbor pipe

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner staff

They presented data and rendered expert opinions, but five scientists assembled Sept. 30 at Norwell High School gave no assurances that the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority's Deer Island outfall pipe will be a benign alternative to the state's pollution woes.

There is scientific uncertainty, said moderator Jay Kaufman, creator of the Boston Harbor-Massachusetts Bay Consortium.

"We have unknowns versus a public policy agenda and an engineering project that is moving forward," he said.

Panel members were invited by the South Shore Coalition and the Metropolitan Area Planning Council.

Each scientist offered brief insight into the possible effects of re-routing Boston Harbor sewage discharge through an outfall pipe 9.5 miles off Deer Island.

Two vie for interim moderator post

Selectmen are in a quandary over who to appoint as interim town moderator.

Two qualified candidates applied for the spot vacated by former town moderator William D. Weeks, who stepped down after 12 years.

The board put off making the appointment until next week after interviewing candidates George L. Marlette, who is chairman of the registrar of voters; and Myrna Putziger, who is chairman of the zoning board.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle suggested the board split the interim position, so that each candidate could preside over one town meeting so neither candidate would have an advantage in the annual town election.

The special town meeting is Nov. 16; and the annual town meeting is April.

Both candidates expressed confidence the voters would vote their own minds in April and said they preferred the board choose one of them to fill the vacancy on an interim basis, expressing confidence in the electorate.

Marlette said he would definitely run for the position

Legal bill ok'ed

Selectmen approved payment of $4,192.50 to Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson for professional services provided to the town for the month of September

Fund transfer approved

The wire department will get a transfer from the town's reserve fund of $716.93 to pay for repairs to the electronic control panels and main switching board to the controls on traffic lights at Ripley Road and Sohier Street.

Wire Dept. head, Stephen Wigmore, said there is no money budgeted for these controls. He said the parts are too expensive to stock. But added this is only the second major repair to the traffic lights in eight years.

Town warrant opens

Selectmen officially opened the warrant for the special town meeting Nov. 16. The warrant will stay open until the board's meeting Tuesday, Oct. 13.

The board accepted ten articles for the warrant Monday.

Fee is waived

Selectmen waived the fees for building permits for the World War II memorial to be constructed at Veteran's Memorial Park in the harbor.

(See page 3)

On behalf of the Weld-Cellucci administration, Secretary Mary Padula (center) awards a $30,000 municipal incentive grant to assist Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Hull, and Norwell in planning a regional fire service district at Cohasset Town Hall Tuesday. Pictured are (from left to right), Jim Murphy, town manager for Hull; Donald LeClair, Norwell selectman; state Sen. Robert Hedlund; Scituate Fire Chief James Breen; Secretary Padula; Hingham Fire Chief Richard Wehter; state Rep. REAL ESTATE UPDATE

Philip Murphy, CRS, GRI

BE WARY OF NET LISTING

QUESTION: I told my real estate agent that I wanted $120,000 for my house. He offered to sell it if he could keep anything OVER that amount as his commission. What do you think?

ANSWER: If an agent proposes to guarantee you a certain sum from the sale of your home in return for the chance to keep anything OVER that amount, you have been offered a "net listing." This arrangement is open to so much abuse that it is illegal in about half the states.

Any number of complications can arise. The AGENT'S interest are now paramount although the law requires that you, the client, must come first.

Cohasset's week

"I move we waive the fee because of the fact this is a memorial to veterans who fought for this great country of ours and this is on town property," said Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle.

Selectmen Chairman Jane O. Goedecke said waiving the fee for a project which is on town property is consistent with the board's policy.

The board has refused to waive building fees recently for the Cohasset Community Center for its new addition and the Cohasset Housing Authority for renovations to the Trettis House.

Austin L. Ahearn updated the board on the design of the memorial which was expanded by 18 inches to accommodate the names of veterans who were summer residents of the town.

Ahearn said plans are to have the memorial up by Memorial Day. The structure is sponsored by Cohasset Military Memorial, Inc., the non-profit organization whose mission is to build memorials to Cohasset men and women who have served in the armed forces during all of the nation's major wars.

Ahearn said 501 names of Cohasset veterans will be engraved in the granite.

"It should be a pretty good looking thing," he said.

Police are praised

The police association got high marks from selectmen for its resourcefulness in obtaining the new state-of-the art pistols at no cost to the town.

"It indicates a high level of professionalism in the department to take the initiative," Selectmen Chairman Jane O. Goedecke said.

The money to purchase the guns was raised through private donations. Police volunteered their time to train with the weapons, Laugelle said.

The department is the first in the country to obtain the Sig Sauer .40 semi-automatic pistols, which the Cohasset Mariner correctly reported in a front page story last week.

Goedecke said she wanted to clarify that Cohasset police were not the only department in the country to have semi-automatic weapons.

Laugelle said that Cohasset police are the first to have this particular semi-automatic which is new to the market.

Bill is clarified

Selectmen agreed to pay the $1,987.50 bill from Civil Designs Inc. for storm repair.

Last week the board tabled approval of payment until charges for the Gammons culvert were clarified. Selectmen had previously decided only to authorize $500 for engineering work at the site but the bill submitted was unclear.

The $600 on the bottom of the invoice was not for Gammons Road as thought but for engineering work at Forest Ave and Jerusalem Road, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

Health agent re-elected

Joseph Godzik, V.M.D., was re-elected president of the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association at its annual meeting.

Dr. Godzik, a veterinarian, is also a director of the board of health in Cohasset.

The Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, which is headquartered in Walpole, serves 32 cities and towns in the area. The goal of the association, "The Healthy Lung People," is to prevent and control lung disease.

Programs and activities are funded by contributions to Christmas Seals, wills and bequests, grants, memorial donations, and special events such as bike treks and aerobic demonstrations.

Full-time firefighters scolded by selectmen

"Their (full-time firefighters) attitudes and actions are unacceptable to us," said Selectmen Chairman Jane O. Goedecke. "The training will take place; our goals will be achieved.

"What we're doing reflects the will of the people at town meeting and at the ballot box."

Town meeting allocated additional funds to the fire department this year to provide training for the call force.

Fifteen individuals are currently interested in seven call firefighting positions. Plans are to increase the town's call force from the current 14 to 21 positions.

COUNTED ON

Career firefighters had been counted on to assist with the training, he said.

But lack of help from the full-time force, prompted the department to make arrangements with Plymouth County Training for assistance, Nadeau said.

But Plymouth County pulled out just four days before classes were due to start.

"They were threatened by the Professional Fire Fighters of Massachusetts, acting on behalf of the local (chapter), that classes would be disrupted," Nadeau said.

Local union president Thomas Hernan could not be reached for comment.

Capt. George Emanuel, president of Plymouth County Fire and Rescue Training Association, said the group did not receive threats from the state union.

"But as soon as we realized there was a dispute (in Cohasset) where people have drawn lines, we refused (to provide the training)," he said.

The training would have taken place in Cohasset, Emanuel explained.

He said he did not think the environment in town would be conducive to learning.

"We are a non-partisan organization, we do not allow ourselves to be drawn into disputes," he said.

The course which provides 64 hours of basic training prepares a call firefighter to work under the direct supervision of a full-time firefighter, Nadeau explains.

NOT UNIQUE

Encountering resistance to adding call firefighters to a department is not unique to Cohasset, state union officials say.

Job loss is the reason behind the resistance, according to Robert McCarthy, president of the Professional Fire Fighters of Massachusetts.

Although McCarthy said no threats or pressure came from the state office, he said the union is against the trend toward call fire departments.

"They (call firefighters) shouldn't be doing our work," he said. "When it comes to taking away paid jobs, we are very much concerned."

He said towns that are replacing their full-time firefighters with "paid volunteers" are not living up to "their duty of providing protection for the community.

"There's an ideological difference of opinion," he said. "Firefighters have been laid off in difficult times and others are nervous about losing their full-time jobs.

"How would you like it if someone came in and said they'd do your job for nothing, when they have another job?" McCarthy asked.

Although McCarthy said he was only "vaguely familiar" with Cohasset's fire department, he said "the new (Cohasset) chief is leaning toward a call fire department."

McCarthy sympathized with actions of Cohasset's full-timers.

"They are not going to train someone who will take their job away. It's a deep issue," he said.

Nadeau said call firefighters would not replace the full-timers but would augment the full-time force.

Goedecke reiterated Monday that the town has never said the full-time firefighters' jobs are in jeopardy.

"We have never stated that it is our policy to reduce the permanent force.

"The chief has reassured them; but they don't believe him," she said.

Nadeau said with the assistance of the Plymouth County Fire Chief's Association, he reached a compromise with Plymouth County Training which freed up a few slots for Cohasset call firefighters to receive basic training in an on-going class.

Call recruits are taking first aid and CPR "in-house" under the instruction of a veteran call firefighter, Nadeau said.

(For the full text of the selectmen's reprimand to the full-time firefighters, please see page 10).

week with an open invitation for cheerleaders from other towns to visit the station.

Although Cohasset police cannot take official action because WBCN is in Suffolk County, the department was appalled at Jay's tactics.

Police Sgt. Brian Noonan said there is no doubt the Cohasset girls, who were 15 and 16 years old, were induced into making the comments.

Noonan said he planned to run the tape by the district attorney's office just to see if any criminal charges, such as contributing to the delinquency of a minor, could be filed. Noonan said he thought civil action against the station was possible.

He said two of the girls' mothers came into the station following the incident. The mothers were distraught, he said.

Running late for the show, the mothers said they dropped the girls off and went to park, Noonan said. When the women arrived at the station, they weren't allowed in the studio.

Noonan said he talked with Supt. Stephen Hart and with Hull School officials.

Following several personal questions directed at the girls, Jay goaded the girls to repeat dirty cheers about the Hull football team.

Books for sale

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library holds its Annual Book Sale Oct. 23, 24 and 25.

Many books of all types are offered, fiction and non-fiction in hard cover and paper back. There are children's books and adult books as well. Prices are more than reasonable ranging from 50 cents to a dollar with a few exceptions.

Volunteers from the executive board and the board of trustees will staff the sale Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m.

The purpose of the sale is to raise funds for programs the Friends sponsor. The Sale takes place downstairs in the library. You won't want to miss the book bargains!

The Friends of the library hold their monthly meeting at the library Oct. 15 at 9 a.m.

Fall library hours

Fall hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are: Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m.; Monday and Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; closed Wednesday; Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Free passes available

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Woolf of Cohasset generously donated two complimentary passes to the Historic Deerfield Museum Houses in Deerfield where there are 12 handsome 18th and 19th century houses open to the public. Inside are wonderful tall clocks and high chests, silver tankards and bright embroideries, looking glasses and imported Chinese porcelains once used and enjoyed by residents of the Connecticut River Valley.

The passes are available at the library.

Cohasset's young authors

Books that were created last year by the third grade students at the Joseph Osgood School as part of their writing curriculum, can be found on the shelves of the Paul Pratt Library.

With the help of their teachers and parent volunteers, the children typed their completed stories on computers, and then added original illustrations.

The manuscripts were sent to the Publishing Center of Osgood where parent volunteers either bound them into spiral books, or cut them into hardcover "bare" books.

Town to re-bid Doane Street project

The town will put the Doane St. bridge repair project out to bid again.

Because of an irregularity in the low bid submitted by J. D'Amico Inc., selectmen decided to start over rather than risk a possible court injunction.

Gary Tashjian, an owners of Tasco Construction, which submitted the second lowest bid, said he would "go all the way with this" if the town awarded the bid to J. D'Amico because of the irregularity.

Selectmen decided they'd rather be safe than sorry.

"I have come very reluctantly to this conclusion because there is a non-trivial chance we could have a restraining order preventing us from moving forward," said Selectmen Chairman Jane O. Goedecke.

Selectmen rejected three of the four bids submitted because they were more than the amount of the grant for the job. The low bid was rejected because the bidder did not strictly adhere to the procedures when obtaining the contract proposal.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle was the sole board member to support awarding the job to the low bidder.

Register for SHARE

SHARE is a non-profit organization dedicated to community service and self-help, offering good food at great savings for those who participate.

Interested people can register for SHARE from 7 to 8 p.m., tonight (Oct. 8) at the Community Center on Main St.

SHARE participants pay $13 for the food and pledge two hours of volunteer service once a month. In return you receive 15-17 food items, good wholesome nutritious food purchased from growers and processors, with a retail value of $25-$35. SHARE has no eligibility or income requirements and is not connected in any way to any government program.

Scientists differ on effects of MWRA harbor pipe

The pipe, which will carry 500 million gallons of effluent per day, is to be completed in 1995. The plant will begin primary treatment of sewage from 43 communities in the MWRA district in 1996. Secondary treatment is expected to come on line in 1999.

The pipe will end 36.5 miles from Race Point in Provincetown and 16 miles from the northern tip of Stellwagen Bank, one of the Atlantic's richest fishing grounds.

Richard Signell, a United States Geographical Survey oceanographer, determined through drift buoys and computer-aided models that the outfall pipe will impact the South Shore and Cape Cod less than present Boston Harbor discharge.

Uncertain tidal currents at the pipe's mouth should dilute effluent discharge before sweeping out of the bay via natural channels off Race Point and to the north of Stellwagen Bank, he said.

Signell said strong currents pulse into Massachusetts Bay periodically from the Merrimack River and other fresh water sources located in the northern Gulf of Maine.

These pulses, together with the wind and the tides, create a counter-clockwise flow down the South Shore and around the inside of Cape Cod.

Some of an offshore pipe's effluent would encounter this pattern but the rest would flow through the channel north of Stellwagen Bank and into deeper waters, avoiding inner Cape Cod Bay altogether.

At the behest of Stop the Outfall Pipe, a citizens' group opposed to the MWRA project, John Christensen, a senior researcher at Oceanic Associates in Brunswick, Me., spent a year reviewing the possible impact of nitrogen nutrient loading in Massachusetts Bay.

A heavy volume of nitrogen discharge into the ocean is harmful to fish and shellfish because it excites plant growth which depletes the area of oxygen.

Christensen said Boston Harbor, with its shallow, sandy waters, scrubs out much of the nitrogen contained in effluent discharge or releases it into the atmosphere.

If the pipe is moved into deeper water, the nitrogen would become trapped in deeper, cold water stratifications where it would spur uncontrolled plant growth and possibly kill fish.

Already, he said, Stellwagen Bank is dangerously close to the state water quality oxygen depletion limits, especially in the fall when currents are slight and the water has little opportunity to mix.

This phenomenon could spread to the South Shore and Cape Cod when the pipe begins operation, Christensen concluded.

Anne Giblin, an associate scientist at the Marine Biological Laboratory in Woods Hole, disputed Christensen's findings. Presently, she said, almost all of Boston Harbor's nitrogen is carried into Massachusetts Harbor and has had no adverse effects on local marine life.

Furthermore, the Gulf of Maine deposits more than 75 percent of the total nitrogen in the bay, "dwarfing other sources." The outfall pipe, with its added level of treatment, will constitute a different source of nitrogen but not a greater one, Giblin said.

The most uncertain factor, according to biologist Donald Anderson, is the effect the new pipe location will have on the growth of harmful algae.

For several years, large masses of seaweed have washed up on North Shore beaches where they rot and create an aesthetic hazard, said Anderson, a senior scientist with the Biology Department at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution.

Whether or not a new source of nutrients in the path of south flowing currents could feed this and other algal "blooms" is not known.

For 20 years, "red tide", a poisonous algal growth that accumulates in shellfish, has periodically swept into Massachusetts Bay from the north Atlantic.

A new source of nutrients could send this algae drifting further south, affecting areas on the South Shore and Cape Cod which have never before closed shellfish beds because of red tide.

"There is a risk in the stimulation of those species," Anderson said. "We're trying to balance the uncertainty of science versus the real situation that is facing us."

Provincetown's Center for Coastal Studies senior scientist Charles "Stormy" Mayo expressed concern that endangered whale species, especially the right whale, would suffer if the plankton in their feeding grounds are forced to compete with other life forms.

He charged that the government has been a failure at handling environmentally sensitive issues.

"We suggest that the level of our knowledge has been exceedingly poor, and therein lies the central problem," he said.

Mayo also called for close monitoring and more impact studies.

The panel dismissed upgrading the plant to a higher grade of treatment as too expensive and said moving the pipe even further out to sea would not realize added environmental benefits.

"Making a smokestack higher does not make things cleaner in the global environment," Mayo cautioned.

The panel was split three-to-two against postponing the plant opening until secondary treatment is available in 1999.

But even Giblin, who seemed to have the fewest concerns with the MWRA plan, admitted to the limits of scientific research.

"The whole project to a certain extent is a tradeoff between improvements we can get in Boston Harbor and the effects we will have in Massachusetts Bay," she said.

"But given the economics, I would start the pipe in 1995."

Two vie for interim moderator post

at the annual town election even if not appointed as interim moderator. Faced with the same scenario, Putziger said she probably would run.

In Cohasset, the moderator is elected for a three-year term.

The candidates differed on the issue of televising town meeting live. Marlette endorsed it; while Putziger said in her view televising the meeting live discouraged attendance.

In his introductory comments, Marlette said he was "disappointed, and disillusioned" in the manner in which Weeks left the position. He said Weeks tried to discourage him "from going after the position."

Marlette said the position appeared to be an "entitlement for Mrs. Putziger."

Reached by telephone, Weeks declined to give the details of his conversation with Marlette.

But he did say that Putziger spoke with him before she applied for the post; and Marlette called him after he had submitted an application.

"I made it plain to Mr. Marlette that he or anyone else could apply," Weeks said. "I did not in any sense say anyone else is entitled to the position."

Weeks said it is up to selectmen to decide. But he added that splitting the interim position by asking each candidate to take a meeting is "totally unworkable and impractical and would work havoc with the troika appointment system."

The troika consists of the moderator, town counsel and selectmen chairman and is charged with making certain town appointments.

Weeks reiterated that he resigned as town moderator before his term had expired for business and personal reasons.

Health agent re-elected

Joseph Godzik, V.M.D., was re-elected president of the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association at its annual meeting.

Dr. Godzik, a veterinarian, is also a director of the board of health in Cohasset.

The Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, which is headquartered in Walpole, serves 32 cities and towns in the area. The goal of the association, "The Healthy Lung People," is to prevent and control lung disease.

Programs and activities are funded by contributions to Christmas Seals, wills and bequests, grants, memorial donations, and special events such as bike treks and aerobic demonstrations.

❑ Had a nice chat with Lizzie Kuhn last week, and her family is sure full of news! First of all, last year Liz went to Peru to see her AFS "son" get married. Jim wasn't able to make the trip, but we'll bet he got every detail from Lizzie upon her return...she was so excited and happy about the whole thing!

Laura Kuhn, their eldest daughter, graduated from Tufts University last May, and is happily working; Krista transferred to Boston University and is majoring in communications...she'll do well, we're sure of that!

And Lizzie is really busy herself. She is the Chapter President of the AFS. She reports that the current AFS student is Gisley Lima from Brazil.

Gisley is doing well and loves Cohasset, as well as learning the English language rapidly. She is living with the Waal family.

Carlos Salas-Lind, the exchange teacher from Chile who taught here last year, has been in touch and misses his "buddies" in Cohasset. The AFS program and CHS are anxious to have another teacher (male or female) this year, but it doesn't look like they will be able to as they only have a month to find a host family and nothing has happened so far.

If you are interested in hosting a teacher, why not give Lizzie a call at 383-0580.

It certainly would be a great experience for you, as well as our students, and for the teacher!

❑ We extend best wishes to Dutchie Hernan this week. A few weeks ago, 150 of Dutchie's friends held a retirement bash for him.

Although he and his wife Barbara moved to Florida 15 years ago, they have decided that they will be back in Cohasset "part-time." They love it and their family is here too.

Make a bet that it will be the winter months spent down south, right? In any case, best of luck to a great guy. Hope your retirement is a long, happy and healthy one.

❑ Speaking of retirement, what about Bill Enos? He was one of four scouts to retire from the Red Sox organization and recently they had quite a surprise for him. Lou Gorman presented him with a jewel box, and when he opened it up there was a key to a brand new Mercury Marquis!

We think that he had better share that car with his wife Grace, after all, she knows as much baseball as Bill does (you know the old saying, behind every good man there is a good woman). Best wishes to you both, enjoy yourselves.

❑ Congratulations go to Brian Sasso, Jonah Berger and Jeff Littlehale. They were recently elected captains of the freshman football team. Good luck guys!

❑ Fore!! Laurajean McDonald, a golfer at Hatherly

AFS exchange student, Gisley Lima from Brazil, is staying with the Waal family. Welcome to Cohasset, Gisley!

Country Club who hails from Cohasset, took fifth place in the annual Boston Globe Tournament of Club Champions Thursday, Sept. 17, at the Shaker Hills Golf Club in Harvard. Laurajean finished the day with a 79. The annual Tournament of Women's Club Champions is sponsored by the Boston Globe in conjunction with the WGAM. The 18-hole match play event is open to the champions of the WGAM's member clubs throughout Mass.

❑ Betty Ripley is "flying high" these days...she has a brand new granddaughter, Sara Elizabeth Whitecage. Sara was born Sept. 1 in St. Petersburg, Florida. You can bet that Betty will be down there ASAP to visit both granddaughters, daughter Gay and her husband...better fill us in upon your return!

❑ We hope that Steven Maynard, son of Kim and Steven Maynard, is up and around real soon after his recent surgery. The good news is that Steven is home, and that's half of the process...he'll be hopping in the fall leaves in no time!

❑ Emily Reardon is sure making a name for herself in the college tennis world! Emily is a student at Fairfield University and she took the #1 singles match against Katy Seward, 6-1, 7-5, of Marist College.

Something tells me we will be hearing more about Emily and her tennis prowess, so stay tuned...meanwhile, good luck Emily.

❑ Everyone is saying prayers for Esther Marsh. We all hope that they will be heard.

❑ If you saw lots of long faces around town earlier this week, it was undoubtedly due to the death of Les Reed. He had so many friends in Cohasset, and he lived on Jerusalem Road for years before moving to Hingham. A wonderful, generous, nice, kind man, who was a super father and husband, he will be greatly missed by his friends. Our deepest sympathies go to his family.

❑ Finally, here's hoping that Sue Fone has her best birthday yet! We won't tell the age (she doesn't look it anyway), we'll just tell you that she is the best, we love her and we wish her at least a hundred more!

Have a great day Oct. 8, Sue.

❑ That's all for this week, be sure to call with your news.

Exploitation

It should surprise no one that the king of sleaze — disc jockey Bradley Jay — is back on the air after just a week's suspension.

After all the high standards and values are not something that much of today's media pays attention to.

And it shouldn't be surprising that the radio station WBCN has issued no apology. In fact the station has made no comment at all on the matter of its exploitation of four Cohasset teenagers.

No official will even come to the telephone. Tuesday, the station had a very young-sounding intern screening its calls on the matter.

The real shame here is that four girls were taken advantage of by adults whose main priority in life is getting people to tune in regardless of the cost.

The cheerleaders were undoubtedly excited about the chance to be on the radio. It was reported they were practicing cheers all the way down in the car.

But once inside the locked studio — locked to keep the girls' mothers on the outside — the girls were goaded into repeating vulgar cheers by the adults in the room who were in a position of power.

At the very least this is a betrayal of trust and will certainly have an affect on the girls for some time to come.

Cohasset's cheerleaders were victims of a side of an industry so riddled with smut that it can no longer tell the difference between right and wrong, nor cares to.

Humiliating children seems to be part of Bradley Jay's act.

We are outraged that a slap on the wrist was all he received. But we are not helpless.

We suggest that Cohasset residents complain in writing to the Federal Communications Commission, Mass Media Bureau, Programming Division, 1919 M St. NW, Washington D.C. 20554. FCC officials say a copy of the complaint should be sent to WBCN.

The plug should have been pulled on Mr. Jay permanently —maybe the FCC will listen to reason.

Call for change

Sooner rather than later, change is coming to Cohasset's fire department.

This is evidenced by the municipal incentive grant awarded by the state this week to start the process of seriously studying fire service regionalization among five area towns including Cohasset.

And despite resistance from some full-timers, the fire chief and selectmen are going ahead with plans to augment the department with more call firefighters as a long-term cost saving measure.

Changing the culture — the way the fire department operates from being essentially a full-time department to a combination of full-timers and call firefighters won't be easy.

But without the cooperation of the full-time firefighting force, it's not only going to be difficult but unpleasant for everyone.

Let's hope that the full-time firefighters refusing to participate in helping to the train call firefighters will change their attitude.

We understand that no one wants to part of something that could eliminate their own job.

But no one knows what the future may hold.

Maybe a combination of highly trained full-timers augmented by call firefighters will work without the wholesale loss of current firefighters' jobs.

Surely the input and participation of all Cohasset's full-time firefighters would facilitate that eventuality.

Selectmen reprimand F/T firefighters

letters

(Editor's note: Selectmen sent the following letter to the town's full-time firefighters.)
October 5, 1992
To the Full-time Firefighters of the Town of Cohasset:

The Board of Selectmen wishes to convey to the full-time firefighters of the Town of Cohasset its dismay at the attitudes and actions taken recently by the firefighters regarding call force training.

It was at the direct order of the Selectmen that Chief Nadeau instituted recruitment of additional call firefighters and developed a training program for the call force. Monies were placed in the Fire budget for that express purpose. Voters at the annual Town Meeting last April were made aware that enhancement of the call force was a major factor in the Fire Department's budget increase and voiced no objection. The Town budget passed easily and the resulting override also passed with a healthy margin. It is the will of the citizens of this Town that Cohasset have a larger, well-trained call force to supplement the full-time staff. The Board of Selectmen and the Chief are implementing that policy.

It is our understanding that the firefighters in Cohasset have refused to conduct training for the call force. This refusal forced Chief Nadeau to seek outside trainers from Plymouth County Fire Training.

Now we have learned that Plymouth County Training has refused to conduct the training in Cohasset because of pressure applied by the Professional Firefighters of Massachusetts.

This Board will not tolerate interference with the management of the department. The citizens will not tolerate their employees thwarting the will of the electorate in setting the direction of the Town. Recruitment and training of the call force will go forward. It is in the best interest of the firefighters to recognize that this Town wants effective firefighting at an affordable cost. Anything less is unacceptable.

Public recognizes potential of Gov't Island

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cohasset Lightkeeper's Corporation board of directors, I wish to thank everyone who made Sunday's Groundbreaking Ceremony, at the Minot Ledge Lightkeeper's Residence, such a resounding success. The weather was great. The music terrific. The tours informative. The atmosphere relaxed.

It's apparent that the public recognizes the potential of Government Island as a premier historical-recreational park.

Thanks also goes to each and everyone of our CLC Board members and their spouses who worked so hard to make the day a success.

Local EMTs 'give their all'

To the Editor:

On Sept. 19 I was in severe pain requiring hospitalization. My doctor contacted Norfolk Bristol Ambulance to transport me to the hospital. Upon their arrival, ambulance technicians Debbie Hite and Lisa Savage assured me that they would do everything they could to relieve my severe pain.

Due to the fact that I could not move and I would have to be carried from the second floor, it was evident that more assistance would be necessary. The Cohasset Fire Department was contacted and firemen Eric Wenzlow and Paul McGaffigan arrived to assist in this painful ordeal.

These four professionals put their minds together and cautiously carried me through a hallway and down a flight of stairs. This was not an easy task maneuvering me with such care.

I am ever so thankful for the assistance given to me on this day. It's quite comforting to know that there are professionals such as Debbie Hite, Lisa Savage, Eric Wenzlow and Paul McGaffigan who give their all when caring for the public at large.

Alcohol bills are 'effectively dead'

(Editor's note: The following letter was sent to Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon).*
Dear Mr. Doyon:

Thank you for writing to my office regarding the Board's support for House 2651, an act to protect consumers of alcoholic beverages, and House 2652, an act requiring health warnings on alcohol advertisements.

I am saddened to inform you that these bills are effectively dead for this legislative session.

Several months ago, the Joint Committee on Government Regulations placed House 2651 and House 2652 into a study order.

No further action will be taken until these bills are introduced next year. I am sorry to be the bearer of bad tidings.

Thank you once again for writing to my office with your concerns, as I am always happy to assist the board in any of its endeavors. Please do not hesitate to contact me in the future.

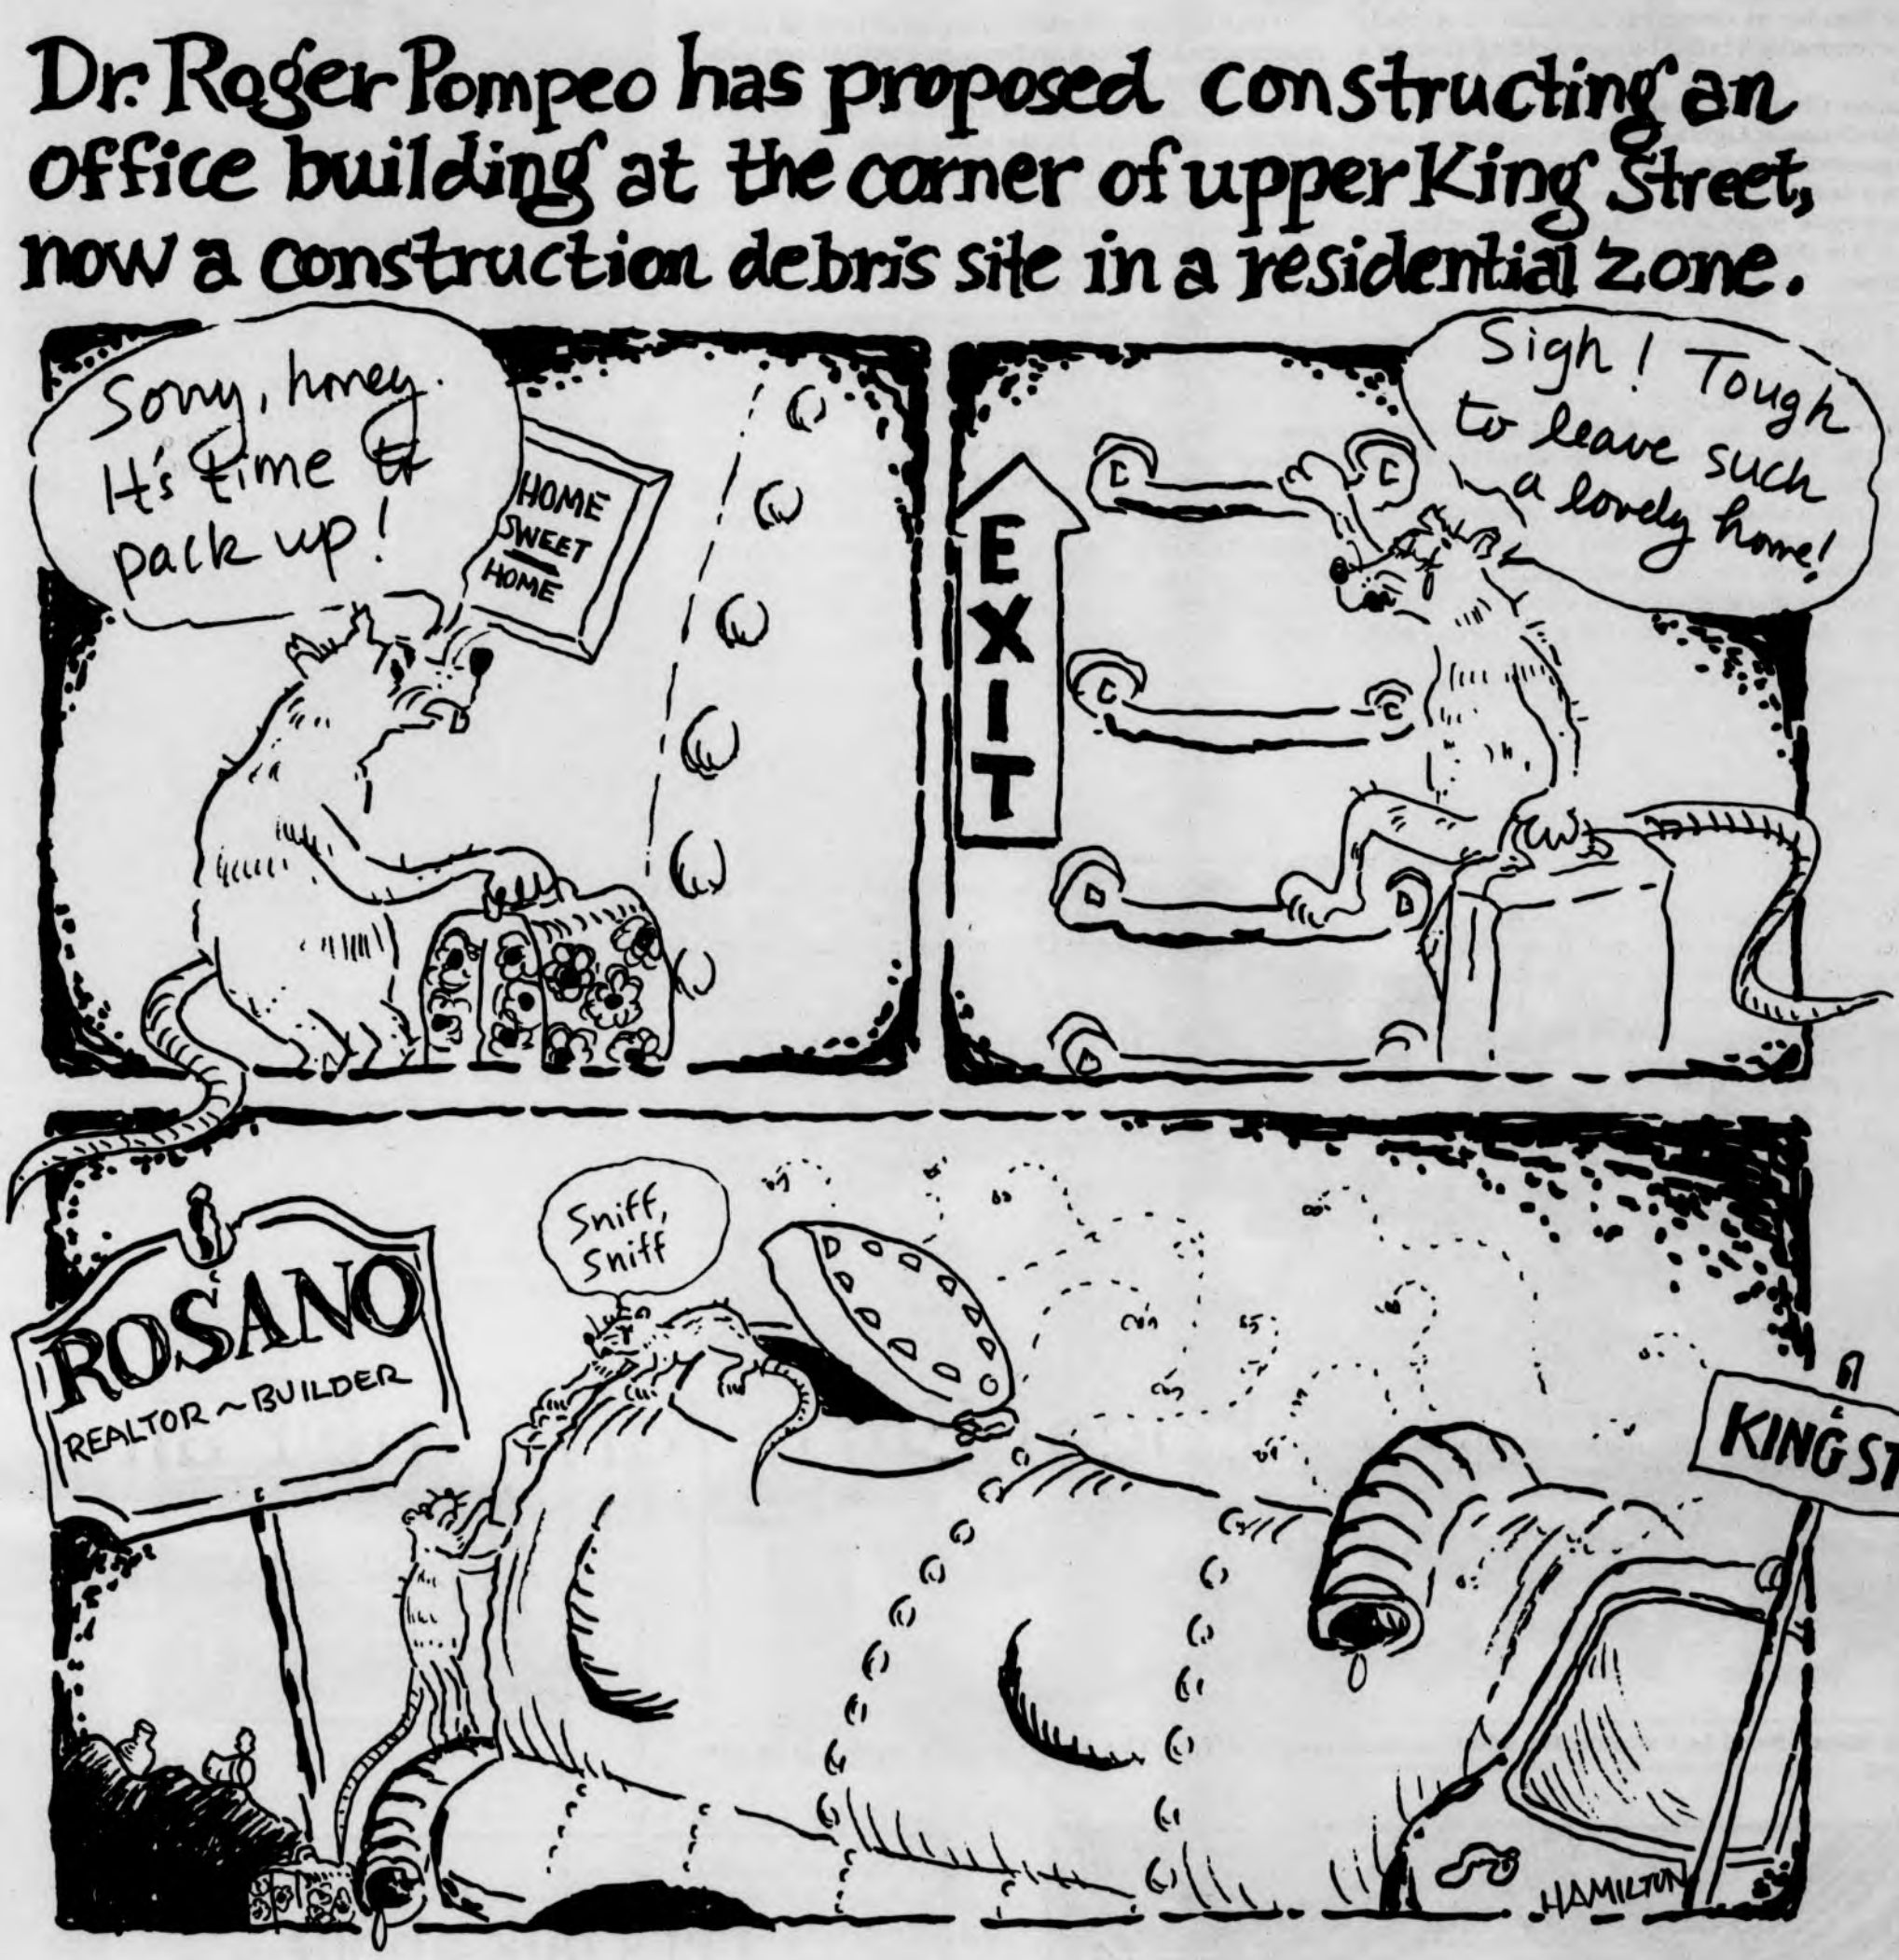
Christmas in September a success

To the Editor:

As the new executive director of the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, I would like to thank all those who helped make our 14th annual "Christmas in September" auction a success.



Many dedicated volunteers helped by organizing, getting items donated, and working at the auction, held Sept. 21 at the South Shore Plaza.

Thanks to the many generous stores, restaurants, and individuals who donated items and gift certificates, we were able to raise much-needed funds to continue providing programs to promote lung health in the community. Many generous shoppers took the time to participate in the fun and bid on some of the great items we offered.

Also thanks to the South Shore Plaza for allowing us to, again, hold our auction in its facility.

Martha Waldron
Executive Director
Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS	Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) 722-1646 Room 416B	Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) 722-2800 ext.7057 Room 134
THE HOUSE AND SENATE. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' and local representatives' votes on four roll calls from the week of Sept. 28 to Oct. 2, 1992.
BAIL (H 5772) Senate 35-1, House 128-0, gave final approval and sent to Gov. Weld the bill allowing judges to consider the danger posed by a defendant while setting bail. Current law allows judges only to consider the likelihood that a person will flee. The bill also adds "whether a person has violated a domestic restraining order" to a long list on which the judge can base a decision. Another provision prohibits a defendant accused of violating a restraining order from being released by a court clerk or bail commissioner at a police station and allows the defendant to be held until a judge can review the circumstances. Supporters said these tougher standards will protect the public and will prevent further violence and murders in domestic violence cases. Opponents said bail should not be used to incarcerate a defendant prior to a trial on the merits. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it).	N	Y
ABANDONED BUILDINGS (H 6010) — Senate 35-2, House 132-19, overrode Gov. Weld's veto of a $5 million grant program to help cities and towns demolish abandoned buildings. Override supporters said these burned out buildings pose health and safety problems and become havens for drug dealers, gangs and violence. Opponents said there has been no assessment of the number of buildings, the cost or what happens to the empty lots. They said the program will cost more than $5 million and argued the state cannot afford it. (A "Yea" vote is for the $5 million. A "Nay" vote is against it).	N	Y
HOMELESS (H 5800) — Senate 31-0, House 149-1, overrode Governor Weld's veto reduction of $1.8 million (from $34.4 million to $32.6 million) for a program of assistance to people who are homeless or are in danger of becoming homeless. Override supporters said homelessness is increasing during this recession and argued the money is necessary to help hundreds of people. Opponents said the state simply cannot afford the $1.8 million. (A "Yea" vote is for the $1.8 million. A "Nay" vote is against it).	Y	Y

Lightkeeper's project: victory for volunteer spirit!

About 300 residents attended the groundbreaking ceremony Sunday at Government Island to officially herald the renovations to the 140-year-old lightkeeper's residence.

Selectmen Chairman Jane O. Goedecke said the work of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation, a non-profit organization, which is the force behind the project, is a testament to volunteerism.

"When people want something and are willing to work for it, it is always more successful than if imposed by government," she said.

CLC President Joseph McElroy also praised the volunteer effort and the town for making the project possible.

"There was really no other option considering the town's finances to save the building and make it available to the public," he said. "The support has been overwhelming."

The food tent was donated by Polly Logan and set up by the Cohasset High football team.

David Wadsworth, senior curator with the Cohasset Historical Society, conducted tours around the island.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray gave the day high marks.

"I was born in Cohasset and played here all my life, climbing Beacon Rock and swinging off the birch trees," she said. "I'm very excited about this."

The CLC obtained the donated services of the Boston Architectural Center for the initial plans; the Braintree Alternative Center for the demolition work; and South Shore Vocational Technical School for the renovations and construction aspect.

The group still needs to raise about $70,000 to complete the $200,000 project. When complete the structure will contain a community room available for functions and meetings and two apartments.

A nice touch to the ceremony Sunday was David Crossland who sang, among others, his original composition "Minot's Light".

The South Shore Band also performed.

Food for the event was donated by: Arthur Roebuck of British Relief; Chef Paul of South Shore Catering; French Memories Bakery; Kimball's, the Red Lion Inn, Victoria II, Log 'n Line, Papa Gino's, Sea 'n Cheese, Cohasset Pizza, Dunkin' Donuts, The Bread Shop, Village Gourmet, and Strawberry Parfait.

Cohasset's Polly Logan and Burt Pratt share a shovel during the groundbreaking ceremony for the renovations of the Minot lightkeeper's residence.

The South Shore Band is a wonderful addition to a beautiful day. The Minot Light's replica is in the background.
